Slip slidin' away

Saturday's rainstorm stopped the football game for about 15 minutes and made the Hill a muddy mess. Several university students took turns reaching the bottom the best way they could. Campus security eventually put an end to the human landslide.

18 legal age for entry

Age limits under scrutiny

By Terri Martin
Editor

Richmond may soon join a long list of Kentucky cities which require people to be over 18 before they may enter a bar.

In Richmond, people 18 or older may enter a bar, but only those 21 or older may be served alcoholic beverages.

According to Leslie Cole, Alcohol Beverage Control supervisor for the Eastern district of the state, a recent attorney general ruling says people who are under 21 may enter a place which serves alcohol if the bar provides a form of live entertainment, such as dancing or a band.

Most city officials, however, choose to set bar-entry age at 21 and only a few Kentucky areas allow people to enter a bar at age 18.

"In certain select cities, persons are able to enter when they are under 21," Cole said. These cities include Richmond, Bowling Green and Lebanon.

Governing officials in each particular city may pass an ordinance to increase the bar-entry age if they feel 18 is too young.

Robert Mudd, owner of Phone 3 Lounge, last month raised the bar-entry age at his First Street bar from 18 to 19 but later returned the age requirement to the 18 mark.

"We were hoping to eliminate the younger crowd," said Mudd. "We mainly wanted to keep the high school crowd out."

Mudd added he returned the entry age to 18 after about 2 and one-half weeks.

"I figured if I can police the place with 19-year-olds in it, I can police it with 18-year-olds," he said.

Mudd added few minors visit Phone 3. "The percentage of minors, people age 18 to 20, in here is a lot lower than other bars in Richmond," he said.

Mudd attributed this to the bar's cover charge which pays the bands that often entertain at Phone 3.

"We're a little more expensive," he said. "We've got the cover charge and a lot of kids can't afford the bucks. They just want cheap drinks."

Mudd added if Richmond City Commission chose to raise the age for all city bars, some owners could not afford to stay open.

"It wouldn't hurt us too much because we attract an older crowd, but it would hurt some," he said.

"There's a few bars in town that have to have minors to stay open."

Some commissioners feel raising the entry age will be addressed by the commission in the near future.

Commissioner Fred L. Ballou said the commission has not yet addressed the issue of downtown drinking and minors, but has left it up to the Madison County Grand Jury.

"The members of the grand jury have taken it upon themselves to deal with that, but we haven't gotten involved in it and haven't discussed it," Ballou said.

During the past three weeks members of the grand jury have visited downtown bars and issued subpoenas to people who were suspected of or had knowledge of underage drinking.

A subpoena is a citation that requires a person to testify in court. Ballou added Richmond's bar-entry age is different than most Kentucky cities.

"It's different in Richmond than anywhere else, so I'm sure it probably will come up in the near future."

James Todd, who also serves as a city commissioner, said the issue will be addressed when it becomes more serious.

"If it becomes critical, I think we should take action," Todd said. "Now it's a borderline question."

Todd said he really hadn't given the issue much thought and had mixed feelings about it. "Personally, I think if a person is old enough to be drafted to fight for his country, then he should be old enough to have anything that is within his country," he said.

Sgt. Dennis Hacker of the Richmond City Police Department said officers were mainly concerned with state law and were indifferent towards Richmond bars raising the bar-entry age.

"If bars want to raise their age, that's their business," he said. "What we're going by is what state laws allow."

Wynn Walker, assistant director of the university's Division of Public Safety, said changing the bar-entry age downtown would have little effect on on-campus drinking.

"It would not make a great difference," he said. "It would just make it more difficult to obtain alcohol and bring it on campus."

Senate offers parking plan for campus

By Pam Logue
News editor

Student senate hopes to soon pass a bill that will alleviate campus parking and safety problems.

Dan Brenyo, chairman of the Local, State and National Issues Committee of the Student Senate, presented a plan to the senate last week that would reallocate parking spaces on campus.

Brenyo, who has been working on the parking problem for about nine months, said he hoped the plan would alleviate the parking problems that have been faced by students this year.

Brenyo was asked by last year's Student Association president Ken Kearns to look into the parking problem.

Brenyo stressed this was only in the planning stage and was not yet a formal proposal. He said the plan made sense as far as safety was concerned and it would be cheaper than other ideas.

Brenyo's plan involves making all 390 spaces in the Lancaster Parking Lot into residential spaces; 270 of those spaces are now used by commuters.

This would also remedy the problem of student commuters crossing from the Lancaster Lot to campus. Presently there is no crosswalk or light despite frequent accidents at the site.

The plan relocates these commuters to the Mattox, O'Donnell and Combs lots and the residents who are parking in those lots now will park in either the Alumni Coliseum or Lancaster lots.

The northwest side of Alumni Coliseum Parking Lot would be used for residential parking under the plan.

Brenyo also said part of the plan would involve moving band practice to the Model School softball field to give commuters access to the 230 spaces available in the Begley Lot. The band practices four days a week in the Begley lot.

Brenyo said moving the band required getting approval of Bruce Bonar, principal of Model Laboratory School, and also the intramural director, Dr. Wayne Jennings.

Brenyo said there would be enough parking space for the band and also storage space for instruments.

"It's a touchy subject," Brenyo said. "We're trying to be as neutral and fair as we can. We are trying to find the best way with the resources we have available."

Brenyo said there would be a bill written in the next two weeks that would provide for a committee to investigate the parking situation further and take action.

This committee would consist of Brenyo, Thomas Lindquist, director of the Division of Public Safety, George Duncan, assistant director for parking and transportation services, and possibly a student representative.

Brenyo said there were many factors involved in trying to reallocate parking spaces and that just a few spaces could make a big difference.

"You've got to look at the whole picture. There is no easy solution," he said.

Brenyo said it was important for students to get involved. "The only way this committee will work is if students voice their complaints. We will talk to them and consider (their complaints)."

Brenyo said part of the reason there is not enough parking space on campus is that when dorms were built the university could not afford to build parking lots as well. He also said they were not needed as much then because fewer students had cars.

Brenyo said this plan was only one of many that have been studied. He said many alternatives would be looked at and when a proposal was presented, it would be a mixture of several plans.

Brenyo said he had received positive feedback from public safety as well as from the university's administration.

"The problem has existed for many years," he said. "It's nothing new to the university. The administration is willing to listen."

"It is time for students to realize this is the time to voice themselves through student government. We're here to benefit students."

Parking fees net school $78,000

By Beth Jewitt
Staff writer

Last year the university's Division of Public Safety issued 27,440 parking citations amounting to $133,188 in fines.

Of that amount, $78,000 was collected.

Tom Lindquist, director of the Division of Public Safety, said only about 60 percent of the tickets issued are paid.

Dr. Doug Whitlock, executive assistant to university president H. Hanly Funderburk, attributes a large part of the unpaid citations to visitors and people who are using their cars for university business.

He said the university does try to collect fines from non-students.

"You have two groups of non-students; people who work for the university and those who do not," he said. "The same level effort is used to collect from employees as students."

Whitlock said when citations are issued, the officer doesn't know whether the car is an unregistered employee, student or visitor. Consequently, many visitors are ticketed.

Whitlock added the university tries to track down unpaid non-student citations. "We run through the Department of Motor Vehicles (to identify the vehicle owner) then run a check to see if the person is a student or employee," he said.

Whitlock said some measures are taken to encourage both faculty and students to pay their fines.

"Faculty and staff can't register their cars for the following semester if there are outstanding tickets," he said.

In the past, students were denied class registration until their fines were paid. Now the parking ticket is added to the Bill for Outstanding Fees.

"Before, people would just wait until the end of the semester to pay," Lindquist said. "Now that it's billed, the collected amount increased."

The Bill for Outstanding Fees is mailed to any student who has overdue fines owed to the university.

Two public safety officers work full-time issuing parking citations on campus. Lindquist said issuing tickets is a hard time-consuming task.

"It takes an officer more than two hours to look at every car and write citations at the same time in Alumni Coliseum."

"The officer checks for two things: the first, whether there is a permit, and second, whether it's a current permit," he said.

Lindquist said officers have been concentrating on ticketing in the Alumni Coliseum lot this semester. He added the number of citations has decreased tremendously.

"We were getting 150 to 160 citations (for unregistered vehicles) every two hours," he said. "Now it has dropped to 13 unregistered. People keep walking in and registering their cars."

Lindquist added that fines are paid to Billings and Collections with the money from citations going into the university's general account.

Jim Clark, university budget director, said the money from parking tickets is not specifically earmarked for any certain area.

"This year, '86-'87, we budgeted $75,000 into the general budget for parking assessments," Clark said. "Last year $73,190 was actually collected."

This semester 3,485 citations worth $19,485 have been issued as of Sept. 15. So far the university has collected $5,648, according to Lindquist's records.

Lindquist said the number of issued citations this semester seems low because all of them have not been recorded.

"We didn't issue many tickets at first and not all tickets have been loaded (into a computer) since Sept. 15, so it's a little low," he said.

Persons receiving parking tickets are allotted 15 days to pay their fines. These fines range from $2 to $10 depending on the violation.

'Maniac' tests religious ties

As ironic as it seems, traveling ministers can have a positive effect on college campuses. In recent weeks, Brother Jed and Sister Cindy have made several trips to this campus and others within the state. The scene is a familiar one; Jed is screaming, calling everyone fornicators, and a crowd gathers around the fountain to stare and mock his teachings. What one might fail to notice in this scene is that Jed is actually making advancements in religion. It may seem hard to believe, with his ranting of whoremongers, disco queens and Hell, but Jed does make a positive impact. His actions get people angry - so angry that they seek to prove him wrong by quoting scriptures and taking a stand. They defend their religious views and attempt to put the "maniac" in his place. Perhaps, that's what Jed has in mind. We all see him as a lunatic who gives religion a bad name, but we must admit he has found the perfect method to entice students to think about their religious views and defend their opinions. Granted, some people feel Jed has no place on a college campus and that he only serves to harass students as they pass by the Powell Building. But with freedom of speech guaranteed as a constitutional right, who is to say what Jed can speak of and what he can't? The people who feel so strongly when a book is banned from a Kentucky high school are the same ones who say, "Get that guy off campus. He's crazy." In book bans and traveling preachers, the issue is the same: freedom of expression. Because Jed can speak of whatever he wants, it is up to students to decide whether they want to regard his words as trash, take them as gospel, or see Jed and Cindy merely as an afternoon's entertainment. A college campus is a testing ground for all sorts of things and religious commitments are among the questioned items. Regardless of the methods Jed and other traveling ministers may use, whether it be raving about whoremongers or bearing an 8 foot cross as a visual aid, one thing is clear: They do get the attention of students and they do inspire others to check their own scriptures and challenge them on religious issues. Perhaps that's what they had in mind all along.

Raising entry age ends bar hassles

By Chip Miller
 How the times have changed. There used to be a period in time when one could go down to the Richmond bars for a few drinks and a few laughs without the hassle or worry of a pair of cuffs being slapped around their wrists. Not any longer. It seems that a recent crime wave has swept Richmond and the entire seeds of this catastrophe lie in underage-student drinking. Richmond police patrol the bars from the inside out. They circle the First Street area like boats patrolling Alcatraz. Has the crime statistics jumped that dramatically? Is the crime wave directly connected with underage drinking? Granted, the law states that a person must be 21 years old to purchase alcohol in Kentucky and it is legal for anyone 18 or older to enter a bar if permitted by that establishment. In Richmond, a problem seems to be increasing each semester. The students want to go down and drink and the police make their presence more noticeable. Someone must give sooner or later. Thus, I believe the bar-entry age should be made a mandatory 21 for the bars in Richmond. Why? To stop this crusade the police have on underage drinking.

Chip Miller is a senior English and journalism major. The bars may not serve minors, but what stops 21-year-olds from purchasing it for them? Nothing. And how many students actually own fake IDs? Quite a number. In Lexington, where one must be 21 to enter, the problem of bar entry exists as mostly just an inconvenience, a small barrier. The police don't patrol all of downtown Lexington as harshly as Richmond police cruise the First Street area either. And what does this pressure do for ones that are legally allowed to drink? It makes going downtown a hassle, more like a price to pay for a privilege already granted them. Going down to one's favorite bar in Richmond has changed; while walking the streets you feel watched, afraid to even swagger jokingly. I understand that the bars want to accompany minors by permitting them in to dance and to socialize, and this is a great idea. But times have changed and a downtown Thursday night isn't what it used to be. The Richmond bars should utilize a 21 bar-entry age like the Lexington bars do. It is simpler, convenient and avoids what is bound to happen here sooner or later with the passing of a Richmond city ordinance.

Drivers encouraged to donate

I had given the idea of renewing my driver's license a lot of thought; granted, there's not that much to think about. But there is one special consideration which should be given some thought. On the back of your license is a form to complete to donate bodily organs upon the time of your death. With the new advances in modern medicine, organ transplants have become amazingly successful. I don't spend a lot of time worrying about dying, but I think all of us should consider being an organ donor. I look at it like this: If I were to die, say in a car accident, I would want to do whatever possible to help someone else be given a second chance. What good will these things do you when you're gone? Absolutely none! There are thousands of people out in our world who are suffering from disease or injury to vital organs.

Notions

Life is a precious thing; it is taken almost as quickly as it is given. That statement has plagued my mind quite a bit lately. I have a very close friend who's preparing for the death of his four-month-old nephew. The baby is in desperate need of a new liver. The liver wasn't fully formed and complications arose just hours after his birth. The doctors say he has just 48 hours to live. Even if a donor became available, he's lost too much strength to survive another surgery. Jaundice has set in and the baby's skin tone resembles an olive green, the illness will eventually take the baby's life. My friend said his nephew was listed behind 130 other babies waiting for a donor liver. Before Jeremy's first operation, his little belly was swelled like a small basketball; he replaced it with a scar running from the bottom to the top of his rib cage. Surgery attempts to repair his liver were futile. His only hope of survival was an organ donor. It's a plain and simple fact: He didn't get it in time and a four-month-old baby will die. We leave this world with most of what we're brought into it with, the purpose is for life, for survival. Please take a moment to ponder the thought of Jeremy and how you could make a difference. It's too late for him, but it's not for someone else.

In other words

To the editor:
 Officers inconsiderate
 I am writing this letter to inform you of the "efficiency" of the public safety department. At 1 a.m. Monday, Sept. 22, I received a phone call. It was a male voice informing me that I had to move my car which was parked between Case Hall and Burnam Hall because some work was going to be done on the tree that is in the middle of the parking lot. I was going to ignore the call since I was not positive that it was a valid call. However, five minutes later the phone rang again and the same voice asked for my roommate, who was not home. I decided to move my car, so I found a friend to go with me. I drove around campus for 20 minutes and the only place I found to park was Alumni Coliseum in the back. I think this situation was handled very poorly. Not only am I upset about being awakened at 1 a.m., but I am furious that the campus police would suggest that a female move her car and have to walk across campus at 1:00 in the morning. I have been told that the campus is doing all that they can to protect females, but the behavior of the Public Safety department on Monday, Sept. 22, was not in compliance with that promise. When I questioned an officer as to why they waited until 1 a.m. to call the owners of the cars, he informed me that it was to be done on an earlier shift, but they got too busy to get it done. I think that was a pretty sorry excuse. Because of this overlooked duty, I had to find another parking space - which is almost impossible. Parking on campus is inadequate for the amount of students who have cars. Can the university either create more parking or restrict the amount of cars? If freshmen were prohibited to have cars and/or if a new lot was created then the parking problems might be fewer. But the way the parking situation is now, it is impossible for students, especially females, to find spots close to their dorms. The only time that this is feasible is on the weekends. On Wednesday, Sept. 24, I received an apology from the officer who was on duty on the night of Sept. 21. I accepted his apology, however, I do not hold him responsible. He should not have been blamed for the overlooked responsibility of another shift. I have also been informed that the Public Safety department knew on Thursday, Sept. 18, that work was to be done on the tree. I think the Public Safety department could have informed owners sooner than they did. I hope that you will concern yourself with the behavior of the campus police. I have observed some questionable events on this campus; however, this event is most inconsiderate. Kathy J. Herrin

 Colonels earn praise
 I would like to thank Coach Jim Ward, his assistant coaches and several players from Eastern's baseball team. They put on a Little League Clinic Saturday morning for youngsters ages 9-15. The coaches and players worked with the young players on batting, pitching, catching, infield and outfield. The staff put fourth an effort to help each youngster in any way possible. The staff showed a lot of drills in running through some drills and helping those who had problems with the drills. The clinic ended with a homerun derby by the staff. Also all of the participants were given tickets to Eastern's football game against Middle Tennessee that afternoon. Thank you again for a job well done. Stephen Miller

Guidelines for letters to the editor

The Eastern Progress encourages its readers to write a letter to the editor on any topic. Letters submitted for publication should be addressed to the newspaper and must contain the author's address and telephone number. Letters must include the author's signature. Carbon copies, photocopies and letters with illegible signatures will not be accepted. Unsigned letters will not be accepted. The Eastern Progress routinely condenses letters before publication; however, grammar and punctuation will not be changed in a letter. The Eastern Progress uses its own judgment to determine if a letter is libelous or in poor taste and reserves the right to reject any letters.

Letters should be typed and double spaced. They should also be no longer than 250 words (about one and one half pages.) The Eastern Progress also gives readers an opportunity to express more detailed opinions in a column called "Your turn." These columns should be in the form of an editorial. Those interested in writing a "Your turn" should contact the editor before submitting an article. Letters should be mailed or brought to The Eastern Progress, 117 Donovan Annex, Eastern Kentucky University, 40475. The deadline for submitting a letter for a specific issue is noon on Monday prior to Thursday's publication. Letters will be used in accordance with available space.

Concrete canopies will be replaced

By Denise Keenan
Staff writer

Replacement of Martin Hall's concrete canopies is expected to start by next spring, according to Chad Middleton, director of the university's Physical Plant.

Renovations will include the removal and replacement of concrete canopies which are presently underneath 212 rooms of the residence hall.

Middleton estimated the project would cost about $300,000, although bids have not gone out yet. "A lot hinges on the bond sales of the state. I am not sure when bids will go out but the renovations will probably be done before next spring," he said.

According to Nancy Ward, administrative counselor for the residence hall, Martin's canopies are crumbling and causing increased safety risks to students.

"Since I have been here I have seen an increasing amount of problems with the concrete canopies crumbling," Ward said.

Ward said on one particular occasion a piece of a concrete actually went through a third floor window after it crumbled off the fourth floor awning above.

"They scare me," Ward said. "I would like to think people won't step out onto them (the canopies), but I saw a girl go out on the ledge to retrieve a toothbrush. Had it been me, I would have knocked it out onto the lawn and gone down to get it."

Ward said when the renovations were originally planned, replacement of the boiler was mentioned as a possible project, but Middleton cast doubt on the possibility.

"The boiler projects set for campus to replace or repair boilers will be for boilers in need of replacement or repair. I doubt that Martin will be included in that project because a boiler was put in three or four years ago," Middleton said.

Although residence halls are sometimes closed in order for renovation work to be done, Middleton said Martin will remain open since the work will be done outside and won't interfere with residence hall life.

Staff handbook gets updating

By Amy Caudill
Staff writer

The university's Faculty Staff Handbook, last published in 1980, is being updated with new policies, according to Dr. Martha Grise, an associate professor of English and chairperson of Faculty Senate.

Grise said the handbook is being updated primarily because many of the policies covered in the book have changed since 1980.

Grise added that university President Dr. H. Hanly Funderburk has requested the handbook be updated every two years.

The handbook, which contains descriptions of policies on topics such as promotion and tenure, sabbatical leaves, outside employment, academic freedom and parking, is important as a reference material for faculty members, Grise said.

For example, the promotion and tenure policy is being changed to include more faculty involvement with university administrators. Also, the terminal sabbatical, which is full pay without work for the last semester before retirement, is being eliminated.

Besides these changes, some new policies concerning selection and retention of department chairs and evaluation of non-tenured faculty will be added to the handbook.

"There's just a wealth of information in it," she said. "It helps new faculty understand the administrative structure of the university."

Along with listing the policies of the university, the handbook gives a brief description of responsibilities which accompany each administrative title, such as dean of each college and the chairman of each academic department.

The Faculty Staff Handbook Committee, which will revise the handbook, is made up of seven administrators and faculty members who were placed on the committee because of their positions.

Committee members include: Dr. Russell Enzie, dean of the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences; Dr. Bonnie Gray, faculty regent; Giles Black, university attorney; Dr. Tom Myers, vice president for Student Affairs; Earl Baldwin, vice president for business affairs; Dr. Doug Whitlock, executive assistant to the president; and Grise.

According to Grise, each committee member will take a section of the handbook and suggest ways to make it more useful.

The advice and criticism of university faculty members will contribute to the revision process.

"A couple of weeks ago I sent out a memo asking faculty members to comment on the handbook and I've received a number of responses," Grise said. "Some faculty are sending ideas about how some things in the handbook could be clearer or fuller. Some people would like us to add new sections."

The handbook is free and distributed to all university faculty members.

"A good faculty/staff handbook contributes to good faculty morale," Grise said. "If faculty knows what the policies are, they feel more confident and secure."

Police beat

The following reports have been filed with the university's Division of Public Safety.

Sept. 20:
Perry D. Cooper, Commonwealth Hall, reported that someone had cut the convertible top of his vehicle and stolen two door speakers. The value of the top was $200, but the value of the speakers was unknown.

Sherris Hattinger, desk worker in Walters Hall, reported smoke coming from a car parked in front of Walters. The Richmond Fire Department determined there was steam coming from the radiator of the car.

Jerotta Hill, O'Donnell Hall, reported the sounding of the fire alarm in O'Donnell. The Richmond Fire Department was called but no smoke or fire was found. The alarm was caused by an apparent malfunction in the system.

Melinda Ison, Burnam Hall, reported the theft of her purse from the women's dressing room in Gifford Theatre. The value of the purse was $45.

John E. Nix, Richmond, was arrested and charged with alcohol intoxication.

Christopher Pope, Commonwealth Hall, was arrested and charged with alcohol intoxication and littering.

Sept. 21:
Ricky King, Richmond, was arrested and charged with driving under the influence.

Sept. 22:
Bryan Katchay, O'Donnell Hall dorm director, reported that the telephone wire had been cut from the lobby telephone in O'Donnell Hall.

Chad Middleton, director of Physical Plant, reported that someone had cut a hole through a chainlink fence in the physical plant parking lot and stolen a boat motor belonging to the biology department. The motor was valued at $3,000.

Cynthia Smiley, Walters Hall, reported the theft of her backpack and textbooks from the book drop at the university bookstore. Total value of the items was $81.80.

Pat Terry, Mattox Hall, reported a gas leak on the second floor of Mattox. It was determined that the cause of the gas fumes originated from the exhaust of an emergency diesel generator.

Sept. 24:
Anne Beasing, Burnam Hall, reported the theft of a sweater from the laundry room of Burnam Hall. The sweater was valued at $30.

Robert Browning, Versailles, reported that someone had stolen a volt meter from room 400 of the Fitzpatrick Building. The volt meter was valued at $100.

Theresa Clemens, McGregor Hall, reported the theft of several items of clothing from the laundry room of McGregor Hall. The items were valued at $70.

Kathryn Glass, Case Hall, reported the sounding of the fire alarm in Case. No smoke was found in the building.

Tom Underwood, Brewer Building, reported the small of something burning in Gifford Theatre. It was determined that a light fixture was placed on a rubber mat on the catwalk above the theater and the heat from the light had melted the rubber.

Sept. 24:
Jerry Cook, Memorial Science Building, reported that someone had entered his office and taken three books. The books were valued at $150.

Kathryn Glass, Case Hall, reported the fire alarm sounding in Case Hall. Investigation revealed that a smoke detector had been activated on the third floor, but no smoke or fire was found.

Teacher arrested on campus

By Pam Logue
News editor

Charles Helmuth, professor of art at the university was arrested Sept. 6 and charged with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

According to Thomas Lindquist, director of the university's Division of Public Safety, Helmuth was arrested after campus safety officer Todd Rice investigated a complaint of a loud party at Vicker's Village. Police arrived at Vicker's Village located off the Eastern By-Pass between the Carter Building and Keene Hall, and arrested Helmuth at 12:13 a.m.

Lindquist said Helmuth's address was listed as 910 Vicker's Village, but he was not sure if the arrest occurred at his residence. He said the arrest did occur in a grassy area somewhere in Vicker's Village.

Lindquist would give no other information concerning the circumstances surrounding Helmuth's arrest, but he did say the arrest was not alcohol-related. Frank Close, 444

W. Sixth St., Lexington, and Jeffery Haines, 1095 W. Main St., Richmond were also arrested and charged with disorderly conduct.

Helmuth was taken to the Madison County Jail by campus safety officers, and according to pre-trial release officers at the jail, he was later released on his own recognizance.

Helmuth's case was scheduled to go to trial in Madison County District Court Sept. 22, but the case was given a continuance.

A pre-trial conference has been scheduled for Oct. 7.

Lindquist said both the offenses Helmuth was charged with were misdemeanors. He said disorderly conduct is a Class B misdemeanor that carries a maximum of 90 days in jail and a $250 fine.

Lindquist said resisting arrest was a Class A misdemeanor which carries a maximum of 12 months in jail and a fine of $500.

Rape seminars start in dorms

By Denise Keenan
Staff writer

The university's Division of Public Safety is working to educate students about the trauma of rape.

"Statistics show that the majority of the rapes are date acquaintance rapes and the majority of the rapes reported are stranger rapes," said Wynn Walker, assistant director of patrol services.

Rape awareness seminars are planned for residents of Martin Hall at 8:30 p.m. on Oct. 7 and for the Keene Hall staff at 8:30 p.m. on Oct. 15.

"The problem with date acquaintance rape is that they don't realize they're the victim of a crime. Males don't understand how to act in a dating situation. They have a false impression of how females should be treated," Walker said.

Walker also said the male does not really perceive that he has broken the law just because a woman says no. "They don't think they (women) mean it," Walker said. "Once she says no, it's considered a felony."

Statistics show one in three women will experience the trauma of rape or sexual assault. "Unfortunately, the victim has the same trauma as the victim of a stranger rape," Walker said.

Walker cited several reasons why rape cases are hard to prosecute.

"It is one person's word against another and usually there are no physical signs but mental. Alcohol is usually involved along with voluntary petting and necking. The jury understands that he didn't believe her (when she said no) and it is difficult to get a conviction."

According to Sgt. David Schickram, who works with public safety rape awareness programs, a jury has the same attitude as society in general. "The jury has the same attitude as society. If the girl is not beaten, it's not a rape," he said.

Both Walker and Schickram stressed the importance of training an officer to be sensitive towards the trauma experienced by a rape victim.

Walker said there are three approaches in helping a rape victim: seeing to their physical well-being and safe treatment; seeing to their mental well-being by making them aware of services available to victims; and prosecuting the case.

Prosecution of the case is not focused on immediately, but Walker stresses that the officer does not forget it. "Cops are people. They have the same stereotypes and we must train them not to have the same false stereotypes," he said.

Schickram said public safety tries to make students more able to deal with rape-related trauma by offering training classes for resident assistants. "We try to hit them all (residence halls), teach them basic things to do and to tell them of the victim's immediate needs," he said.

Claudia Kirby, administrative counselor at Clay Hall, is involved in rape prevention programs and teaches an RA class as well as seminars open to all students.

"The RA classes teach the individual how to deal with a rape victim and the emotional signs of a victim," Kirby said.

The awareness programs will also sponsor seminars which encourage communications between couples.

"Guys and girls will get together and have conversations - communicate about what they expect out of a relationship," she said. "This can prevent rapes by teaching girls to say no and mean no."

Kirby also outlined the effects society can have on a rape victim.

"The hardest thing for a victim to handle is that society doesn't believe that it has happened. The victim feels they have done something to deserve it," she said.

Visits recruit results

By Mike Morris
Staff writer

The university's admissions office uses a variety of methods to recruit the nine to 10,000 applicants it receives each year, according to Director of Admissions James L. Grigsby.

The university's main methods of recruiting students include visits to school systems, open house programs and using lists purchased from testing companies.

Off all the ways used to recruit students, Grigsby said he feels personal contact is most successful.

Grigsby said the university belongs to the Kentucky Association of College Admissions Counselors, a group which organizes visits to school systems.

"We send representatives to visit school systems throughout Kentucky to recruit students," he said. "Sometimes we set up a booth at the place we visit or we may speak to groups of students."

Grigsby said the university holds open house meetings in Louisville and Northern Kentucky. "Those areas are big markets for us," he said.

"We reach 15,000 to 17,000 students in Kentucky and Southwestern Ohio from these lists," he said. "It's a good tool for us to reach students."

Grigsby said his office tries to encourage prospective students to visit the campus and take part in the EKV Spotlight Program, an open house program held on campus.

During the visit, the student and his family are invited to look over campus and its facilities, visit the different academic colleges and attend a home football game. Grigsby said the program draws about 1,000 people to campus.

The admissions office also sends information and admission packets to students who inquire about the university.

Grigsby said another way of recruiting students, word of mouth, is often more successful than the methods his office uses.

"Word of mouth is sometimes more effective than anything else," Grigsby said. "Students talk to former students of Eastern and get a better picture of us. Sometimes that's all they know about us when they apply."

Grigsby added that everyone can take part in the recruiting process. "Recruiting students is a university function, not for admissions only," he said.

Special programs open to everyone

By Becky Clark
Staff writer

The university's Division of Special Programs offers many courses to appeal to both university students and local residents of all ages.

"Although we do offer some classes for toddlers, we have more classes for adults," said Jamie Hamon, conference planner.

These classes are non-credit offered to the general public, including university students.

"We are doing it as a community service and trying to bring people onto a college campus who may have never taken a college class before," Hamon said.

According to Hamon, the interest in a subject may be from a hobby, but the special interest classes bring on an educational outlet.

The classes try to cater to everyone's interests.

Courses cover culinary interests such as candy making and oriental cooking; crafts such as cross stitch, hooked rugs, reproduction of antique dolls, introduction to floral design and jewelry casting; and sports courses such as tennis, racquetball, gymnastics, karate, aerobics and body-recall classes.

Business courses range from basic secretarial skills to computer courses.

In all, 50 to 60 courses are offered each semester. They are offered Monday through Thursday and meet at night.

Hamon said ideas for course topics come from various sources. She said university instructors sometimes suggest topics.

Fees are about $2 for every hour the class is taught. For example, if a class is taught for five weeks for two hours on Tuesday, the class fee would be about $20.

Hamon said if a class lacks funding, it will be dropped as a last resort.

"We try to talk to the instructor and see if he will take a little less," she said.

Not all special interest courses are taught by university instructors.

According to Hamon, people with expertise in a certain field usually contact her to see if they can teach a course.

Hamon said favorites are word processing, gymnastics for children and body recall for senior citizens.

Graduation deadline set for end of month

By Pam Logue
News editor

Students planning to graduate in May or August of 1987 must apply for graduation before Oct. 31.

According to Dr. Elizabeth Wachtel, director of advising and testing, the process of applying for graduation is handled in each of the individual colleges, but is a uniform process.

Any student who plans to graduate in May or August needs to go to the dean of his or her college and pick up an application form. The form must be filled out and returned to the dean's office.

Students must go to the registrar's office and secure an unofficial transcript and return it to the dean. The transcript is used to determine whether or not the student meets the requirements for graduation.

The student will be required to pay a $14 graduation fee at the cashier's window in the Coates Administration Building. This fee is used to pay for a cap, gown, diploma and alumni fees for one year.

The student will complete an alumni association worksheet as a part of the application. This worksheet will determine the student's alumni status.

The application asks the student to list courses which are being taken now as well as those that will be taken next semester.

Students should list any courses that have been taken by correspondence, transfer or challenge examination.

Any courses which have been taken by correspondence must be completed by March 1 for May graduation and by July 1 for August graduation.

Once the application has been completed, the dean will review it and advise the student if any changes need be made or if there is a problem with the application.

Johanna Willham, administrative assistant in the College of Arts and Humanities, said once the student fills out the application and brings it back, she tries to sit down with the student to make sure everything is in order.

"Without fail there will be someone who has not taken what they were supposed to," Willham said.

Willham said a student who needs a few extra hours to graduate, could take a correspondence course or take one of the special courses offered during the semester.

Willham said sometimes a mistake is made that can not be corrected and the student must return for another semester.

When asked what would happen if a student failed to apply for graduation before the deadline, Willham said, the university could not keep the student from graduating.

"There are instances when a student can not apply on time," Willham said. For instance, if a student is not sure whether or not a certain course will be offered, application may not be made.

Willham said most advisers make some attempt to notify students when they need to apply for graduation. Many advisers keep a list of those students who are eligible.

Application guidelines are also printed in the catalog and in the schedule booklets.

Willham said if any information a student puts on the application changes before the graduation date, he or she needs to contact the dean's office and have the information changed, as it could affect the student's eligibility.

Siblings double as students

By Keith Howard
Features editor

When some people look in the mirror they are sure they are just seeing their reflection in it. But for a few select others, they may be seeing their twin brother or sister.

For Robert and James Begley being a twin has definitely been an experience they wouldn't trade.

Identical twins Robert and James said they share a lot of the same characteristics as well as many opposite traits.

James, 21, a marketing major, said their main differences are cosmetic. James dresses in a more professional manner and wears his hair short.

Robert, 21, a marketing major, on the other hand, has longer hair and said he likes to dress more casual, adding you won't catch him in a tie very often.

Robert and James said they looked exactly alike in kindergarten. They said this resemblance led to a lot of mix-ups concerning their identities, which for one of them may have been good, but for the other one posed a problem.

James recalled one day when he and his brother were attending a Catholic kindergarten together. He said the priest called him in his office and starting giving him this big lecture because Robert had pulled one of the girls' hair. The priest started talking about, "How little boys in kindergarten should start watching themselves."

James said after the priest had stopped lecturing him he asked, "Robert, do you have anything you want to say?" James replied, "Yeah I'm not Bobby, I'm Jimmy."

James said the priest just started cracking up laughing.

"Being a twin is different. It's got its advantages, but you have twice as much a chance of leaving your mark on the world," said James.

Deanetta and Jeanetta Hale are 19-year-old freshmen from Barbourville. They have something more in common than just being sisters; they are fraternal twins.

Jeanetta and Deanetta said they can tell what the other one is thinking at all times. Jeanetta said, "We can give each other a look and know what the other one is thinking."

"If I'm in a place and we don't like it, she'll look at me like,

Robert and James Begley, left, Jeanetta and Deanetta Hale, top, Duran and Durenda Lundy and John and Joe Conrad, right, are among sets of twins who attend the university.

"Make an excuse", so I make an excuse and I get us out of it," said Deanetta.

Deanetta said the only thing bad about being a twin is "nobody can get our names right." She added the best thing is "you're never alone."

Joe and John Conrad, 19, sophomores from Peach Grove, share an apartment as well as the same fraternity.

Joe and John are fraternal twins, but from the looks of them, they could easily pass as identical twins.

John said he was able to use the fact he was a twin to his advantage. "If I didn't want to go to class, I could bribe Joe into going," he said.

Joe said he gets tired of people coming up to him and confusing him for his brother. He said this happens a lot when they are downtown.

Joe said its not that bad though. "It's not like you are the only child in the family and you're all alone. Having a twin always gave us someone to play with, do something with or even fight with."

In reference to being twins, they both agreed two was better than one.

Disliking boiled cabbage and hating spinach are two things 18-year-old fraternal twins Durenda and Duran Lundy, from Barbourville, both have in common.

Durenda said she and her brother are the closest to each other in the family. She said they would always stick together in a family argument.

She said one thing about being a twin in a family was her mother and father always introduced them as "the twins, and still do." Duran said, "Not too many people are twins and that's why I'm glad to be one. Everyone pays more attention to you."

"When I was little, I always said everyone should have a twin to grow up with," said Durenda.

Program offers foreign travels

By Heather Burkhart
Staff writer

A lot of students do not get the chance to venture outside of the country, but here at the university, a student can have the opportunity to study in such places as Austria, England, France, Italy and Spain. Although many people assume the International Education Office (room 140 of the Keith Building) serves only foreign students, it caters to any university students interested in studying, working or traveling abroad.

And for those students who do not feel they can afford the expenses involved, financial aid is available. Faculty can also find information about international teaching opportunities. The International Education Office has something to offer the entire university community.

According to Dr. Joe Flory, director of international education, about 125 foreign students are now attending the university. More than 30 countries, including Cameroon, Malaysia, India, England and the Republic of Ireland, are represented by these students.

Flory said most of the students discovered the university's international program through friends and family who attended school here in the past. Others researched the names and locations of programs at the American Consulate Office in their native countries.

While at the university, the international students are treated to cross-cultural mixers, hayrides, pizza parties, movies and cookouts.

People who want to get to know a foreign student may do so through the International Friends Program. Host-friends invite their students to concerts, shopping malls, holiday celebrations and birthday parties.

The international students are available to make presentations on their countries to community organizations such as church groups, social clubs and scout troops.

Flory said being exposed to the international students may prompt the desire to participate in travel, work- or study-abroad programs. The office furnishes directories for these and other programs.

"Too many students never seriously consider studying abroad," Flory said. "Any student interested in studying, traveling or working in another country should remember that the International Education Office is the starting place for making these experiences a reality," said Flory.

"Students who have lived or traveled abroad have gained knowledge which could never be learned through on-campus courses," Flory said. "Many careers today are international rather than regional or national. Students who graduate with international experience as part of their degree program have an advantage with many employers."

Laura Burg, a senior sociology major from Lexington, spent a school year at Bradford University in England.

"A year abroad is an experience people should have," Burg said. "It's a chance to learn about other cultures and to get an unbiased opinion of world events."

"One gains a greater feeling of independence," she said.

In addition to providing information on travel- and study-abroad programs, each semester the office publishes a magazine of short stories, poetry, travel anecdotes, recipes, essays and artwork contributed by students and faculty. Flory encourages people to submit works having an international perspective.

Varney's classes add excitement

By Jackie Hinkle
Staff writer

To some, science classes are not usually the most exciting classes, but they must be endured in order to complete general education requirements. So why doesn't someone make them more interesting? Someone has—Dr. Dan R. Varney.

Varney teaches biology 303, human heredity, and biology 315, genetics. He says he tries "to make the classes fun."

"I don't believe learning and fun have to be segregated. I also try to make the students get to do as much as they can. The more involved they get into the class, the more they get out of it," Varney said.

Ann Copas, a senior special education major from Dayton, Ohio, who had Varney's human heredity class, said, "It's the best class I've ever taken. He's great. Instead of just showing us slides of meiosis and mitosis he had us actually doing the process with clay. He made learning interesting and he applied it to everyday life."

Varney also has a good relationship as well as an understanding of the students.

"I like being in front of the classroom. I feel like I can relate to the students. If you can't relate to the teacher, you're not going to get much out of the class," Varney said.

Along with the classes he teaches at this university, Varney has taught at the Blackburn Correctional Complex, which is a medium-security prison. Varney said he taught classes at Blackburn just about every semester, but this year classes were not being offered.

Varney has been at the university for 19 years. After graduating from the University of Kentucky, he came here to do his dissertation and he's "here to stay." Varney received his bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees in genetics from UK.

Varney says he "tries to stay involved." He is not only the faculty adviser for the explorer's club and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, but he is also a member of the Faculty Club Board of Governors, the Richmond Optimists Club and the Graduate

Faculty, Promotion and Tenure, Students' Honors, Animal Care and Computer Usage committees. Varney is also in his ninth year of a research project.

"I've recently been using rats and mice as models for studying the effect of toxic fescue on cattle, particularly their reproductive system," said Varney.

According to Varney, "Fescue is pasture grass which often times gets infected with a fungus. This fungus is messing up the reproductive systems of the cattle who feed on this grass."

He has been working with a group of doctors from UK on this project. Since starting the research, they have developed the Johnstone Grass which alleviates the toxic fescue.

Shortly after he started teaching, he became the faculty adviser for Sigma Alpha Epsilon. He says working with the fraternity is a rewarding experience. "I get to see these people grow, learn responsibility, learn how to get things done and how to work with people."

Varney said he wasn't always as involved as he is now. "When I was in high school I was very shy. It was in college that I became more outgoing."

Professors' studies recognized

By Lisa Cooney

Studying rocks, ground water and limestones, isn't very popular to the average individual, but for two above-average university professors, being with the rocks "where it's at."

Dr. Ralph Ewers and Dr. James Quinlan have won the 1986 E.B. Burwell Jr. Award for a presentation on the ground water flow in limestone. The award was given by the Geological Society of America.

Ewers is an associate professor of geology and Quinlan is an adjunct faculty member in the university's geology department.

The award, which was established in 1969, is given annually to the author or authors of a published work of distinction. The work must advance knowledge concerning principles or practice of engineering geology, or of the related fields of applied soil or rock mechanics where the role of geology is emphasized.

Ewers has been at the university since 1981 and he said Quinlan, who is attending out-of-town meetings, has been his research partner for 10 years.

"We have been working together on this project a long time, but it has been very close research these last five years," he said.

Ewers and Quinlan's presentation was titled: "Ground water flow in limestone terrains: strategy rationale and procedure for reliable, efficient monitoring of ground water quality in karst areas."

Ewers said the paper explains how to detect contamination in limestone aquifers to avoid infecting the public water supply.

Ewers said an aquifer is a mass of underground limestone capable of carrying large quantities of water in an underground stream. It flows very quickly which makes it easy to distribute the contaminants.

Ewers and Quinlan's experiment was done by inserting dye into the ground so they could map the flow of water by using a dye tracing procedure. Ewers said the special dyes work well in limestone and can be detected in very diluted concentrations.

"In our method, we used an activated charcoal which is used in cigarette filters or to purify water. This charcoal attracted the dye while it passed through the charcoal," he said.

The contaminated water could cause hepatitis, Ewers said, and the water could also contain organic compounds that are carcinogenic. "The compounds in the ground water mixing with the chemicals in your body can really make you sick."

Ewers said there are a lot of chemicals moving on our highways and both he and Quinlan are intensely studying the stretch of Interstate 75 just before Mammoth Cave—a large limestone cavern.

"There have been five chemical spills on that section of I-75 and we are concerned that the limestone area contamination could go down a sinkhole and be carried to a water supply," he said.

Ewers said the award delighted both he and Quinlan because the community is now recognizing the problem. "As hydro-geologists, all we have done is taken our data and focused it on the practical problem; now we can deal with it."

"The real goal was to understand the aquifers and the obvious thing to do was to apply our understanding," said Ewers. "We were on the right scene at the right time."

Sorority classic donates money to philanthropy

By Jenny Chambers
Staff writer

Frenzied shouts of "pull, pull" echoed through the spectators ringed around the tug-of-war contest. Suddenly, one group jerked the other across the dividing line, winning the competition. Immediately the shouts changed to cheers and fast-paced claps.

The games segment of the university's Delta Zeta Frat Man's Classic had begun.

"This is the time for all of the fraternities to get together and compete against each other," said Melissa Wilson, organizer of this year's classic.

Wilson, philanthropy chairman for the university's Delta Zeta sorority, planned and organized the classic, held Sept. 23-25.

The university's Delta Zeta Sorority annually organizes the Frat Man's Classic to raise money for their philanthropy, according to Wilson. She said 12 fraternities participated.

"This is where we make most of our money," Wilson said. "We send it to the speech and hearing impaired."

Each fraternity must pay $25 to enter the competition. According to Wilson, most of the fee covers the sorority's expenses for the classic. The three-day event concluded with "The Classic Man Contest" at a downtown establishment.

Wilson said the $1 cover charge to enter this event raised most of the money for the classic.

Fraternity representatives entered in the classic man contest must dress in their best "GQ" attire, according to Wilson, and present the three alumni judges with a classic line.

Wilson said an example would be Rhett Butler's famous "Frankly, Scarlett" line from "Gone With the Wind," though she said lines should be more original.

"The guys ham it up," she said. "They love it." But before the classic man contest, each fraternity competes in activities such as a scavenger hunt, a banner contest and classic games.

The classic games were held Sept. 24, at Palmer Field. Fraternity members ran three-legged races, pulled rope in the tug-of-war, retrieved chocolate-covered turtles from whipped cream and found their fraternity brothers by listening for the same animal sound they were making while blindfolded.

Wilson said the animal sound game was the most entertaining.

"That's really funny to watch," she said. "They have a good time with it."

One of the participants in the games from the university's Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, Jeff Moore, said he enjoyed the competitive spirit between fraternities.

"I like tug-of-war," said Moore, 21, a senior fire safety engineering major from Lexington. "We love competition and we like to be involved with all the fraternities when we have the chance to."

Fraternities compile points throughout the classic by participating and placing in the various competitions.

After the classic man contest, Delta Zeta members add up points from each fraternity, announce the overall winner and award trophies. Wilson said the sorority raised $450 for its philanthropy this year through the classic.

She also said the university's Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity won the most points during the classic and was the overall winner.

Sean McQuire of the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity won the classic man contest.

"He's our reigning classic man for the next year," Wilson said.

Even though Wilson spent long hours planning and organizing for the event, she said her efforts were worth it.

"If we can raise money for our philanthropy and have fun doing it, to me this is the best way," she said.

Counseling available

The counseling center is offering help to students encountering personal difficulties as a result of having a parent or family member who has an alcohol problem.

The groups will be conducted by Counseling Center staff members beginning at 3:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 16. Anyone interested should call Calvin J. Tolar at 622-1303 and arrange to be a member of a group.

Auditions conclude

Spaceforce/Eastern Dance Theatre concludes auditions for fall and spring performances at 6 p.m. today in the Weaver Dance Studio. Approximately 40 dancers are needed. Everyone is welcome for various levels of modern, jazz and ballet pieces. For more information, call Virginia Jinks, adviser, at 622-1901.

Seminar offered

Dr. William Parker, vice chancellor from the University of Kentucky, will speak on Mastering the Art of Improving National Teacher Exam Scores from 9 a.m. until noon on Saturday, Oct. 4.

All education majors are welcome to attend the seminar which is sponsored by Student Council for Exceptional Children.

SPJ holds initiation

The Society of Professional Journalists will initiate new members at 6 p.m. today at Bash Riprock's. For more information contact Libby Fraas at 1872.

Theater society rebuilds

By Amy Candill
Staff writer

Alpha Psi Omega, the university's only theater honorary, is in the process of rebuilding after two years of inactivity.

Marlene Daugherty, president of Alpha Psi Omega, said the club has been neglected over the past few years because the members were busy with theater productions.

At the beginning of the spring semester last year, Daugherty said she was the only member.

Daugherty said she organized a pledge class in order to keep the club going. "It's an honor to be in this organization because it represents the quality of the work in theater. It's something that every theater major should be proud of," Daugherty said.

There are currently five members in the club and eight people in the pledge class. Daugherty said a new pledge class was planned for the spring semester.

Admission into the group operates on a point system. Each student who participates in a theater production receives a certain number of points. Fifty points are required for membership. This includes acting or technical work.

Alpha Psi Omega is currently trying to raise money for a scholarship which would be available to a sophomore or junior theater major.

The club's fund-raisers include refreshment sales and costume sales. The club is also planning to sponsor a play in the spring to raise money. This play will feature only Alpha Psi Omega members.

Some of the club's other activities include opening-night receptions, a Halloween dance, and a parody of the Oscar Awards called the Grover Awards.

Alpha Psi Omega is a national honor society with chapters at about 300 colleges.

The officers of Alpha Psi Omega are Marlene Daugherty, president; Robert Hughes, vice president; Debbie Swinford, secretary; Sally Wilfert, treasurer and Nick Desantis, business manager.

Fraternity bicycles ball for benefit of hospital

By Debra Jasper
Activities editor

When most students at the university are going to class Friday morning, members of Sigma Nu Fraternity will be heading out of Richmond.

The fraternity, with the help of the Alpha Delta Pi and Delta Zeta sororities plan to carry a football across the state to Western Kentucky University on a bicycle.

For the past two weeks, members of these Greek organizations have taken pledges from local businesses for each mile they travel and sponsored a coin drop in front of the Powell Building. The money raised by the events will be given to the Shriner's Hospital for Crippled Children in Lexington.

According to Tom Atkin, civic chairman of Sigma Nu Fraternity, the bike ride is the focus of the fund-raisers and the goal of the fraternity is to raise between $500 and $1,000 for charity.

The route is over 150 miles. Atkin said the ball will be used at the university football game against Western.

In addition to the other fund-raisers, Atkin said the chapter plans to hold a roadblock at the intersection of Lancaster and the Eastern By-pass next week. "Each event raises money on its own basically. But the bike ride is kind of the climax," Atkin said.

For more than 16 years, the fraternity has sponsored the bike ride but this is the first year sororities have been involved. Atkin said the extra participation should help raise more money.

Judy Martin, 21, a senior administrative management major and president of Delta Zeta Sorority, said she was going to try to ride the bicycle on part of the trip. "There are just a few of us going, but I think it will be a lot of fun," she said.

Martin said the money was going to a good cause and that makes the trip worthwhile.

Alpha Delta Pi philanthropy chairman Ginny Mauer said they decided to help with the fund-raisers as a philanthropy project for the sorority. "I thought it was good for both of us to get involved in," the 21-year-old senior interior design major from Fort Mitchell said. "And since we didn't know them very well, it gave us a chance to meet."

Clark Jackson, 21, a senior agriculture major from Carlisle and a member of Sigma Nu, said the event was also a good way to get university fans to go to the Western game. "It is just a good time for people to get together and go to the ballgame," he said.

Will Morgan, 22, an operations management major from Cincinnati and president of the fraternity, said he was looking forward to completing the trip because it would be quite an accomplishment. "It has been a lot of hard work and a lot of hours," Morgan said. "But any time you work together you get closer."

Fraternities pay higher insurance

By Debra Jasper
Activities editor

Fraternity members on campus are practicing risk-prevention techniques this year because of rising insurance rates.

Most insurance companies are reluctant to insure fraternities because of an increase in fraternity-related lawsuits, according to several fraternity presidents at the university. The insurance companies that have agreed to sell fraternity-liability policies have doubled their prices from last year.

Will Morgan, president of Sigma Nu Fraternity, said their insurance rates had increased from $10 per member for each semester last year to $20 this year. In addition, the fraternities' liability coverage dropped from $15 million three years ago to $5 million.

"All of the lawsuits filed against fraternities make it too much of a risk to offer us insurance," the 22-year-old operations management major from Cincinnati, said. "And if it doesn't change in the future, you probably won't be able to get insurance at all."

Sigma Alpha Epsilon President Chip Spencer said their national fraternity only had a $500,000 liability policy because a higher coverage could not be obtained.

Spencer, 22, an accounting and finance major from Cincinnati, estimated the fraternity's insurance rates had doubled from $10 per person each semester to $20.

Mike Feback, 22, a senior public relations major from Harrodsburg, and president of Phi Kappa Tau, said their national headquarters in Memphis, Tenn., is going to court to keep their insurance policy. Feback said the policy did not expire until June 30, 1987, but the company decided to cancel the policy early.

"The problem is a reflection of the national situation with lawsuits on the increase," Feback said. "I really believe that this has a crippling effect on fraternities."

To combat the insurance problem, some fraternity officers are attending risk management seminars to learn how to minimize the chances of litigation.

Dewayne Bidy, 21, a senior marketing major from Fairfield, Ohio, and president of Beta Theta Pi, said the fraternity first considers the risks involved before planning an event. "I have never really taken risk management as much into consideration as I have over the last six months," Bidy said.

According to Rick Muterspaw, president of Phi Delta Theta, the growing number of lawsuits places more responsibility on officers. "It puts more of a burden on me because I am going to be the first one named in a lawsuit," the 21-year-old senior industrial technology major said.

To alleviate some liability, he said the chapter discontinued their little sister program. "That was another 30 girls plus their dates that we were responsible for," Muterspaw said. "And you just can't rename your little sister organization to little sweethearts and expect some prosecuting attorney to let you off the hook. They are still a sub-organization and you are liable."

Muterspaw said Phi Delta Theta was also concerned with alcohol awareness. "We are trying to be dogmatic about not letting minors drink but it is something you can't nip in the bud immediately," he said.

Lambda Chi Alpha President Brian Wiles said their chapter was also enforcing a stricter alcohol policy. "Anytime we have a party it is invitation only," the 25-year-old industrial technology major from Lawrenceburg said. Wiles said chapter members also collected car keys at fraternity dances and only returned them to sober drivers.

Troy Johnson, Greek adviser, said the insurance rates may put pressure on national fraternities to assume additional responsibilities. Still, she said she doubted the problems would force the fraternities to disband.

"A lot of the fraternities have been working towards enforcing community and state laws regarding alcohol," she said.

Drama proves worthy

By Phil Bowling
Arts editor

Country goodness is cookin' in the kitchen and the radio is playin' in the front room. Life in the West Texas town of Bradleyville appears to be this simple and easy.

Bradleyville, a town of 6,000 good ol' beer drinkin' buddies, is the setting for Preston Jones' play "Lu Ann Hampton Laverty Oberlander." The play opened last night at Gifford Theatre in the Jane F. Campbell Building.

The university's theater department will be performing the show nightly through Saturday.

The play is a look at the life of Lu Ann Hampton and how she develops over a thirty-year period. Sally Wilfert gives a tremendous performance as the girl, the woman and the eventual mother.

The first act opens in the living room of the Hampton home in 1953.

The Hampton family has had its problems but has managed to survive. Lu Ann's mother works at a local hospital, her father is dead and her brother has recently returned from military duty in the Korean War.

Since her brother, Skip's, return from war, he has become somewhat of a heavy drinker. Skip becomes very short-tempered and windy when he drinks too much.

However, some of the roughness apparently runs in the family because Mamma and little Lu Ann can tell you what for.

Review

The play written by Jones, takes a look at an entire society and pinpoints it toward this one family.

Although Lu Ann may be a little rough around the edges, she has managed to catch a few boys' eyes as a flirtatious high school cheerleader.

Brother Skip sees Lu Ann as the perfect opportunity to help out an old war buddy Dale Laverty. It is Skip's fast talking that steals Lu Ann from her basketball-star boyfriend Billy Bob and gets her married to Dale.

Jeffrey Dill takes the role of Skip and manages to make the audience hate his guts one second for being so obnoxious and feel so sorry for his predicaments the next second.

Dill takes the young big-talking Skip from 1953 to 1973 where, despite many changes in his life, he still is the same character inside.

Lu Ann has trouble deciding as a youth what she wants to do with her life, thus this difficulty follows her throughout the play.

Although Milly Hubbard, who portrays Lu Ann's mother Claudine Hampton, has no lines after the first act, she gives a fabulous heart-rendering performance in the final act.

The play concludes back in the Hampton home after Lu Ann and her high school-age daughter have moved back in with Mamma. Over the years, Skip has maintained his place in the Hampton home.

When Jones wrote the play, he managed to place several statements concerning drinking throughout the play. He very effectively makes the audience laugh at certain situations which are serious problems.

However, the audience later sees what he was trying to point out previously. The play is performed excellently and is a must for anyone who enjoys a good heart-warming story.

Colonel mascot helps student increase spirit

By Jamie Baker

This football season, along with the Colonels, the cheerleaders and the roaring crowds, there will be a new face appearing at Hanger Field.

For the first time the university will have an official mascot. He will be known simply as the Colonel.

The Colonel is dressed in a maroon jacket with tails. The dark maroon jacket makes his silvered hair show up very well. He stands at over 6 feet tall.

This year the person behind the grinning face of the Colonel will be Jon Thornsberry, a senior from Augusta.

Tryouts were held last semester so that the new Colonel could attend camp with the cheerleaders and learn what was expected of him, said Thornsberry.

"During the camp for cheerleaders there was a separate thing for mascots and basically we talked about character development, because once you are inside the costume you must assume the identity of the character," said Thornsberry.

The Colonel made his first appearance at the Colonels' opening football game on Sept. 13. A police car escorted the silver Rolls Royce convertible into the stadium shortly before the game.

The Colonel's outfit consists of an inside body, pants, a maroon coat with tails, hands, big boots and the head piece.

The Colonel not only has the responsibility to attend all the games that the cheerleaders do for both football and basketball, but to also represent the university in an official capacity as a public relations spokesperson, said Thornsberry.

"Being a spokesperson is hard when you can't talk, and as the Colonel the only things I can use to communicate are my arms and body," said Thornsberry.

The suit Thornsberry will wear was made by Stagecraft Inc. of Cincinnati.

According to Dr. Hayward M. Daugherty, dean of Student Services, the mascot cost the university $2,500. The cost of the mascot was taken from the general budget, Daugherty said.

To allow Thornsberry to breathe, the head was constructed of fiberglass and is well ventilated.

"Sometimes that suit can get very hot because it depends on what kind of stadium you are at. Here at Hanger Field it's not too bad because it is in the open," said Thornsberry.

Thornsberry said in order for him to keep cool he wears shorts and a T-shirt underneath the costume.

Making the Colonel come alive won't be difficult, said the occupational therapy major. Thornsberry has been a member of show choir here at the university for two and one-half years previously.

Thornsberry felt the biggest advantage of being the Colonel was being able to put on the suit and not worry what other people thought.

Design course flowers

By Jamie Baker
Staff writer

Most students come to the university to gain academic enlightenment and dare not venture outside of their required courses as listed in the university handbook. However, special interest classes are as close as the nearest schedule book.

The university acknowledges the desire of some to leave the strict boundaries of their major. One of these courses is the floral design class, otherwise known as OHO 362E.

The course is taught by Dr. Steve Black, an associate professor in the agriculture department.

According to Black, the purpose of the class is to teach students how to arrange flowers in simple design for home display.

"I've been teaching this class for eight years, every semester and usually at least two sections," said Black.

"I think a lot of students sign up for this course because they hear from other people it is a fun class. 'Some people are curious about flowers,'" said Black.

As the expenses of going to school continue to increase, the question of possible additional costs might arise. Many students would be unable or unwilling to take the course if additional costs were involved.

However, Black said there were no special fees charged for the course.

According to Black, all of the supplies for the class have been provided for in the budget or from donations.

Black said the wire and containers were purchased with money from the department's operating budget. All of the flowers for the class are grown in the university's greenhouse

Students learn from practical experience during floral design class.

Although there are no current costs for the course, there has been in the past. When the course was first introduced, students were asked to pay a nominal fee to cover expenses of the flowers used.

Additional costs were also charged when the course was taught as a special interest class. However, this course was not handled in the normal semester schedule and was geared more toward people outside the university.

The floral foam for this year's classes was donated by a private company. "The company that donated the foam saved us about $300 and in turn we can pass along the savings to the students," said Black.

According to Black, the average person that takes the class does not take it to fulfill major requirements. The majority who take the class usually aren't horticulture majors.

However, some people majoring in horticulture do take the class. Black said the class usually fills up every semester and sometimes horticulture majors that register late must seek an override.

The course allows the students to learn more of the mechanics of the arrangement process. This would include work with ribbons, wires and selection of containers.

In addition to making arrangements, the class also learns many of the principles of design. Tinting, dying, drying and preserving are also touched upon in the introductory course.

The course can be taken for one credit hour.

For those students who do enjoy the first course, the department has recently added an advanced course.

The advanced class is called OHO 364.

In this particular class students go more in depth in floral arranging. This semester is the first time the class has been offered and it currently has 11 students.

The students are allowed to keep the arrangements they make in the class. Occasionally, a student won't want their arrangement and then it is used for something else, said Black.

"I took this class because I like to work with flowers," said Lana Prater, a junior business major from Georgetown.

According to Black, each student uses nearly one dozen roses a week. Therefore, with two sections taught, there are about 50 dozen used per week this semester, he said.

"I think some students take this class because there is no academic pressure, students work at their own pace and have two hours to complete the weekly project," said Black.

In addition to using roses for class arrangements, students can and do use other flowers. Mums, daisies and baby's breath are also often used in arrangements.

Plans advised toward travels

Although spontaneous road trips can be fun, planned road trips may prove to run more smoothly.

When considering the possibilities of a road trip, you must keep one major factor in mind. Remember, a road trip can be as simple as a drive through the country or as complex as a long-weekend at the beach.

This week I will take the time to list a few tips on travel and how to make that fun-filled weekend a little better.

The first and most important thing is to know where you want to go. If you are totally clueless, visit the local tourist center.

The people at the tourist information offices should be able to provide information concerning travel accommodations. In addition, they should also be able to tell you about the possible tourist highlights.

These people should be somewhat familiar with the area and can be very helpful. If they are not, not be shy, ask a local resident.

However, the easiest route is to visit a travel agency. Generally, the information is free and they are more than willing to help you make accommodations.

Some travel agencies have prepared travel guides for different regions. These guides give listings of all the necessary material.

Once the destination has been chosen, you are in the home stretch.

Now you and your road trip buddies must decide on a spending budget.

Major hotel and motel chains have toll-free phone numbers that you can call and obtain price listings. If at all possible, sleeping arrangements should be looked into prior to the trip.

Otherwise, the sight of your trip might be having the traditional fall festival that 35,000 people travel in for. Obviously, this would have a tremendous factor upon the financial situation.

Bits and pieces

Phil Bowling

This is another reason that a travel guide can be beneficial. These little booklets list when tourist attractions have on- and off-seasons.

If you travel to these attractions in off-season, it is feasible to save up to 25 percent from the in-season prices. This can make a great difference to the typical college budget.

During the off-season, it is very easy to find a nice two-bed, four-person room for around $30.

If you plan on staying two nights in a hotel, the total bill would only be $15 per person. Therefore, the major cost will come from gasoline, food and leisure.

Currently, gasoline prices are averaging 75 cents for unleaded. If you travel in an economy car, this expense can be deterred somewhat.

Food costs can be cut by taking the traditional cooler of food and drinks for the first day. A trip to the grocery store can find many sandwich and snack ideas at discount prices.

By packing a cooler, four people can possibly eat on the cost of what one person would spend at a restaurant. This is a definite tip from a wise consumer.

From taking the time to look at the overall expenses and trying to cut costs before the trip, you may have extra cash in the end. This extra cash can go to some definite entertainment possibilities.

Look forward to reading the highlights of a pre-planned road trip in next week's column. Until then, have fun and drive safely.

Colonels rout Blue Raiders

By Mike Marsee
Sports editor

The storm that hit Middle Tennessee Saturday was not as obvious as another storm that blew through Hanger Field that afternoon, but it was just as effective.

The Colonels' defense hit the Blue Raiders with hurricane force as they posted a 28-3 win over the team picked to win the Ohio Valley Conference.

Meanwhile, a monsoon of epic proportions rumbled through the area late in the first quarter, causing play to be stopped for the first time ever at Hanger Field.

The sudden deluge halted play for 18 minutes as it blew debris around the stadium and sent the 10,100 fans scurrying for cover.

The Blue Raiders seemed to be running into a different storm. They netted just 39 yards rushing in 35 attempts against a defense ranked first in Division I-AA against the rush.

Colonel linebacker Fred Harvey was in on 10 tackles, and nose guard Eugene Banks had a hand in eight.

Offensively, tailback James Crawford stole the show. He carried 26 times for 170 yards and scoring runs of three and 46 yards.

MTSU wasn't exactly playing with a full deck, as three key players were sidelined with injuries.

The absence of quarterback Marvin Collier, tailback Gerald Anderson and guard Cecil Andrews left some big shoes to be filled.

Freshman quarterback Van Dangler was sacked five times and threw two interceptions. Anderson's running mate, Dwight Stone ran 20 times for 40 yards.

Colonels' coach Roy Kidd said he would have preferred to see the Blue Raiders at full strength. He indicated that the injuries, especially Collier's, were crucial.

"I would've liked to played them with him," Kidd said. "It sure hurt them."

MTSU coach James "Boots" Donnelly disagreed. "I don't believe those three people caused the others not to play," he said.

The Colonels began the scoring after Harvey ended MTSU's first drive by picking off a Dangler pass that was tipped by John Klingel.

The Colonels took over at the MTSU 10-yard line, and two plays later, quarterback Mike Whitaker passed to tight end Oscar Angulo from nine yards out to draw first blood.

Early in the second period, fullback Vic Parks, who rushed for 44 yards, pushed through the middle for a 13-yard scoring run.

On the Colonels first drive of the second half, Crawford carried the ball on seven of the eight plays and scored his first touchdown, giving his team a 21-3 cushion.

Minutes later, he broke away for a 46-yard scoring run.

Many of Crawford's runs went toward the right tackle position, where John Jackson was clearing the way.

"I think they knew what side we were running to, but it didn't matter," Jackson said.

"Crawford's just as good as our offensive line blocks," Kidd added.

The Blue Raiders spent much of their time going backwards after being flagged for 11 penalties, which cost them 87 yards. Their offense was called for holding five times.

"I've never had five teams make as many mistakes as we made," Donnelly said. "We've gone a year without that many mistakes."

Progress photo/Tom Penegor

"They hold more than any football team I've ever played against," Kidd said.

Kidd heaped praise on his defense, which has given up one touchdown in three games.

"I can't brag on them enough," he stated. "They're still hanging in there."

Whitaker also realized the work of the defense keeps pressure off him.

"There's no doubt we've got the strongest defense in I-AA," he said.

Defensive end Tim Tomaszewski said the Blue Raiders got their just desserts for their three straight wins over the Colonels.

"They kicked the hell out of us last year, and this year it was our turn," he said.

Tomaszewski said the three MTSU absentees would have had little effect on the outcome.

"Do you think three people would have made 25 points difference?" he asked.

The Colonels now face six more conference games, and according to Tomaszewski, they are the team to beat.

Kidd pointed out the league race doesn't hinge on one game. "Winning this game is not winning the conference," he said.

The Colonels take a break from

Golfers finish 13th

By Mike Marsee
Sports editor

The university's golf team posted a 13th-place finish last weekend at the Forest Hills Collegiate Invitational in Augusta, Ga.

The Colonels played rounds of 304, 307 and 308 as a team for a total score of 919, the same score they posted at Augusta in 1985.

Augusta College, the host school, won the 18-team tournament at 883. Florida Southern College and South Florida tied for second at 891, and Kentucky placed fourth with a score of 901.

Steve Smitha led Colonel golfers at Forest Hills with a score of 223, which was good for a 15th-place tie. Smitha had rounds of 71, 76 and 76.

Bruce Oldendick tied for 19th at 225 with rounds of 74, 75 and 76.

Mike Crowe shot 76, 78 and 79 for 233. John Diana had rounds of 83, 78 and 76 for 237 and Jason Vance shot 249 with rounds of 83, 81 and 85.

Coach Lew Smither said the weather conditions were "ideal" and the atmosphere was excellent for the event.

"It was a great golf course. It was a great tournament," he said. "We just didn't put it together."

This weekend, the Colonels will compete in the Kentucky Intercollegiate Tournament at Louisville.

All six major state universities will play in the Louisville event.

In two weeks, they conclude their fall schedule at the John Ryan Invitational at Durham, N.C.

Western, Murray battle to tie

Progress staff report

Four Ohio Valley Conference schools saw action Saturday aside from the game at Hanger Field.

The Colonels' next opponent, Western Kentucky, battled to a 10-10 tie at Murray State, where the Colonels will visit in two weeks.

Morehead State, playing its first game on the new artificial surface at Morehead's Jayne Stadium, raised its record to 4-0 with a 33-10 win over Kentucky State.

In other games, Akron defeated Central Florida 20-17 and Youngstown State fell 24-17 at Southern Illinois.

Team blanks Berea

By Lisa Cooney
Staff writer

Offense was the name of the game at Hood Field last Monday as the university's field hockey team defeated Berea College 7-0 in its home opener.

According to Coach Lynne Harvel, Monday's win was somewhat of a tuneup for the upcoming weekend of play.

The Colonels play Friday at Southern Illinois and Saturday at St. Louis.

"We are up against two strong teams this weekend, but we are strong too," Harvel said.

The Colonels defeated St. Louis at home last year. This weekend, both games will be played on artificial surfaces.

Harvel said the focus Monday was on teamwork and accurate passing.

"Most important, the teamwork was evident on the field," she said. "It is a team game and there is mutual respect among the players because everyone has something to contribute."

"Our passing and rushing game was good because we did a lot of it," Harvel added.

Tammy Vrooman passes the ball against Berea

Carol Van Winkle, the team captain, agreed that the Berea game was a "prep game" for this weekend.

"We were working on flat passes and teamwork," she said. "We were on the attack the entire time."

The Colonels' offense took 75 shots against the Mountaineers.

Van Winkle scored one goal, while others were scored by Karen Tatum, Stephanie Waller and Heather Shockey.

Tatum said there is usually equal play on offense and defense, but Monday's game was definitely oriented toward the offense.

Tatum described herself as a "cherry picker" on offense.

"I break away or I am the through person because I try to get through the other players to pass," she said.

Harvel said there are advantages to playing nearby schools such as Berea.

"Whenever we play an in-state team, ... it is good competition and it doesn't cost as much money," she stated.

Colonels host Texas, two others at Weaver

By Mike Marsee
Sports editor

The future is now for the university's volleyball team, as the Colonels face upcoming matches against ranked teams in an effort to improve their regional ranking.

The Colonels meet Texas, ranked 10th in the nation by the NCAA, at 8 p.m. tonight at Weaver Gymnasium. Southern Illinois visits for a match at 2 p.m. Saturday, and the Colonels host Tennessee at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

According to Coach Geri Polvino, it is imperative that the Colonels defeat these teams, particularly Texas, or at least play five-game matches to improve their ranking and be considered in November for an NCAA tournament bid.

Polvino said Texas has been a national powerhouse for several years, and this year is no exception. "Texas is a really important match," she said.

She also said crowd support will, as always, be crucial at Weaver.

"The crowd support was so important in the Bowling Green match," Polvino said. "The momentum plus the crowd is overwhelming."

She called Southern Illinois a "well-coached, well-trained" team. "They're not going to make mistakes," she said.

Polvino said Tennessee is also playing well this year. They are currently 11-1.

"They are out for revenge," she added. One of the Colonels' biggest home wins last year was over the Volunteers.

Last weekend, the Colonels extended their Ohio Valley Conference winning streak to 38 matches by beating all three divisional foes at the first Ohio Valley North Classic at Akron.

They routed Youngstown State 15-0, 15-4, 15-8, then whipped Morehead State 15-6, 15-5, 15-9, and finished the weekend with a 15-6, 15-9, 15-11 win over host Akron.

Polvino said the teams simply folded. "They couldn't return our serves. They couldn't differentiate which hitter was going to hit the ball," she said.

The Colonels had 20 service aces, and Cindy Thomsen racked up a hitting percentage of .528.

The Colonels traveled to Cincinnati Monday night, where they defeated the Bearcats 13-15, 15-5, 15-8, 15-9.

Angela Boykins returned to the lineup against UC for the first time since she suffered a leg injury in the first weekend of the season.

Assistant coach Linda Dawson said Boykins played much of the match and made a significant impact from her front line position.

Dawson said Ewy played very well in crucial situations against the Bearcats, and Mary Granger performed well in her middle position.

Women edge UC

By Mike Marsee
Sports editor

Half of the university's women's cross country team edged out a one-point win in a dual meet with Cincinnati, while the men's team fell by a somewhat larger margin.

The women's team was split for meets Saturday at Cincinnati and Knoxville, Tenn.

At Cincinnati, the women scored 27 points to squeak past UC. Lisa Malloy, the Colonels' top runner, ran the 5,000-meter race in 20 minutes, 2 seconds to place second.

Malloy was followed by Marilyn Johnson, who was fourth at 20:20.

Gracie Brown was sixth at 21:51, JoAnna Green placed seventh with a time of 22:01 and Mary Mobley's time of 22:14 ranked her eighth.

Coach Rick Erdmann was pleased with his team's ability to pick up the victory in the close meet.

"It was exciting to have that close a meet and win," he said.

On the men's side, the Colonels racked up 41 points, while UC won with just 17 in the 5-mile race.

Orsie Bumpus was the highest Colonels runner, finishing fourth overall with a time of 27:01.

Tim Moore was 10th with a time of 28:10 and Jim Mudrack placed 13th overall at 28:27.

Darin Kinder was 14th overall at 28:38 and Bobby Carolin was 18th with a time of 29:24.

At the Tennessee Invitational, the Colonels women placed fourth in the seven-team field with 82 points.

Alabama won the meet with 26 points, followed by Georgia and Auburn.

Erdmann pointed out that the top two Colonels runners, Pam Raglin and Allison Kotouch, finished ahead of the top two runners from Georgia and Auburn.

"Pam and Allison ran really well," he said. "But we had no kind of group at all."

Raglin was third overall with a time of 18:30, 20 seconds behind the leader. Kotouch was fifth at 18:51.

But there was a gap of almost two minutes between Kotouch and Tama Clare, who finished a distant 22nd with a time of 20:32.

Clare was followed by Chris Snow, 26th at 20:46, and Angie Cheek, 28th at 21:04.

Both the men and women will travel to Columbus, Ohio Saturday to compete in the Ohio State Invitational.

Tennis team opens season at 3-1

By Mike Marsee
Sports editor

The university's women's tennis team got the fall season underway with a match at Louisville and a weekend series at Middle Tennessee, and they came out with a 3-1 match record.

The Colonels lost 5-4 Sept. 23 at Louisville. The No. 2 and 3 singles players, Pam Wise and Dee Cannon, posted two-set wins to lead the team.

Friday night, the Colonels faced Memphis State at Murfreesboro, Tenn., after a five-hour wait because of rain. When the skies cleared, Memphis State rained on the Colonels with a 7-2 whipping.

No. 6 seed Tina Perruzzi and the No. 1 doubles team of Cannon and Wise notched the Colonels' wins.

Coach Sandra Martin said the Colonels should have performed better against the Tigers.

"They aren't 7-2 better than us," she said, referring to the score.

The next day, the teams played in 90-degree heat for most of the day. The Colonels won 6-3 over host Middle Tennessee and 9-0 over the University of the South.

Coach Sandra Martin said Middle Tennessee had only four healthy players, so two singles matches and a doubles match were forfeited to the Colonels.

In addition, Wise and No. 4 Tracy Parrella won handily, as did the No. 2 doubles team of Laura Hesselbrock and Beckie Mark.

Against UOS, only one singles match was played to the full three sets.

Martin said there were several positive points in the team's first four matches.

"They're beginning to be more consistent and more aggressive," she said. "They're looking for opportunities to get to the net."

Martin also pointed to improvements in the players' serves and groundstrokes.

Former captain returns

By Mike Morris
Staff writer

Homecoming doesn't roll around for three weeks, but for Chris Roberts, the entire season is a homecoming. In 1978, Chris Roberts was a captain on the Roberts university's football team and was named as a first team all-Ohio Valley Conference player.

He has returned this season not to play, but to coach.

Roberts, 30, is the Colonels' assistant offensive line coach. He is also completing a master's degree in health education.

Since graduation he has spent three and one-half years in the U.S. Army as a first lieutenant armor officer.

Roberts also spent three years coaching football at Christian County High School in Western Kentucky.

"I love coaching both high school kids and college kids," he said. "But I prefer coaching college. Kids are easier to work with because they are highly motivated and really want to be out there."

Roberts said the thing he likes most about coaching is the excitement of game day.

Pete Corrao, head offensive line coach, said he is glad to have more help coaching the six positions on the offensive line.

"Chris is full of enthusiasm. He works hard at full speed, he's a very positive person and he has a professional approach," Corrao said. "He will be a big help."

In addition to his duties as an assistant coach, Roberts is also assistant director of O'Donnell Hall.

"I have an advantage," Roberts said. "I was here before and know what goes on here."

Residents of O'Donnell say they feel Roberts will make a good assistant director because he knows how to keep things under control.

"I'm going to listen to their problems and do what I can to help them out," Roberts added. "But I'm not going to bend the rules. No one gets special treatment."

Roberts said, "The three most important things for a kid to know is to get an education, stay away from drugs and have a good time, but not to the point where someone gets hurt."

Triple threat

Tim Redmon, left, watches as Frank Kremblas throws to first base to pick off a West Virginia State runner and complete a triple play during the Colonels' doubleheader scrimmage Sunday at Hughes Field. The Colonels won 12-4 and 11-7. They will host Miami (Ohio), Louisville and Northern Kentucky this weekend.

Hopkins named counselor

By Brent Risner
Staff writer

The university's new athletic-academic counselor has already helped students in sports and now she's out to help them in the classroom.

Joan Hopkins Hopkins came to Richmond this year with some outstanding athletic credentials of her own.

A five-time All-American swimmer at Penn State, she was swimming coach at Northern Michigan, where she was named 1982 Division II National Coach of the Year by the College Swimming Coaches Association.

Born in Pennsylvania, Hopkins, 32, graduated from Penn State with a degree in social studies education. She later attended Lehigh University where she earned a master's degree in counselor education.

When her husband, Greg, was hired in May by the university as new food service director, his wife said she just "came along," leaving her coaching job behind.

Hopkins said the school she left had no academic-athletic counseling program, so she was responsible for advising her own athletes, usually 25 to 30 per year.

But she said she doesn't feel she's walking into unfamiliar territory. "I did these same things," she said. "Now I'm doing it... on a larger scale."

Currently, Hopkins said she is responsible for advising about 175 athletes.

In addition, she said she assists them in dropping classes, making career decisions and finding tutors. Plus, she teaches two orientation classes and runs a study table four nights a week as another service for student-athletes.

Perhaps Hopkins' most difficult chore is taking care of eligibility lists because of the stiffer standards and restrictions adopted by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Hopkins said her experience as a coach has given her an advantage. "As a coach, I know the rules pretty well to be able to keep them eligible," she said.

Credit hours per semester, grade point average, eligibility requirements for first-year students and records of transfer students are all things Hopkins must monitor.

She said new rules such as Proposition 48 have noticeably increased the workload for her office, the coaches and the registrar's office, but that they were "for the good of the athlete in the long run."

Another chronic problem across the country has been keeping athletes in school after completion of their athletic scholarships.

To combat this, Hopkins said she will encourage athletes to earn a degree in four years and will suggest summer school if it is needed. "Our biggest goal is to keep the kids eligible while they're in school and help them get a degree," she said.

Hopkins said she expects the new NCAA rules will have productive results academically. "Proposition 48 is going to put pressure on high schools which will turn around and help the whole system," she stated.

"We are part of the recruiting procedure, and it's a good part," she added. "It is definitely a plus when the parents can see that somebody is going to be looking out for the academic part of their boy or girl."

Hopkins said she gets immediate gratification from helping someone. "In coaching, you have to wait until the weekends..." she said.

NCAA needs these rules

A rule, according to Webster's Dictionary, is "an authoritative regulation for conduct, method, procedure, etc."

Translated, this usually means, "It's my way or the highway."

Some rules are designed to protect us, while others are based on what is believed to be morally right.

And then there are those rules put in force by that fortress of athletic wisdom, the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

This governing body was established in 1906 to regulate the jungle that is college athletics.

They had good intentions once, I think, but somewhere along the line they have gotten a little carried away.

The NCAA's concept of the ideal world for a collegiate student-athlete is not even close to reality.

As a result, they have developed some of the silliest regulations known to man over the years.

These bizarre rules could be an attempt to shelter these young men and women from the ravages of the dreaded "real world."

But many could just as easily have been adopted on a whim, with no thought at all given to what they mean or what they will do.

Let's look at a few examples of these incredible edicts:

➤ Athletes may not hold down campus jobs, no matter how broke they may be.

➤ Athletes' pictures may not appear on calendars that are given away, such as the one produced by Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, or sold for charitable causes.

➤ Athletes may not give their complimentary tickets to anyone except members of their own family, even if Mom and Dad live 3,000 miles away and have no car.

➤ Athletes may not borrow cars from boosters, even if they fill the tank.

You get the picture. The NCAA manual is chock-full of hundreds of pages of these glorious rules.

But why draw the line here? Perhaps there are areas in which the NCAA can crack the whip and tighten the belt a bit more than it already has.

Toward that end, we offer these new proposals to the NCAA:

Mike Marsee

➤ Athletes must purchase all clothing, shoes, etc. from Sears. They will wear no brand names of any type.

➤ Athletes may not watch professional sports on television or in person, lest they be influenced by the big bucks.

➤ Athletes shall not be allowed to have cars, trucks or motorcycles on campus. Only skateboards and roller skates will be permitted.

➤ Athletes may not have a girlfriend/boyfriend or wife/husband. Such unsavory characters could detract from their studies.

➤ Athletes must sign out in their dorm before leaving the campus. They will be asked to state where they are going, social security numbers of all people they will come in contact with and the phone number of a responsible adult in the area.

➤ Athletes must attend at least 40 percent of the cultural events offered on campus each semester.

➤ Athletes will not wear uniform numbers, nor will their names be listed in programs. This reduces the amount of individual attention given to a particular person.

➤ Athletes will be required to recite the pledge of allegiance every day before practice.

➤ Athletes may not so much as mention the name of a controlled substance. Any violation will result in the installation of a direct pipeline between the locker room toilets and the laboratory.

➤ Athletes will report to a school official weekly for heavy interrogation under very hot light bulbs regarding violations of these rules.

➤ Athletes may not read the sports pages. They will be particularly careful to avoid columns like this one, lest they take them too seriously.
