THE GRADUATE DIVISION

Purpose: The Graduate Division offers work leading to the degree of Master of Arts in Education. The graduate program is planned to meet the needs of teachers, supervisors, and administrators of the public schools.

- Admission Requirements: (1) Applicants for admission to the Graduate Division must hold a Bachelor's degree from a standard institution... (2) Official credentials should be filed with the Registrar... (3) Transferred credits shall not be used to reduce either the resident requirements or minimum number of quarter hours required... (4) Admission to the Graduate Division does not necessarily imply admission to candidacy for the degree of Master of Arts in Education.

The registration fee for graduate students is $2.00 a quarter hour.

Student Aid Society, Inc., Handles Loans to Needy Classmen on Campus

"KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: that we do hereby associate ourselves and our successors in office to form and to become a body corporate with the following rights and duties, to wit: The above preamble is from the articles of incorporation which changed the Student Loan Committee at Eastern to The Student Aid Society, Inc., in 1934. The "we" includes Noel B. Cuff, Chairman of the Society, G. M. Brock, Secretary-Treasurer, and other members of the Student Aid Society. The "rights and duties" consist of administering loans, scholarships, and special awards according to standard policies. The primary purpose of the loan fund is to help worthy students complete their education. And more than 500 students have been aided in recent years, most of whom are a credit to the College and to the Commonwealth. The loan fund has been created largely by gifts from different individuals and organizations. For example, recently a check for $500.00 was received with the request that the donor be anonymous and that the money be used for loans to students in accordance with the present and future policies of the Student Aid Society. It is also a matter of interest that the College's seniors last year contributed three $25 bonds to the Society. Likewise, a will made by a friend of the College increases the probability that eventually we can meet the applications which pour in during "lean" years. In the past it has been necessary to make only small loans in order to accommodate as many students as possible. Preference in granting loans has been given to upper-class students. In fact, applications are not considered until students have established themselves on the Campus with satisfactory grades for at least 12 weeks. Intelligence, personal honesty, and other factors are considered too in granting loans. The plan of lending money only to high-type students—though their personal integrity is often their best security—is probably the explanation for the fact that "losses" are low. They have totaled less than $500.00 in the history of the College; notwithstanding the fact that several loans have been made to students who could not have borrowed money from other sources to continue their education. One of the many interesting cases on record is an application from a boy for $2.00. He wanted it at once, because a check from home had failed to arrive and he had gone without food for two days. The loan was granted without the usual formalities. (And the check came the next day.) As a rule, however, loans are made only on duly approved notes and at a legal rate of interest.

Secretary Allen received a telephone call from a party in Corbin last week, stating that there was a young first baseman there who would like to have a trial with the Smokies. He wanted to come in Sunday. Sec. Allen told the caller to have the big boy report Saturday if he could. Saturday's drill was about half over when a taxi drove up and the tall Kentuckian climbed out and made his way to the locker room. He was soon dressed and out on the field. After he had warmed up a few minutes Lewis let his share first base with Walter Lance in the infield work. It was then that Garrett started amazing Lewis, Bob Finley and the other players, as well as the railbirds by firing the ball around the bases like a rifle bullet. In a few minutes Lewis yelled for Lance to get back on first base. "That boy is a pitcher," Lewis told Finley.

The fact that the Fourth Floor, Beckham and McCreary, and Knox's teams have lost their first game, is in no way moving them from the limelight, when one remembers how Evelyn Hunt controls the bat for Beckham and McCreary, how Gibson's team bubbles with enthusiasm, and how Adams catches for the first and second floor.

Mr. D. T. Ferris and Mr. J. Dorland Coates will participate in the workshop program but on a part-time basis. Several other members of the faculty have special assignments in these off-campus centers.

Students, undergraduate and graduate, who attend the workshops will be enrolled in the summer school and will be permitted to earn eight quarter hours of resident credit. The workshop at Hindman will be opened on Thursday, June 3, and the centers at Pineville and Hazard will begin their work on Monday, June 7. The work in all centers will continue for a period of five weeks. It is estimated that approximately 200 teachers will be enrolled in this program.

ART CLASSES AT EASTERN ARE POPULAR

Type of Instruction and Nature of Study Appeal to Majority of Students

GAIN MUCH SKILL

By DR. FRED P. GILES Head of Art Department The organization of the Art Department in Eastern is based upon the idea of Spencer's philosophy of education: art study helps to make a more complete life for the individual. We know that there exists a difference between the ability to achieve—in the creative sense and the ability to discriminate as a consumer of art, or as a potential teacher of the arts. Both types of abilities obtain enjoyment, not necessarily according to the quality or the degree of their participation. Recognizing this range of capacity and interest of individuals, Eastern aims to provide curricula for the individual interested in art experiences as general education, avocation, or recreation, as well as for the student planning a professional career as art teacher.

Students gain much skill in drawing from nature, fruits and flowers. They enjoy drawing each other and many students take art courses for pleasure as well as for electives in their college course.

The realization of these aims depends largely upon our sense of values. We as a nation are more art conscious today than ever before. We expect to find art quality not only in great music, painting and sculpture, but in every art expression of man. Therefore, Eastern's art department attempts to promote adequate training for all its students, whether they expect to be teachers of art education, creative artists, or consumers of art.

EMPHASIS ON EXPRESSION

We recognize that good taste is acquired or learned and we measure results in appreciations. But appreciation of quality is not enough, therefore emphasis is laid on expression in the different art classes. While recognizing the great importance of original work, we know that the creation of new art forms is facilitated by technical training. Attempts to conceal the lack of mastery of technique by recourse to the glamour of a new fad is unworthy of the true artist in any medium. Capable instructors and eager students always make an effective combination in the pursuit of education. Furthermore, the pleasant informality of the laboratory and the studio is the most favorable environment for the growth of

SPECIAL COMMERCE COURSES

Will be Offered During Summer; Department Has Three Curricula

HAS ADVANTAGES

THE COMMERCE DEPARTMENT During the past few years the Commerce Department has had no difficulty in placing all graduates in lucrative and responsible positions in teaching and industry. Indeed many undergraduates have been placed in desirable positions. Even during the depression years qualified graduates were in great demand.

At present the department has three curricula. One is designed to prepare teachers for high school commerce. A second curriculum prepares students to take positions in accountancy and general business fields; while a third course, a one-year streamlined curriculum, prepares office workers, stenographers, secretaries, clerks, etc. This short course has been especially popular since its organization, approximately two years ago.

According to a bulletin put out by the Commerce Department commercial education may be used advantageously:

- 1. To earn money while in college by part-time work.
2. To do one's college work more efficiently—taking notes in classes, typing notebooks, etc.
3. To simplify one's personal living—keeping personal accounts, writing letters, etc.
4. To teach commercial education.
5. To do office work, including defense work.

Your Alumni Association

Eastern's Alumni Association includes all graduates of the college and all two-year graduates of the old Normal School before Eastern became a full four-year college. ACTIVE ALUMNI are those who pay the regular annual dues of one dollar. Former students may become Associate Members of the organization by paying the regular membership dues. Associate Members receive all the services that go to Active Members, but they are not eligible to vote nor to hold office in the Association.

For the past year Miss Mary Frances McKinney has acted as Executive Secretary of the Association in the place formerly held by Mr. Sam Beckley who is now in the armed services of the United States. Miss Lou Colley has had charge of all secretarial work and the editing of the publications gotten out by this office.

NEWS LETTER

The Alumni Association has had as its major news project this year the publication of frequent publication at intervals of an ALUMNI NEWS LETTER. With the help and support of the college this NEWS LETTER has gone out to all the men in the armed forces whose names we have been able to obtain, and to all Active Alumni. This is in addition to the EASTERN PROGRESS, the college newspaper, which has gone out regularly to the same two groups.

The Alumni Office has made a valiant effort to keep a correct file of the frequently-changing addresses of the men in service. How well they have succeeded can be judged by the list published in this paper. All alumni and friends of the college and the Association are urged to report any interesting information about these men and to send to the Alumni Office the correct address of any who are not included in this published list.

Many alumni not in the service have helped a great deal by writing the office about the men whom they know. Faculty members who write to and hear from the men in service share their news with the Alumni Office.

That both the ALUMNI NEWS LETTER and the file of addresses is appreciated by the men in the service of our country and their friends is indicated by the huge file of letters of appreciation that have come to the Alumni Office from all over the globe. There is seldom a mail that does not bring more than one such letter. The boys in India, Australia, New Guinea, Dutch Harbor and North Africa, as well as those still in the states, write grateful and interesting letters in reply to the Alumni News Letter. Some have invited friends nearby through this means; others have gotten addresses they wanted. All have been interested in knowing where their friends and classmates are. All are glad to get the news of the campus they love. We have many letters from other alumni asking for addresses of those men in service and other friends.

The Alumni Secretary has tried even with limited secretarial help, to answer all letters that have come to the office this year. Proof that the men overseas, in particular, appreciate these letters is shown in the promptness with which they answer each letter, although in many cases no answer is necessary or expected.

The Executive Committee of the Alumni Association discontinued, for this year, the publication of the Alumni Directory. As long as alumni addresses are changing so rapidly such a directory becomes almost valueless.

HIGHEST TYPE IN HOME EC DEPARTMENT

Equipment and Course of Study Combine to Make Interesting Work

GRADS GET JOBS

By Miss Mary King Burrier The home economics department at Eastern is in a wing of the Arts Building. There is a large sewing laboratory with a fitting room, machines, a cutting table, triple mirror, and tables for 24 girls. The boys of the industrial arts department built the cabinets for storage.

The food laboratory is equipped with stainless steel-topped desks and with gas ranges for use by 24 girls. There are three unit kitchens, one with coal range, another with a kerosene range, and the third with an electric range. The cabinets in the kerosene kitchen were made by the boys of the industrial arts department. They also made the maple tables in the food laboratory. The living and dining room are furnished as rooms in a home would be furnished. A lecture room and textile laboratory complete the equipment of the department.

The department offers a course in vocational home economics which qualifies the graduates to teach in vocational high schools in the state. Every effort is made to have high standards of workmanship and scholastic training. In clothing the girls learn not only to make simple cotton dresses and underwear but also silk and wool dresses as well as tailored garments. The foods classes have been quite conscious of rationing and have learned how to have good meals even though there are limits to the number of points one may have. The girls have enjoyed experimenting with sugar substitutes, meat stretchers and meat alternate menus. They believe that a variety of foods with milk and succulent vegetables are essential for good health. They practice in their own choice of food by conducting an educational program for the campus by in the college book store to let food help to make healthy. The most important health is the effect of different foods on white rats which are fed by the advanced foods classes.

The girls in the department are given a specialized course in addition to the education courses taught in the education department. The girls teach for twelve weeks in a high school under a qualified critic teacher. To be sure that these girls can apply the things they have been taught in care of the home, living with others, feeding the family, well-cooked and balanced meals on an average budget, the students spend six weeks in the Home Management House. This house is on South Second Street on the campus. The girls plan, cook, and serve the meals, do the marketing, and do all the housework.

The students of the home economics department are very loyal to the department and to each other. They are a conscientious, hard working group. Every graduate of Eastern's home economics department has a position. Some of the graduates are married, some are home demonstration agents, others Farm Security agents, but most of them are working as teachers.

Following graduation, each Waac will report at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., after which she will be reassigned to another station for the purpose of relieving a man for combat duty. The day after the April 23 graduation there will be 300 new Waacs on the Eastern campus to replace those lost through graduation. In this manner, the total complement of the unit will be maintained at the 600-student figure.

Disciplinary action invoked for infractions of regulations usually involves revocation of privileges, confinement to barracks and, in extreme cases (none of which has occurred at the unit here) can result in dismissal of the guilty Waac.

All matters of this kind are handled by the W.A.A.C. officers, according to Colonel Hammond, who added that he and other male members of his staff "often advised the W.A.A.C. officers in cases involving the infraction of rules, but we have nothing whatsoever to do with carrying out disciplinary measures."

Life Not All Work Neither is the Waacs' life "all work and no play." The girls gather around a baby grand piano in the day room of Burnam Hall at the slightest provocation and with Auxiliary First Class Evelyn O'Neil, Washington, D. C., at the keyboard, swing out with impromptu vocal concerts. The Waac repertoire includes everything from the old reliable "St. Louis Blues" to the very latest version of "Deep in the Heart of Texas."

The girls manage to "cut a rug" on occasions with the aid of a big juke box located in the basement of Burnam Hall. (The indoor tile pool at the college is available for use of the Waacs) and similar diversions are engaged in by the girls during their free time, but the biggest disappointment of Colonel Hammond's existence came recently when he was informed that a Kentucky bus line would not be able, because of federal regulations to transport Waacs to Fayette County for tours of the thoroughbred horse farms there.

SULLIVAN HALL

Such things as tennis in the wide halls and firecrackers going off in the middle of the night take place quite often. The best thing about it is that no one minds because, after all, if they're not doing it, they're sitting up night thinking of new things to do.

One of the latest is hiding alarm clocks timed to go off at frequent intervals in some else's room. Another is to take the hinges off the doors and pour water over the transom.

The community bathrooms have become like forums. While engaging in brawls over who has the next bath, everything that has any relation at all to the campus is discussed. Boys, that is in general cause there aren't many to be specific, are the chief topic of conversation. And that ain't all.

To be serious though, the fact that all the freshmen live together makes for convenience in studying. There is a study room downstairs where girls can go to work if the hall is not quiet enough.

Then too, a freshman girls has a better chance of becoming acquainted with the other girls in her class if she lives in the same hall as they do.

The department offers opportunities to learn and operate; typewriter, adding machine, calculating machine, ditto machine, dictaphone, mimeograph, mimeoscopes, stenotype, check protector, addressograph, posting machine, files, etc.

Courses offered in the department include penmanship, elementary accounting, principles of accounting, advanced accounting, cost accounting, income tax accounting, auditing, business mathematics, typewriting, office practice, economic history of Europe, economic history of America, principles of economics, economic problems, value and distribution, money and banking, public finance and taxation, business organization, investments, business law, advertising, business English, marketing, shorthand, dictation and transcription, secretarial practice, methods of teaching bookkeeping.

Office is the keeping of as complete a record as possible of each of the alumni. Each individual's folder contains personal and educational data, teaching, business and professional "experience" records, photograph at the time of graduation, and news clippings. The college subscribes to a news clipping service organization that supplies the Association with news of marriages, births, deaths, unusual experiences of graduates, etc.

Each year the Association sends out questionnaires to secure the correct mailing addresses and to bring the professional records of alumni up to date. These records are available for use by superintendents and others seeking services of alumni.

ALUMNI PROGRAMS In the past, the Alumni Association has sponsored the Eastern Breakfast at the annual Kentucky Education Association meeting in Louisville, the Alumni Banquet which is held on the campus each year during commencement, Homecoming during the football season each fall, county or city group meetings in various parts of the State throughout the year, and class reunions. As soon as conditions, now beyond our control, make it possible to do so, the Association expects to continue its sponsorship of these programs.

MEMORIAL HALL One of the buildings on the Eastern campus that carries with it deep and cherished memories of the past is Memorial Hall. The history of the building dates back to 1783. The Old Memorial was razed in 1933. Memorial Hall annex was completed in 1920. This building has recently been remodeled and now furnishes accommodations for 60 men students.

A three-story brick building, occupying the extreme western part of the campus, overlooking two asphalt tennis courts and New Stalend Farm, and located behind Beckham, Miller, and McCreary Halls, Memorial Hall stands as a landmark and the seat of cherished memories and pleasures for many. The hall seems to grow on one and, in so doing, it lends its bit toward forming and cementing pleasurable memories. Many men students, in the past, being assigned to this hall, have found it so romantic that they have spent their entire college career rooming in this dormitory. Many and many have been the personages that have gone out the front door of Memorial Hall and made their influence felt on the plastic medium of our youth by means of the increments gained while rooming in historic Memorial Hall.

Last quarter, when Eastern girls were still living in Burnam, the three new Men's Halls were, as we thought, territory to remain unexplored. We knew they had showers, floors that never looked dirty, and in other words, a sort of college edition of the Waldorf. But time goes by... and here we are.

The halls, in case you've never seen them are three in number; Miller, McCreary, and Beckham. Each has six suites, accommodating eight girls per suite. Every ground-floor suite shares an outside entrance with the suite above it.

At first, the telephones were the chief item of interest. Everyone called everyone else up for no other reason than to push the button and yell "Hey! Is there?" Now, they serve almost as alarm clocks. Every college has a few people who insist upon getting up at the crack of dawn. For the first time in history, there is some use for them. They phone everyone else to wake them.

Another change that the new living quarters has brought about is in the value of nickels. No, it isn't poker, it's the coke machine over in Beckham rec-room. Every night someone pokes a frowsy head into your room and asks, "Who has two nickels for a dime?" Some day an Easterner with over-developed business instincts will lay in a supply of the things and sell them for ten cents apiece.

The latest wrinkle is the girls' baseball tournament. Every hall has a team and the variety of softball played would make an expert's hair stand on end. The rules change every game and the strategy devised would have won the African campaign three weeks before it started.

All in all, it's lot of fun. The one disadvantage, that of not being able to go from hall to hall all night, is overcome by the telephones, so, we're all happy.
