BELLES LETTRE GOES ON SALE

Canterbury Club Presents 10th Annual Edition of Student Creative Writing

The tenth edition of Belles Lettres, an anthology of student creative writing published by the Canterbury Club, is now on sale. The price is 25 cents a copy.

The decrease from last year in the number of students enrolled has naturally made much less the number of selections submitted to the editorial board, and, therefore, the number of pages has been cut to 24.

Madison College Conducts Survey

The Student Government Organization of Madison College, Harrisonburg, Va., is making a survey of certain aspects of college life on various campuses.

A questionnaire is sent to colleges asking such questions as: "Do you have an honor system? If so, to what does it apply? Do you have any joint faculty-student committee or committees? Is there any unusual restlessness among your students? If so, what measures are being taken for counteracting the restlessness? What are the major weaknesses of your student government?"

Helen Osborne, chairman of the Burnam Hall Student Government Organization, has received one of these questionnaires.

DR. CLARK IN CHAPEL TALK

U. K. Professor Says Americans Finally Awakening to Worth of Own Heritage

BLAME PLACED

Americans are finally beginning to awaken to a recognition of their own historical background and heritage, said Dr. Thomas D. Clark, head of the history department, University of Kentucky, and author of several books on the American scene, in an address at Eastern State Teachers College Wednesday morning.

Taking as his subject, "The Changing Attitude Toward the American Scene," Dr. Clark declared that teachers of American history stand condemned before the world for their failure to interpret the history of the nation as it should be.

The American publisher has sinned most of all in this respect, the author next, then the teacher, he continued. Some of the best sources of information about pioneer America—the writings of early travelers thru the country—have been neglected, he said, adding that most of these writers were also artists who drew sketches of the regions they traveled thru.

National figures like Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson, Woodrow Wilson, Robert E. Lee, and others have had many books and articles written about them and we may expect to see many more such writings about other great men, the speaker stated.

The American scene has now matured, since the "disillusioned 20's when novelists turned their backs on America," Dr. Clark said, and American authors have matured but there is still a veridical field for the writer about the "honest-to-goodness, everyday America."

Several series of books on the nation's life have recently been contributing much to the American scene, he said, including the Rivers of America series, The American Folkways books, and the Great Lakes series.

Spotlight Conducts Poll of Youth Opinion

SPOTLIGHT, a youth magazine of national circulation, is undertaking a poll of youth opinion to determine their general attitudes toward the prospective candidates in the November presidential election.

A POLL OF YOUTH OPINION

Appearing in this issue of the PROGRESS is a ballot on which each student may secretly show who would be his choice for the next president of the United States, and would in his opinion do the best job of winning the war and then of establishing the peace.

This ballot was received with a letter of explanation from SPOTLIGHT, a youth magazine, which is now conducting this poll to see what the youth of America think about the coming election.

Ballots have been sent to colleges all over the United States, and the poll when counted should be fairly representative of the opinion of America's youth.

Since we are American youth in an American college our opinions should be recorded in the poll with those of other colleges in the United States.

Immediately after the release of this paper a ballot box will be placed in the recreation room of the Student Union.

Each student may clip the ballot from his PROGRESS, vote, and place it in the ballot box. The results will be counted and sent to the poll editor of SPOTLIGHT, and will be published in the next issue of the PROGRESS.

In order that the poll may be completely representative of the campus it will be necessary for every student to cast his vote. So use the ballot that is provided and cast your vote.

From time to time this year, we have had numerous former 'Y' members visit us. They are the people who used to be 'Y' members, leaders, and staunch supporters.

We have been able to carry on this past year to a large extent because of you. We knew you were ever present, challenging, urging, encouraging, and wanting us to continue with the 'Y' traditions that you began and have continued through the years.

The 'darkest hour is just before the dawn,' and 'Where there's hope, there's life.' So with your backing us, all of us present members, with faith in God, shall try to do our best to be of beneficial, fruitful service to our church, our country, and college.

The letters and telegrams that we have received from Dr. Farris are a sort of season that is sprinkled about us as we begin any traditional 'Y' program.

We shall always be happy to have any suggestions for entertainment, retreats, programs, vespers, special service projects, or anything else you might like to share with us.

War and Peace—Leon Tolstoy
This is a new edition of the novel sometimes called the greatest book ever written. Walter Duranty says of it: 'Tolstoy's masterpiece, War and Peace, is truer today, far truer, than when it was written in 1864.'

How to Pass a Written Examination—Harry C. McKnown
The contents of this book might be helpful in about four more weeks. It provides practical help for any student taking written examinations.

None But The Lonely Heart—Richard Lewellyn
Written by the same author of How Green Was My Valley, this is a story which looks like straight through the eyes and blinks at nothing. It is a thrilling story, taut with suspense, and at times painfully real.

Other Campuses
On other campuses spring is fighting a hard battle to get its footing just as it is here; the students are looking toward the finish—the finish of a quarter and a year.

Marines At War—Edited by Aimee Crane

THE VOICE OF EASTERN

CRAGGED GOAL
Lydia Warren hated Laura Tudor, and everybody in Glendale knew it. Everybody knew too that Laura did not even condescend to hate Lydia. She merely scorned her.

Lydia had good reason for hating Laura. Her mother had been a maid to Laura's mother, and Lydia couldn't remember the day she hadn't endured scorn and insults at Laura's hands.

It was this hatred that goaded her to go to New York and get a job. It was the same hatred that caused her to marry Samuel D. Warren, whose money and property she loved but whom she grew to hate next to Laura.

Until Lydia returned to Glendale Laura had never really been aware of her. She never gave her a second thought even then. She realized that Lydia, rather than she herself, was now Glendale's wealthiest citizen.

Everybody knew that someday, sometime they would meet and clash, and what would be the result, and who would be victorious was a question that was often discussed. Men, women and children of all ages knew about the hatred between Laura Tudor and Lydia Warren.

Here Is Your War—Ernie Pyle
Out of the foxholes he shared with them, and from his own heart straight to the folks back home, comes Ernie Pyle's story of our soldiers' first big campaign abroad.

South From Corridor—Lieut. Comdr. John Morrill
The story of Lieut. Comdr. Morrill and his men is one of the most breath-taking to come out of the war, but it is told with the quiet understatement of a man to whom war is a job to be done.

Collected Poems of Henry Thoreau
That the poetry Henry Thoreau scrawled and labored over, and later neglected, has its defects as well as its values, no one would deny.

The Forgotten Ally—Pierre Van Paassen
From this book you will learn one of the best kept secrets of the war... you will understand why one of the decisive battles of this global war had to be fought in Africa's No-Man's Land.

University of Louisville: 'Miss Justice' was selected by a committee who chose Miss Lucille Coldiron for qualities of leadership, personality, scholastic accomplishments, activities, and for intelligently answering questions on current events.

PHYS. ED. NIGHTS

Every Tuesday and Thursday night at 7:00 o'clock a solid stream of lovely co-eds wends its way out the back door of the SUB to the Health Building on the way to Phys. Ed. One hour later at 8:00 o'clock this same drove of girls comes out of the Health Building, but oh, dear, what a change has been wrought!

The neatly dressed, lively girls who entered with lipstick and powder on and their hair arranged just so emerge from the building with shiny faces minus makeup, weary bodies, and their hair so many reasonably exact facsimiles of Hairless Joe.

In the Little Gym thirteen girls are madly batting tennis balls back and forth, under, over, and around a net. The balls don't seem to be aimed for anybody in particular—it's what you would call free-lance style.

A glance in the Big Gym reveals a whole string of things going on. The gym is divided in the middle by a net stretched across it and in one end there are two scrambling, fighting basketball teams running all over the floor—ah, what skill, what form, what speed!

The other half of the gym is just one big surprise package after the other. In the middle a game of cage ball is going on. Those who don't know the art of cage ball just pick about twelve feminine Atlases on each side of a net throwing a diminutive world (the cage ball) back and forth across the net.

In another corner a girl is jumping the rope and she jumps until she literally falls in a heap. Close by a game of shuffle board is shuffling, in another corner a few little bodies are skimming the cat on some bars, and scattered around all over the place are girls pounding their legs against the floor and making a queer thup, thup sound.

Suddenly a signal is given that it is time to go and more energy is displayed in running for the locker room and showers than has been shown all during the hour.

Students Meet for Discussion With Dr. Schieb

A group of approximately 25 students met in Dr. Anna A. Schieb's classroom in the library on May 2 from 4 to 6 p. m. and discussed evidences of education, what is offered by the college, and how the classroom should present a satisfactory physical, social and cultural environment.

almost touching Laura's machine. She must either pass or drive more slowly. The road ran along a steep embankment. Fifty feet below cragged rocks lay as though in wait for booty.

About a quarter of an hour later a patrolman discovered Lydia's mangled body in the twisted remains of her car, smashed against a boulder only a short distance from the jagged rocks where on the following and her chauffeur both dead.

This week this column is featuring "just another Texas longhorn who came to the Bluegrass and enjoyed the grazing around"—Dr. Frederic P. Giles, the head of our Art Department.

Dr. Giles was born some years ago out where the West begins, or to be more specific at McKinney, Tex., near Fort Worth.

He has spent quite a bit of his life attending school. He is a graduate of Southern Methodist University with the degree of Bachelor of Music. After graduating from Southern Methodist he went to North Texas State College, where he received his A.B. degree. For awhile he studied piano and composition toward his Masters at the American Conservatory in Chicago. He received his Masters degree in Art from Peabody College, Nashville, and later took his Ph.D. (Art and Philosophy) from Peabody.

Dr. Giles was born in time to be in the other war. He dodged shells in France for seventy-six days straight without relief. He thinks war is crazy but that humanity is going to have it as long as time lasts. He says if it were

BLIND SPOTS

Derby Day

Whether it's derby to you or derby, it was a great day again in Louisville and the results a great shock to too many people's pocketbooks. Not so, with a few of Eastern's co-eds. Gene Harrison won $7 on Pensive.

Once again to the tennis courts we go for fun and sun tan, but the weather hasn't been very accommodating lately. Was the winter that was in process last week Dogwood or Blackberry? Which ever it was it caught some poor gals briefly clad on the tennis court and almost froze them before they could gallop back to the dorm for warmth and comfort. That's the way with old man weather, and why doesn't he make up his mind? Doesn't he know that he has to keep up with the tradition—straw hats begin with derby day.

Sun Tan Oil

The most popular spot on the campus on Wednesday and Saturday is one high and inaccessible to a few, but to the residents of Burnam Hall it is a favorite haunt . . . Burnam's roof. There is where those lovely sun tans are acquired, or rather there is where that sun burn is gotten that becomes first blisters and then later, with constant baking, emerges into a smooth tan.

Paint

The lobby of Burnam Hall is undergoing spring housecleaning, and it is a rather thorough cleaning, too. The walls are being painted a beautiful cream that should add a lot to the place when the furniture is back in place again.

Former Students

According to the Kentucky Kernel, Ann Scott Maher, former student is giving a joint graduation recital. Best of luck to you Scotty.

Rural School Organization is Active

The organization of students interested in rural organization education, sponsored by Mrs. Emma Y. Case, is continuing with growing interest. Recently large groups of them have met for various discussions with members of the faculty.

Professor R. A. Edwards, of the training school talked with the group on buildings and grounds, their care, equipment, and other essentials. Miss Virginia Story, teacher of the second grade in the training school and Miss Germania Wingo, fourth grade teacher, led demonstrations and discussions of seat work in their classrooms in the Can-mack Building. The students took back the seat work to the recreation room of Burnam Hall where it was kept for several days in order that all of them might examine it.

Miss Katherine Evans, Rural Demonstration School teacher, led the group in a discussion of activities of a rural school and answered questions pertaining to organizing a rural school with only one teacher. The students have been meeting in small groups for discussions with Mrs. Case of their own rural school problems. The next leader of the group will be Miss Mary Eva Hite, who is on the campus as a special consultant helping the teachers. She is from the South Carolina State Department of Education. The members of the rural education group have expressed appreciation that time and effort is being given to their problems by the faculty and Mrs. Case.

The Music Department of the University of Kentucky will present a former Eastern student, Miss Ann Scott Maher, soprano, in a graduation recital at 4 p. m. Sunday, May 14.

Miss Maher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Maher of Washington, D. C., is a candidate for an AB degree in music. While attending Eastern, Miss Maher was active in the glee club and all musical activities. At the university, she has been a member of the Women's Glee Club and Choisters.

Her selections consist of: "Invocation (Sommi Dei)" from Rada-misto, Handel-Bibb; "Pergi, Amor," from 13 Nozze di Figaro, Mozart; "The May Night," Brahms; "A Dream," Greig; "The First Primrose," Greig; "Why," Tchaikowsky; "Vissi D'Arte, Vissi D'Amore" from Tosca, Puccini; "The Star," Rogers; "Visions," Sjeberg; "Moun-tains," Rasbach.
