You Can Go Home Again

Thousands of alumni returned for Homecoming 2000, which included the crowning of Homecoming Queen Emily Collins, a senior speech communication major from Louisville, and ECU's first Homecoming King, John Leachman, a senior mathematics major from Campbellsville. Among the alumni who returned was Barry Laux, '70, Marietta, Ga.

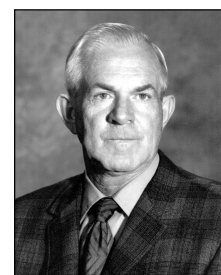

Building Named for Moberly

Dedication ceremonies Saturday, Nov. 11 for the Harry Moberly Building at ECU honored a former Eastern student athlete, founding member of the Colonel Club and active supporter of Eastern athletics.

The building had been known as the Classroom and Conditioning Building since it opened in 1999 to meet the training needs of ECU's intercollegiate athletics program and the exercise and sports science academic program.

The ceremony included remarks by President Bob Kustra, head football coach Roy Kidd, and Moberly's son, State Rep. Harry Moberly Jr.

Moberly

Moberly, a quarterback for the Eastern football team from 1931 to 1934, has continued to support Eastern sports. His visionary leadership was instrumental in establishing, building and strengthening the Colonel Club, ECU's intercollegiate athletics booster organization.

His involvement with ECU athletics increased after he retired in 1979 after 42 years with the U.S. Postal Service, the last 18 as Richmond Postmaster.

"Mr. Moberly is a long-time supporter of ECU and our intercollegiate athletics program," said ECU President Bob Kustra. "It is only fitting that we recognize his many contributions to the University by naming this facility in his honor."

A World War II Navy veteran, Moberly also has been active in community affairs, chairing the Richmond Board of Adjustments for many years, serving as a Scoutmaster, president of the American Cancer Society and a member of the Society of Boonesborough.

He married the former Ruth Adams in 1949 and both their children, Harry Moberly Jr. and Susan Adams Moberly, graduated from ECU.

The 40,000-square-foot facility houses the Raymond E. Giltner Conditioning Center on the first floor, along with a 6,000-square-foot physical activity area/laboratory and the main training facility for ECU's 16 men's and women's intercollegiate athletic teams. The second floor features areas designed for Eastern's exercise and sports science program, the largest such academic program in Kentucky. Included are an aerobic conditioning area, three large classrooms, physiology and computer laboratories and faculty offices.

An in-ground hydrotherapy pool with physical therapy equipment, three above-ground therapeutic pools and X-ray and examination rooms also are part of the state-of-the-art facility.

EKU Partner in UnidentifiedRemains.net

For 30 years, the unidentified remains of the "Tent Girl" in Scott County mystified law enforcement officials.

Then, after the case was publicized for only six months on a publicly accessible web site, the Kentucky State Medical Examiner was able to make a positive identification.

Now, thanks to a partnership between ECU and the state Medical Examiner's Office, the public and law enforcement have another tool in the often frustrating and painstaking task of victim identification.

A new and more comprehensive public web site, UnidentifiedRemains.net, features information on unidentified human remains found across the Commonwealth. The site was developed at the request of the state Medical Examiner's Office and is maintained by staff in the Justice and Safety Center (JSC) located in ECU's College of Justice & Safety. Almost 12,500 "hits" were logged by the site during its first week of operation.

"The outstanding expertise and cooperation of the staff and students at ECU made this project possible," state Forensic Anthropologist Dr. Emily Craig said. "We are all fortunate to have them show such a willingness to get involved and volunteer their time and talents. Without their help, this whole project would have been impossible."

More than 40 case files of unidentified victims dating back to 1975 remain open across the Commonwealth, according to Craig. Kentucky is one of the few states that keep current statistics and open case files on each case of unidentified remains.

"The new web site will not only be an advantage to Kentuckians," Craig said, "it should prove to be an advantage to people from all around the globe. In Kentucky, we have victims of violent crime who are from many different states. We at the Medical Examiner's Office think this will be a giant step toward solving some of our most difficult cases."

While media coverage is sometimes helpful, Craig said, "the recurrent problem with this sort of publicity is that is so localized. Information on unidentified victims in Kentucky rarely reaches across the state. We can have a case of unidentified remains in Lexington that is not covered at all in Louisville, and the same goes for cases found in other parts of the state. With today's so-called transient society, unidentified victims in Kentucky can be from anywhere. Hopefully, this web site will disseminate critical information to those people who have friends or family members who may be missing and presumed dead."

Emily Mullins, a graduate assistant in the Justice and Safety Center who authored the project proposal, said that Internet technology makes it possible to develop and effectively coordinate investigations involving unidentified human remains. "Our new web site presents timely and accurate information that includes the time, location and circumstances surrounding the discovery of the remains and a detailed description of the victim."

"If this web site results in one case being solved, it will all be worthwhile," said Ryan Baggett, JSC technology specialist, who designed the site and will continue to work closely with Craig on updates.

The site includes a reply form for those who can offer information that might lead to identification. The information, which can be posted anonymously, is forwarded to respective law enforcement investigators.

Links to similar victim identification sites around the nation also are included on the site.

"If this web site results in one case being solved, it will all be worthwhile."

Announcements

New VP Johnston on the Job

EKU's new vice president for financial affairs and treasurer is on the job. James K. (Ken) Johnston assumed his new duties today (Nov. 13).

Johnston, vice chancellor for financial and administrative services at Auburn University Montgomery since 1995, is responsible for the Division of Accounting, Billings and Collections, Budget, Human Resources and Purchasing, and will work with the ECU Foundation.

He joined Auburn University in 1976 as a senior auditor. In 1985, he was named director of the Office of Bursar and Special Funds Accounting. He moved to Auburn Montgomery in 1990 to become vice chancellor for finance, responsible for senior level oversight of financial activities of the institution. His duties were expanded five years later to include the Computer Center, Center for Government, Center for Demographic Studies and Athletics.

Johnston

Johnston earned a bachelor's degree in business administration in 1973 and a master's degree in higher education administration in 1990, both from Auburn. He received a Georgia CPA certificate in 1975.

Dean Van Orsdel Honored

Lee Van Orsdel, dean of libraries, has received a Distinguished Alumni Award from the Library School Association of the School of Library and Information Studies in the College of Communication and Information Sciences at the University of Alabama.

Van Orsdel

Van Orsdel, who earned her master's of library science degree from the University of Alabama, joined ECU in 1999 after serving eight years in a similar position at the University of Montevallo in Alabama and 14 years as head of reader services at Samford University.

Van Orsdel also earned a bachelor's degree in history and French from Samford and a master's degree from Florida State University.

Advent Calendars Available

The Foreign Language Club is now selling chocolate-filled German Advent Calendars for $3 each. To reserve your calendar(s), call 622-2996.

SAS Computing Class Offered

Anyone who conducts research involving data analysis might be interested in learning about the SAS® computer software package, a very powerful computer package that will do almost any kind of statistical analysis. You can learn the basics of the SAS system by taking STA 575/775, Statistical Methods Using SAS, this spring semester. For more information, contact Dr. Onecia Gibson, Department of Mathematics and Statistics, 622-2109 or gibson@eagle.eku.edu.

EKU-Sponsored Habitat House

Nearly $3,000 has been collected for the ECU-sponsored Habitat for Humanity build. Before hammers can swing, $40,000 from faculty, staff and students needs to be raised. Just $40 (given individually or as a group) will pay for one square foot of the house, and contributors will receive a certificate from the Public Relations Student Society of America, which is sponsoring the fund-raising drive. But all contributions — large and small — are needed in order for the project to move forward. Send your tax-deductible donation to the Office of University Advancement, Coates Box 703, with "Habitat for Humanity" noted on the check. Call

Dr. Dave Woolverton at 622-1886 for information on how you or your group can help raise funds.

Free Personal Trainers

Students in Dr. Jack Rutherford's Adult Wellness course will be performing a free health and fitness assessment in the Burke Wellness Center (Weaver Building) 3:30-4:45 p.m. Dec. 7. Individuals may choose to be screened in any or all of the following: body fat screening, flexibility test, blood pressure check, Sub-max Vo2 test (cardiovascular fitness) and a strength test. Information and advice also will be available on how to improve health and fitness.

Students from Karen Camarata's Health Education course will offer cholesterol screening tests for $5. Sign up for the health assessment "on the spot." Dress appropriately and set aside at least 25 minutes to complete the assessment. For more information, call John Jewell at 622-1248.

PRINTED ON RECYCLED PAPER

Author Kimmel to Speak on Feminism and Education

Internationally recognized sociologist and author Michael S. Kimmel will speak at ECU Tuesday, Nov. 14.

Kimmel will speak on "Different Planets, Same School: Men and Women on Campus in the New Millennium" in a public lecture in the Adams Room of the Wallace Building. The event is sponsored by the Women's Studies Program as part of their series, "How Has Feminism Changed Our Lives?"

The author is widely known for his work on men and masculinity. His books on the subject include "Changing Men: New Directions in Research on Men and Masculinity," "Men Confront Pornography," "Against the Tide: Pro-Feminist Men in the United States, 1776-1990," and "Manhood in America: A Cultural History."

The sociology professor at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, most recently the author of "The Gendered Society," also is a well-known educator concerning gender issues. His innovative course, Sociology of Masculinity, is one of the few courses nationwide that examines men's lives from a pro-feminist perspective, and has been featured in The Wall Street Journal, The Boston Globe, Newsweek and People and on several television talk shows.

He has served as a contributing editor and columnist on male-female relationships for Psychology Today and was an expert witness for the U.S. Department of Justice in highly publicized lawsuits brought against the VMI and Citadel.

EKU Theatre Presents 'Diary of Anne Frank'

EKU Theatre will present "The Diary of Anne Frank" Nov. 15-18.

The curtain will rise at 8 p.m. nightly in Gifford Theatre in the Campbell Building.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens and are on sale at the Gifford Box Office. Reservations also may be made by calling the Box Office at 859-622-1323 between noon and 4 p.m. weekdays.

Newly-discovered writings from the diary of Anne Frank and survivor accounts are interwoven to create this contemporary story of the families who lived in the "Secret Annex" to escape Nazi tyranny. "It's a wonderful history lesson, and a great play," said Jim Moreton, coordinator of the ECU Theatre Program.

The play, by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett, is newly adapted by Wendy Kesselman.

59 Honors Program Students Attend National Conference

Fifty-nine EKU Honors Program made presentations at the National Collegiate Honors Council's 35th annual conference in Washington, D.C. Oct. 18-22.

The Eastern students, accompanied by 14 faculty mentors, were involved in 15 panel presentations. Both the number of students and the number of presentations easily led all other participating schools. The theme for the conference was "Capital Ideas."

The panel discussions included "Gender Roles and Communications in Kate Chopin's 'The Awakening,'" "A Capital Idea: Selling Jane Austen," "Cubist Art Forms and the Fourth Dimension," "Gender, Spirituality and Pagan Influence in the Evolution of Christianity,"

"Human Rights: The Idea and the Practice," "Women, Capital and the Lack Thereof," "National Consumerism: Exploitation or the American Dream," "American Injustice: Capital Crimes and Misdemeanors," "Muslims in America/American Muslims," "Human Capital: Views on the Economics of Slavery," and "Fanaticism in Sports," among others.

In addition, the students enjoyed several cultural diversions, including a performance of the Tony Award-winning musical "The Dead," a tour of the Holocaust Museum and major monuments, a gala at the National Museum of American History and a show by the Capitol Steps.

Eastern's extensive participation in the conference was made possible in part by funds from the Paul S. McBrayer Endowed Scholars Program and a gift from Jane and Charles Boyer, Prospect.

College of Education Addresses Teacher Shortage

EKU's College of Education will mark American Education Week, Nov. 12-18, by encouraging more young people to consider teaching careers.

The College will facilitate two planning sessions to discuss the possibility of Future Educators of America (FEA) organizations in high schools throughout central and southeastern Kentucky are scheduled. One meeting will be held at Madison Southern High School in Berea Tuesday, Nov. 14, another at the Corbin Independent Board of Education offices Thursday, Nov. 16.

"EKU is committed to building collaborative relationships with school districts in order to help ensure that there is an adequate supply of high-quality teachers for Kentucky's schools," said EKU College of Education Dean Dr. Mark Wasicsko. "We believe it is our shared responsibility to recruit quality teacher candidates for our classrooms. This can only happen if we work together to recruit, educate and support high-quality teacher candidates."

Also, members of FEA chapters in Jefferson County high schools will visit the Richmond campus, particularly College of Education facilities, on Wednesday, Nov. 15.

A proclamation will be signed by Madison County Judge Executive Kent Clark proclaiming the week as American Education Week in Madison County, and Richmond Mayor Ann Durham will interview University, local and state officials about educational matters on her local access cable program.

The theme for American Education Week this year is "Children-Schools-Parents: Helping Students Achieve." The celebration is sponsored by the National Education Association.

Dr. Carol Gabbard is coordinating the week's activities for EKU's College of Education.

Not Just for Kids

NO GHOSTS OR GOBLINS HERE – Two groups of EKU employees made Halloween a little brighter for the campus community. On Tuesday, Oct. 31, employees from the Mail Services and Printing Services offices, above, joined forces to travel down the "Yellow Brick Road" as characters from The Wizard of Oz. And staff members from Human Resources and Payroll were trapped by the holiday spirit.

Eastern Family Portrait

Name: Ron Hopkins

Job Description:

As an associate professor in the Fire and Safety Engineering Technology Program, I have three main responsibilities. First and foremost, I teach. Second, I conduct research and try to improve the capabilities of the fire protection and safety community. Third is service to the fire protection and safety communities.

Education:

B.S. (1973) in Industrial Education and M.S. (1976) in Vocational and Technical Education, both at Murray State University. Also completed an additional 28 hours in fire science courses at Paducah Community College and ECU.

University Committees:

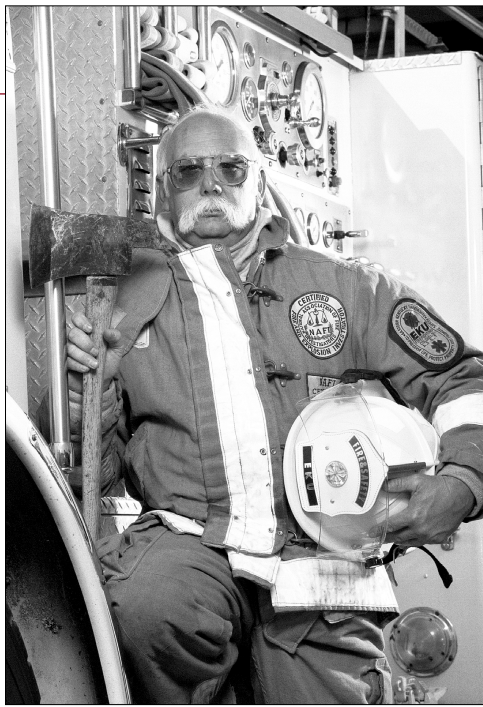

Chair of the Safety and Health Committee.

Family:

My wife, Sharon, teaches in the Madison County public schools. My oldest son, Stephen, is a graduate of Western Kentucky University and is a store manager at an Office Depot in Atlanta, Ga.; middle son, Charles, works at Electrolux in Richmond; and my youngest son, David, works for MCI WorldCom in Winchester.

If you weren't doing this job, what would you like to be doing?

Pushing up daisies. This is what I do — a vocation as well as an avocation. I'm very much involved in the fire protection and safety community. I always wanted to teach, I just couldn't withstand the public school system. I consider myself a master at the craft of teaching, as well as a master in the subject matter. If a change in behavior is going to occur, a teacher causes that change. We can't make them learn, but we can motivate them and we can provide them with the information in an interesting and challenging manner and they will learn.

What did you do before coming to ECU?

I was a career firefighter in Murray, Ky.

What are your interests and hobbies?

I collect fire-protection related antiques and books. I do woodworking. And I teach fire-related classes outside the university. I'm also a gourmet cook — a little shot of wine for the food, a little shot of wine for me.

What is your favorite Web site?

E-Bay. That's where I find many of my collectibles. There have been 18 fire-protection handbooks written and I have numbers 4, 5 and 7-18. They've got some good information in the old textbooks. Tells us where we came from. Also, it identifies that we haven't learned very much.

What is your favorite vacation spot?

The northern coast of California. It's relaxing, the food is good and there are generally some decent wines there.

What book would you recommend to others?

Actually, there are four. "The Death of Common Sense," written by an attorney from Kentucky — Philip K. Howard. It describes how law is suffocating America. Because of the aspects of the law, we don't do things that are appropriate for people as a whole. For example, they were going to put portable, self-cleaning toilets in New York City. But because they couldn't make them all handicap accessible, they didn't put any of them out and the existing problem continues.

The next is "Fire in America," by Paul Lyons. It's a history book on the major fires. By reviewing the major conflagrations, we can boil down our major fire problems into five items. And we included the corrected factor for all of those five items in the Ashland Fire Safety Building. In fact, we've also done it on campus by putting in alarm and sprinkler systems.

The last two are on the forefront of management theory. One is "The Discipline of Market Leaders," by Michael Treacy and Fred Wiersma. It gives some good management technique. The book basically says you have to take care of your customers. The other is "The Fifth Discipline: The Art and Practice of The Learning Organization," by Peter M. Senge, which outlines the way we should be dealing with our customers.

What was your most embarrassing moment?

Preparing for my first class at Eastern. It was a night class. I prepared for 10 or 12 hours and my material lasted for about 15-30 minutes. I was absolutely mortified.

Can you recall the proudest moment of your life?

There are several, but two that stick out are when I was installed as the chairman of the Fire Department Instructors Conference and as chairman of the Board of Directors of the International Society of Fire Service Instructors.

What is something people might not know about you?

I have my own business — TRACE Fire Protection and Safety Consultants Ltd. Bill Abney and I run the corporation. We do consulting, develop instructional materials, present educational programs, do fire protection and safety-related research, and perform expert witness in both the fire protection and safety fields.
