Alleged killer caught near Waco

Eastern student is grandson of victim

Four murder warrants sought against Rogers

Accused serial killer Glenn Rogers is led from the Kentucky State Police Post by Detective Bob Stephens while the crowd boomed and shouted names of alleged victims at Rogers.

By LANNY BRANNOCK
Assistant news editor

Detectives and officers from Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana and California met with Kentucky State Police yesterday afternoon in the Hanly Funderburk Building to lobby for the extradition of the man whose alleged "killing spree" ended when police captured him near Waco Monday afternoon.

Since Sept. 29, Glenn Edward Rogers left a trail of evidence and murder warrants linking him to the deaths of four women and spurring a coast-to-coast manhunt.

Rogers was located on a tip from his cousins in Lee County and was arrested by state police east of Richmond Monday afternoon after a high speed car chase.

Florida is one of states where Rogers is wanted for murder.

Tampa homicide detective Julie Massucci said she does not care who gets him first, as long as someone does. She said she was familiar with all the cases and said there were no common connections.

Tampa detective Randy Bell said the four governors of the respective states are talking to Gov. Brereton Jones about the extradition.

"He was on a roll," Bell said of Rogers' alleged spree.

The Ford Festiva Rogers was driving belonged to alleged victim Tina Marie Cribbs, whose body was found nine days ago, Massucci said.

One Eastern student was familiar with Glenn Rogers long before the alleged serial killer was apprehended near Richmond Monday.

Victor Hyland, a sophomore chemistry major and linebacker on the football team, is the grandson of Mark Peters, who police think was Rogers' first victim in a string of murders from California to Florida.

Rogers was wanted by police for questioning in the death of Peters, 73, of Hamilton, Ohio, whose decomposed body was found tied to a chair in a shack near a relative's house in Beattyville last year.

Hyland said his maternal grandfather befriended Rogers in 1993 after Rogers' mother, Edna Rogers, asked Peters to let him stay at his place for a couple of weeks because he had gotten into some trouble in Lexington.

Hyland said Rogers stayed with his grandfather approximately two weeks before both men disappeared.

Hyland said his aunt, Joan Burkhart, who lived near Peters in Hamilton, became concerned and reported the men missing after she had not heard from them for a few weeks.

Peters was last seen alive with Rogers and an unknown woman at a garage and gas station in Hamilton, Hyland said.

He said police finally traced Rogers to a relative's property in Beattyville, where Hyland's grandfather's body was found months

Campus barraged by national media

By DON PERRY AND LANNY BRANNOCK

A slew of reporters, more than a dozen TV crews and even the nationally televised show "A Current Affair" flocked to campus Monday night to try to get the scoop on the Glenn Rogers story.

Rogers, who is a suspect in at least five murders, was held at the Kentucky State Police Post (across from the Begley Building) for more than five hours while being questioned by police and FBI agents.

During those five hours, the Alumni Coliseum parking lot filled with eight satellite trucks and several media vehicles, as well as nearly 100 spectators who stopped by to watch the proceedings in 25-degree temperatures.

Many of the spectators were students who heard on the news Rogers was being held at the building and stopped by to try to get a glimpse of the nationally wanted man.

"There's too much press here," complained Larry Shelton, a 20-year-old sophomore from Lawrenceburg.

As rain began falling, "A Current Affair" crew members rented a tent to set up beside the police post. The crew also ordered pizza from Domino's in anticipation of a long wait for Rogers to appear.

While several camera crews jockeyed for position to get a shot of the parade from the post door to the cruiser waiting to take him to the Madison County Detention Center, students and spectators gathered to try to get their faces on camera.

"It's sort of exciting in a strange sort of way. It's scary to think there are people like that out there, and he's so close to home," said Jeff

Athletic budget gets 68 percent of fees

By MATT McCARTY
Managing editor

Students who pay $110 a year for activity fees and don't know where the money goes aren't alone — the university doesn't know where all the money goes either.

More than half of the student activity fee is budgeted toward athletics, but the rest of the $2,533,154 that will be collected this year will benefit some portion of student services, but exactly which portion isn't known.

James Clark, the director of planning and budget, said the university isn't concerned with following dollars, but in keeping the budget balanced.

"I don't think we should allocate student activity fees down to the dollar for everything," Clark said. "I think trying to break it down a dollar for a dollar... causes everyone concerned problems."

The university breaks down money spent on athletics because of NCAA requirements, said Doug Whitlock, executive assistant to the president.

ATHLETIC FEES?

Eastern will collect $2.5 million in student activity fees this year. For every $110 students pay for activity fees, $74.91 is allocated to the athletic budget.

"Once (the money) goes into the pool, it doesn't matter what you call it," Baugh said. "(The university) spends the same amount of dollars."

Joe Hoffman, student government president, said while he thinks the $110 students pay is a fair amount, he doesn't think it should be used to offset losses in other areas.

"To just raise a fee because you're losing money in other places isn't right," Hoffman said.

Student government is budgeted $20,000 a year, which doesn't

Council approves increase in tuition

By DON PERRY
Editor

FRANKFORT— Students will pay $30 more in tuition each of the next two years after the Council on Higher Education approved a 3.6 percent tuition increase for next year and another 3.4 percent increase for 1997-98.

The increase, the smallest in recent years, is less than the 6 percent average increase nationwide and met the approval of university administrators.

President Hanly Funderburk said he was glad the council approved a low tuition increase and asked the state to foot a great deal of the cost, with a 7.2 percent budget increase for statewide schools.

Funderburk said the slight increase was a break for students who may be accustomed to tuition hikes year after year.

The upcoming increase is the third in the last four years, but also the smallest. Last year, tuition at Eastern and all regional universities increased 6.3 percent, or $50 per semester.

closer to 10 percent," Funderburk said. "So this is a great deal better."

The increase, which will have students paying $870 a semester to attend Eastern next year, will increase to $900 a semester in the fall of 1997.

Ken Walker, CHE deputy executive director of financing, said the increase will give universities an additional $1 million in tuition revenue next year alone.

Lancaster parking deemed dangerous

By TIM MOLLETTE
Sports editor

If Julie Conley leaves campus to eat dinner, she usually returns to no parking spaces left in Lancaster Lot — the closest parking available to her room in Combs Hall.

"Most of the time, if I move in the evening, I don't have a spot when I get back," said Conley, a pre-vet major from Oil Springs. "Around that time, the lot is usually full of commuters who park there to go to their night classes."

Illegal parking by commuters and students walking across four lanes of traffic to reach campus makes parking in Lancaster Lot troublesome and dangerous for Eastern residents, but while the complaints are obvious, the solutions are not.

"It's a problem we've had several complaints of," student senate president Joe Hoffman said. "It's one of the most under-utilized and dangerous lots on campus."

Assistant parking director Mark Jozefowicz said commuter ticketing remains constant at Lancaster Lot, but the problem won't just vanish.

"Just guessing, I would say we average 25 to 50 tickets a day at Lancaster," Jozefowicz said. "We could write more than that, but we don't have the manpower to be out there as much as we would like."

Jozefowicz said increased towing in the lot may decrease the number of commuters parking in the lot.

With no crosswalk between Lancaster Lot and campus, students are asked to walk to the light at the intersection of Lancaster Avenue and Barnes Mill Road to cross over to campus.

Many pedestrians are not doing that, Jozefowicz said, and the number of jaywalkers and the chance for accidents are increasing.

"We've had several near-misses there, especially with people making a prohibited left-hand turn exiting the lot," Jozefowicz said.

Hoffman said several possible solutions to the problems at Lancaster have been discussed with the president's office, but all have been dismissed for different reasons.

Overpasses and underpasses for pedestrians crossing in front of Lancaster Lot have been considered, but Doug Whitlock, executive assistant to the president, said both are expensive endeavors, in addition to other drawbacks.

"Both would be difficult to make handicap-accessible," Whitlock said. "With an underpass, you also have the problem of security."

The prospect of installing a traffic light and crosswalk in front of the lot is not a possibility, Whitlock said, because Lancaster Avenue is a state-owned road.

"With a marked crosswalk so near to that point, state standards don't allow them to put another traffic light and crosswalk that close," Whitlock said.

Not everyone goes home for holidays

By CHAD QUEEN

During the Thanksgiving holiday, many students travel home and enjoy turkey, dressing and all of the fixings. Some students, whether by choice or not, remain here in Richmond for the holidays.

Amber Culver, director of housing, helps students arrange places to stay during the break. For $8 a night, any student can apply to stay in Brockton Apartments for Thanksgiving. The housing office uses Brockton because of the kitchenettes and refrigerators.

Culver's office also arranges housing for students during other holiday breaks. If you need a place to stay during Thanksgiving or any other holiday when the dorms are closed, check with the housing office.

There has been some interest in Thanksgiving housing. Culver said she expects a few more applicants.

"Six have applied currently, and we expect to pick up a couple more," Culver said.

She said that basketball, volleyball, football and the cross-country teams have talked to her about housing during the holiday.

Because of practice and two basketball games over the break, sophomore Laphelia Doss will miss Thanksgiving at home for another year.

"Thanksgiving is a time when the majority of people in a family come together, but once again, I'm here for Thanksgiving," Doss said.

International students are a group that need holiday housing on a regular basis, as some students live many miles from home.

Titus N'geno is a sophomore track runner from Kenya who said there should be more done.

"The school should take into consideration people who can't go home," N'geno said. "The charge should be $4 instead of $8 per night."

Students that are on campus or in the area for Thanksgiving can still partake of the traditional Thanksgiving dinner. The Harvest Worship Center, located at 621 S. Keeneland Drive, is having a turkey dinner at 7 p.m. on Wednesday Nov. 22.

Home Meals Delivery is also having a free turkey dinner for students who aren't going home at noon on Thanksgiving in the Baptist Student Union. Dianna Ackerman, manager of the program, prefers students make reservations by 1 p.m. weekdays until Wednesday, Nov. 22, by calling the Baptist Student Union at 621-3294.

Higher Ed. Council approves $18 million building for Eastern

Building will house college of social and behavioral sciences

By DON PERRY
Editor

FRANKFORT— A proposed academic building at Eastern tops the list of 259 capital request projects for state schools approved by the Council on Higher Education.

The $18 million academic building, which Ken Walker, CHE deputy executive director of financing, said is supposed to house six departments and 16 programs in the college of social and behavioral sciences, awaits approval by the General Assembly when it meets in January.

President Hanly Funderburk said he was happy to see the academic building was first on the list of priority projects, but said he was more pleased that the CHE proposed a 7.2 percent budget increase for all state universities.

The proposed increase must also pass through the General Assembly and then meet the approval of Governor-elect Paul Patton, who will be in office when the process of making the budget begins.

"The council adopted a very good recommendation to the governor," Funderburk said. "This funding formula is key to higher education."

CHE also washed its hands of the University of Kentucky and Murray State arguments over issues concerning "cooperative delivery of higher education services in Paducah."

CHE chairman Charles Miller said as far as he was concerned, the council had reached a decision on the matter and would not discuss it any more.

He said the decision was not welcomed by either party.

The most discussed topic outlined in the four-page paper detailing the council's decision was giving Murray State control of the Crisp Building, which is a newly remodeled academic facility originally donated to Paducah Community College.

Miller quoted Malcolm X in explaining the decision.

"You can't legislate goodwill," he said. The council also voted to extend the current Equal Opportunities Plan for an additional year.

The council outlined rationale for the extension, including wanting to wait until national decisions were made concerning affirmative action considerations in the university admissions process.

24-hour open house on hold

By LANNY BRANNOCK
Assistant news editor

With a proposal for 24-hour open house sitting on President Hanly Funderburk's desk, student government association president Joe Hoffman said the students should know what is going to happen to it.

"I definitely think something should be done. He needs to act on this," Hoffman said. "I hoped to do something with it this semester, but it will be next semester before anything gets done on it," Funderburk said.

The proposal, which would allow weekend 24-hour open house at Todd, Dupree and Martin halls, has been submitted to the advisory committee chaired by the vice president for student affairs, Tom Myers.

One copy of an information packet compiled by the Residence Hall Association and Jeanette Crockett, dean of student life, is circulating throughout the committee.

When the committee has finished reading through the information, Funderburk can sign the proposal, ask for more research, bring it before the Board of Regents Jan. 20, or do nothing at all. The earliest the proposal could be put into use, if at all, would be the 1996 fall semester.

"I want everyone on the Administrative Council to have a say in this," Funderburk said.

According to information in the packet, four state-funded schools already have 24-hour open house in some form.

Murray State, Louisville, Northern Kentucky and Western Kentucky already allow the visitation, but all guard against co-habitation.

"This is still a touchy issue with a lot of people. We still have parents who ask us if we still do bed checks," Crockett said.

Crockett said if the proposal passed, it would help make the university more marketable and give the students options on housing.

"Currently, the age of the residence hall population is changing. It is getting much older. It's a different lifestyle. The fact that someone might drop off a date at 3 a.m. and go up to her room is nothing. It's like the middle of the day for some," Crockett said.

About 60 percent of the students in Martin Hall are over 21. One third of the students in Todd/Dupree are over 21. Students must live in the residence halls until they reach that age.

"There is no incentive for a person which is 21 to stay in a residence hall," Hoffman said.

"He needs to either say 'yes,' he is going to act on it, or 'no,' he's not. Keeping this thing lost in the archives isn't good enough. Students deserve an answer. If you're 18, you can die for your country and you can vote, but you still have to check a lady out by midnight on a school night," Hoffman said.

Crockett added that with the abundant opportunities for housing off campus, the proposal could help the university appear more attractive to the older students.

"I think it's a big decision. There are a lot of people to be considered here," Crockett said.

Lack of computer terminals in halls leaves students unplugged

Eight halls have accessible terminals

By DANNA ESTRIDGE
News writer

Karen Gerteiser lives in Clay Hall, but she often stops by Burnam Hall after class to check her e-mail.

That's because Clay Hall doesn't have computer terminals available for residents.

"It would be more convenient if Clay had them," Gerteiser said.

"I go to Burnam and use theirs because it's the closest."

According to Burnam Hall's Residence Assistant Alicia Stamper, Gerteiser isn't the only non-resident who uses Burnam's computer terminals.

"We have a lot of people from other halls come over and use our computers," Stamper said. "They're busy all the time; you can hardly get out one."

Stamper's comments are similar to those of other R.A.'s, because fewer than half of Eastern's residence halls have computer terminals.

Student senator Mike Lynch said he wants to change that.

"My goal is that in two years, we'll have terminals in all residence halls," Lynch said.

Burnam, Commonwealth, Keene, Martin, Mattox, Telford, Todd and Walters halls each have four computer terminals, and Academic Computing Services plans to install terminals in three more residence halls this year, Lynch said.

In addition, the student senate passed a resolution Oct. 24 which proposes the university allot funds to purchase and install four computer terminals for each of the remaining residence halls.

The resolution will be sent to the Council on Student Affairs, and if the council approves it, the resolution will eventually be presented to university President Hanly Funderburk for consideration.

Lynch said he hopes the resolution will have a positive impact on the administration.

"The resolution passed the floor unanimously," Lynch said. "That shows there's an interest in installing terminals in all of the halls."

Many students use the computers for word processing or to access the Internet to do research and other academic activities, Lynch said.

"You can learn a lot on the Internet. You can get information from other campuses or even other parts of the world."

He said placing terminals in all the residence halls would eliminate the need for students to go out late at night to the library, and would cut down time spent waiting to get on a terminal in the halls that have them.

"I usually get up early in the morning to use the computer in my hall because I'm always busy," Lynch said. "A lot of students are like me — they're busy, and they don't have time to go to the computer lab."

Shutdown won't affect Eastern

By Janna Gillaspie
News editor

When President Bill Clinton vetoed two budget bills, refusing to compromise with Republican congressional leaders, a budget shutdown began Tuesday, putting as many as 800,000 federal employees on furlough.

While the federal government is stopping funding for non-essential services, the university should not feel the impact of the budget stoppage yet.

Earl Baldwin, vice president for business affairs, said if the shutdown had taken place during the time students get financial aid, there may have been a major effect on the university.

He said the university should see limited effects, especially if the shutdown is short.

Because so few students are receiving financial assistance at this time, students should not be affected by the cuts, said Susan Luhman, director of student financial assistance.

The university receives federal funding electronically through the Department of Treasury, Luhman said, so the accounting office may be shut down until the budget shutdown is over.

But, she said, the university would be able to cover Pell Grants or subsidiary checks for those who have not received theirs for this semester, if the university was not able to "pull down the federal funds."

Luhman said the shutdown could have posed a problem for the university if it had been at the beginning of the semester, when millions of dollars of financial aid are given out.

"I hope it doesn't continue much longer," Luhman said.

Area federal employees affected by shutdown

While neither rain, nor sleet, or snow — or the budget shutdown — can keep the postal service from delivering the mail, other federally funded workers in the Richmond area will see drastic changes from the shutdown.

The Bluegrass Army Depot put 151 workers on furlough at noon on Tuesday, said David Easter, the depot's public affairs officer.

Although the non-essential workers were put on furlough, the depot has been working since September preparing for the shutdown by determining which workers would go on furlough, Easter said.

All staff was sent home Tuesday except the management of the Social Security office located in University Shopping Center, said Patricia Allen, branch manager and one of only two management staff left in the office.

Allen said the office will not process any new applications or take any claims, but the office will take requests for new cards, make address changes and other small tasks.

Those already receiving checks will still receive their checks. Only those applicants who have not been processed will be affected, Allen said.

None of the Richmond recruiting offices for the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines or the National Guard answered telephone calls made Tuesday. Each office had answering machines, but only indicated the recruiting officers were not in the office.

FEES: Hoffman would like SGA to control funds

include office space or the upkeep of its facilities. While Hoffman said he would like have a little more money and that the amount allotted to athletics "seems like a big amount," he is supportive of using activity fees for athletics.

"It's just too bad more students don't utilize their (activity fee-paid) season package (to home football and basketball games)," Hoffman said.

Hoffman said his main complaint with student activity fees is they aren't "controlled by the student government association." Student governments at Morehead State, Western Kentucky, University of Louisville and Northern Kentucky control how their institutions' student fees are used.

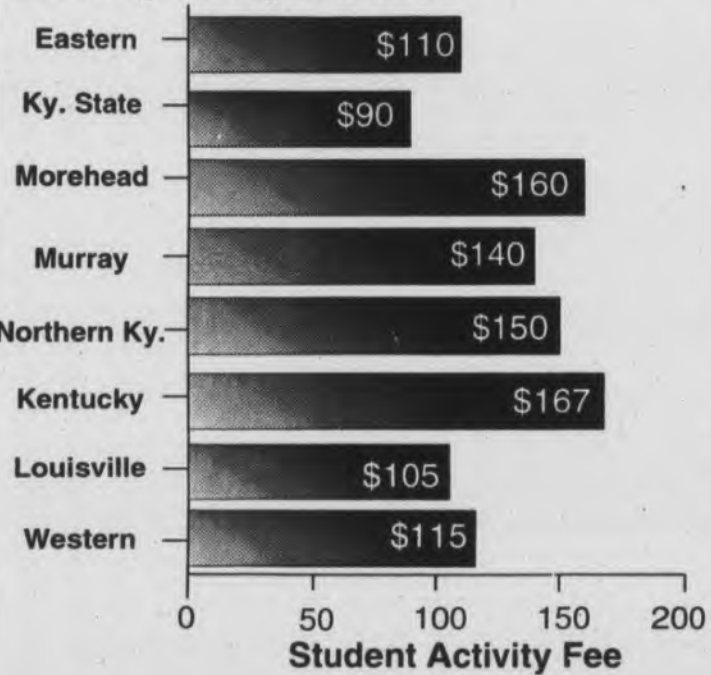

"It's too bad the student government doesn't control student activity fees, because this way, you would know when an increase would occur, why it would occur and a direct service would be gained from the increase," Hoffman said.

Whitlock said it's not a question whether activity fees benefit the student.

"Every dollar the student pays, whether it's tuition or student activity fees, is going to something that will benefit the students in general," Whitlock said.

'Fees'-ible Activity

The average student activity fee at state institutions is $130 — $20 more than at Eastern. While fees at other schools are divided among programs, all of Eastern's go to the general fund.

ROGERS: Four states fighting for extradition of suspect; hearing set for Tuesday afternoon

der scene," Massucci said.
Rogers was apprehended after a 15-mile chase at speeds of 100 mph that started in Irvine, a state police report said.
The chase began when a detective in an unmarked car pulled beside Rogers to try to identify him.
"The detective said he (Rogers) reached in the seat and he thought he was going for a gun, but he reached and got a beer and started drinking the beer, and when he got through with the beer, he threw it at the detective's car," said KSP trooper Ed Robinson.
After he ran through a road block, his car was pushed off the road by Sgt. Detective Joey Barnes two miles outside Waco on Ky. 52.
Trooper Robinson fired a shot at the car trying to shoot out a tire.

Karl Schoelhamer, of Richmond, was driving to Irvine when the chase began and saw much of the chase and apprehension of Rogers.
"I was a pretty good distance behind them, because they were at such a high rate of speed, that my old truck wouldn't keep up with them," Schoelhamer said.
He said he hadn't heard anything about the suspect and was surprised to see the arrest.
"I didn't have the foggiest idea of what was happening," Schoelhamer said.
He said police surrounded the car and got Rogers out, put him on the ground and arrested him without much struggle.
Rogers was unarmed. He was taken into custody about 3:30 p.m.
FBI officers and state police questioned Rogers at the KSP post on Kit Carson Drive for about six hours without the presence of an attorney, Robinson said.

Rogers was then taken to the Madison County Detention Center until his arraignment Tuesday.
An extradition hearing is scheduled for Nov. 21 at 3 p.m. by Judge William Clouse.
Rogers was read his rights through a closed circuit television system and was appointed public defender Ernie Lewis.
Rogers also faces charges in Madison County of driving under the influence, failure to appear and being a fugitive from the law in 1987. He was served with the warrants Tuesday at his arraignment.
Lewis said Rogers had invoked his right of silence.
"He does not wish to speak to any law enforcement official," Lewis said.

Rogers was captured Monday evening after he was spotted driving a white Ford Festiva, which police say was stolen.

CHRONOLOGY

OF THE CHASE AND CAPTURE
MONDAY:
▶ 2:30 p.m. KSP received a tip from cousins Edith and Clara Smallwood that Rogers was at their home in Lee County to visit. He does not ask to come in; he is not invited.
▶ 2:44 p.m. Rogers run off road by police and taken into custody at KSP post No. 7 on campus. He is questioned by the FBI and police.
▶ 6:48 p.m. Rogers is brought the all-American meal—McDonald's.
▶ 10:28 p.m. Rogers is moved from campus to the Madison County Detention Center as approximately 100 media and bystanders look on. Richmond gets look at alleged killer.
TUESDAY:
▶ 11:30 a.m. Rogers is arraigned via closed-circuit television in Madison District Court before William Clouse. He is formally charged, and no bond is set.

HYLAND: Wants to see killer punished, 'suffer more than death'

after he was reported missing.
"What they found was mostly bones and hair. He was wrapped in a shower curtain," Hyland said.
Rogers became the prime suspect in the death, but could not be found.
Police reports allege Rogers then went on a killing spree, claiming the lives of at least four women.
Hyland said his aunt had tried to keep up with Rogers, but had not heard anything since she found he was in jail in California last year for arson. He was released, and she had heard nothing until police apprehended him Monday afternoon.

Hyland said police contacted Burkhart shortly after Rogers was arrested.
He said his family was concerned with finding out the details of Peters' death and seeing that Rogers was punished if found guilty.
"My mother wants to know how he died," Hyland said. "She also wants to see him punished."
Hyland said he considered going to the police post when he heard Rogers was being held there for questioning.
"I wanted to see the man who did it, but I figured it would all be shut off and I wouldn't see him," he said.

While some of his friends went to see the spectacle at the police post, Hyland said he stayed behind and watched news and thought about how Rogers had impacted his life.
"It is kind of stunning to think I'm connected to him in any way," Hyland said.
While Hyland wants Rogers to be punished if found guilty of the murders, Hyland isn't sure the death penalty will be justice enough.
"If he gets that, fine, but personally I'd like to see him suffer more than that," he said. "My friends and I were talking and would like to get him in O'Donnell and lock the door. He would suffer then."

MEDIA: Campus invaded by satellite trucks, national media

McConkey, 19, of Washington Courthouse, Ohio.
The five-hour wait suddenly ended when the media got their shots of Rogers and rushed to their vehicles to produce the images.
The frenzy continued Tuesday morning when the media descended on the Madison County District Courtroom to see Rogers' arraignment.

The video cameras were so stuffed into the courtroom, one knocked a clock off the wall and broke the glass.
"This is a large crowd; it's almost as large as the docket this morning," commented Judge William C. Clouse.
The story did not die Tuesday, with reporters and crews staying for a Wednesday afternoon extradition meeting with detectives from four other states.

Enhance your resume — volunteer

Volunteering is a great way to boost self-confidence, as well as your resume. You can help people out while you improve your chances to get a job.

"I think employers like to see that a student has been involved," Laura Melius, assistant director of Career Development and Placement, said. "Also, a spirit of giving back to the community shows through on a resume that includes volunteering."

Melius said many employers today encourage community involvement in their employees.

"If they see that a student has volunteered in the past, they assume that will carry into their professional life," she said. "That person would be in a lot better position to be hired than someone who hasn't."

Students can also gain valuable experience by volunteering. "I think it's a wonderful experience," Melius said. "You can get just as good experience volunteering as you can in a paid position."

A few places you can volunteer in Madison County are

Telford YMCA

The YMCA is looking for a volunteer coordinator and would take a fitness instructor for evening times to lead a class, etc.

Also, you can get involved on a short- or long-term basis by visiting the day care program to tell stories to children, teaching a special interest class or managing the older adult volunteer program.

To find out more about what you can do at the YMCA, call 623-9356.

Christian Appalachian Project

This organization offers a one-year volunteer program to anyone over 21 years of age. There are over 12 programs the volunteers can work under. Some include home repair, adult education, elderly visitation and spouse abuse shelters.

One-year volunteers receive room and board, a monthly stipend, health insurance, limited eye care and dental coverage and loan deferment information.

If you would like more information, call 1-800-755-5322 or (606) 792-2219.

Project Read

This organization deals with teaching reading and writing skills to adults in Madison County.

A 10-hour training program is required to become a certified volunteer.

Once qualified, the tutor works with a student to find a mutually convenient place and time.

For more information, call (606) 623-4905.

Book Buddies Program

This program operates through the Madison County Public Library. It offers free library delivery and library cards to homebound people.

Volunteers must be adults who like to read, enjoy people and have reliable transportation. They must also be willing to submit to a police records check, complete a training workshop and give up to five hours a month to helping others gain access to library material.

For more information, call 623-6704.

Habitat for Humanity

This program lets volunteers build and rehabilitate homes throughout Madison County in order to make decent housing a matter of conscience and of action.

The program offers volunteer opportunities in construction and non-construction.

For more information, call Laura Robie at 986-7547.

For more volunteer groups, see Activities, page B5

Home Meals warm student volunteers

By JAMIE NEAL
Staff writer

It was a sunny Friday in mid-November when Betty Lainheart and Regina Seyfrit began loading Seyfrit's blue Ford Explorer with baskets and coolers full of food.

The women took a short ride to their destination. Lainheart got out of the Explorer and carried a basket up gray stairs to an apartment building. A man wearing a camouflage jacket answered her knock with a smile.

Lainheart has seen many appreciative smiles in the time she has been volunteering with Home Meals Delivery.

What is Home Meals Delivery?

Home Meals Delivery is a volunteer non-profit organization that delivers nutritious meals to individuals who are physically restricted, by age, illness or injury, and to those who are restricted financially. There is no age restriction, and the cost of the meals is based on the recipients' ability to pay.

Many organizations, including campus groups such as the Newman Center, Kappa Delta Tau, Scabbard and Blade and the Wesley Foundation volunteer to deliver meals for the program.

Why do students volunteer?

There are many reasons students

“It really makes you think about when you get older, you hope someone will do it for you.”

RONDA SMITH,
senior, social work major in these organizations give some of their free time to deliver meals.

"I enjoy helping others," said Quinton Leonard, a junior environmental health science major and volunteer for the Wesley Foundation. "I enjoy taking meals to those who wouldn't have a meal otherwise; I like making the less fortunate happy. Seeing the appreciation on their faces makes me feel good inside."

Ronda Smith, a senior social work major and Home Meals Delivery volunteer not affiliated with any group, has her own reasons for volunteering.

"I started to do it for a class; we had to pick a group to do volunteer work for and then write a paper on it," Smith said. "Then I just kept doing it; I enjoy it. It gets me off campus and in contact with others. It is also very rewarding; it really makes you think about when you get older, you hope someone will do it for you."

How many groups participate?

According to Dianna Ackerman, manager of Home Meals Delivery, there are 16 organizations, not including individuals, who volunteer their time to deliver the meals. The total number of volunteers adds up to hundreds of people giving their time to help others who cannot help themselves.

"People have been very willing to help," Ackerman said.

Lainheart and Seyfrit belong to Rosedale Baptist Church, one of the 16 organizations that give their time to the Home Meals Delivery program.

"There is a need for this service; it really makes you count your blessings," Lainheart said.

The need of the recipients is not the only reason these ladies volunteer.

"I don't work outside the home. I've felt like I've needed to volunteer for a long time. It makes me feel good," Seyfrit said.

Ona French is one of the many who have been willing to help. French cooks all the food for Home Meals Delivery at the Baptist Student Union. All the food cooked for Home Meals Delivery is bought with money collected from recipients of the meals and from donations. According to French, there have not been any problems with having enough money to pay for the food.

"So far, we have been really lucky; God has been with us," French said.

Thanksgiving with Home Meals

Home Meals Delivery will be delivering on Thanksgiving Day from 10:30-noon to those who cannot provide Thanksgiving dinner for themselves.

The program will also be holding a Thanksgiving dinner at the BSU at noon for anyone in Madison County who cannot have a traditional Thanksgiving dinner. International students and students who cannot go home for Thanksgiving are especially encouraged to come to the dinner.

Financial contributions, which are tax deductible, can be made payable to Home Meals Delivery, 154 Lakeshore Drive, Richmond, Ky. 40475. Individuals or organizations that would like to help with delivery or other jobs involved in the program may contact BSU at 623-3294 before 1 p.m. on weekdays.

Hamlet' won't leave you melancholy

BY CHAD WILLIAMSON
Arts editor

The original soap opera, "Hamlet" has everything you could want in an evening's entertainment: insanity, murder, suicide, treachery, incest and a ghost.

The plot of "Hamlet" revolves around the murder of the king of Denmark by his brother, Claudius (Andrew Bourne), who then marries the widowed Gertrude (Tressa Brumley) and becomes the new king.

Hamlet, who has been away to school, returns and is visited by his father's ghost

Rating
(Out of four)

(Rob Stanfield), who tells his son he was murdered and asks him to revenge his death. This sets off Hamlet's plan to use his erratic mood swings to entrap the king, all the while pushing away the love of Ophelia (Dusty Columbia), who is quietly going insane in her longing for Hamlet.

The Danish prince even goes so far as to reconstruct his father's murder in a play for the viewing of Claudius, since "the play's the thing; where I'll catch the conscience of the king."

Essentially constructed as a moralistic thriller, the play is filled with twists and turns you all know from high school English but which never take away from the play's enjoyment.

Director Jim Moreton, by cutting

Hamlet (Damon Boggess) speaks to Guildenstern (Spencer McGuire) and Rosencrantz (Fonzie D. Geary). Progress/MATT McCARTY the running time in half, has made the play move swiftly and smoothly, keeping the action flowing.

Bourne is a perfectly boo-able Claudius, while Brumley is striking and stunningly beautiful as Gertrude. As Ophelia, Columbia captures the ultimate insanity of the character, knowing her love can never take the place of vengeance in Hamlet's heart.

But at the core of the play is Boggess as the half-child/half-man Hamlet. Barefoot during much of the play and dressed like an unmade bed, he is a bizarre combination of id and repression, a Freudian dream who wants revenge for the murder of his father.

The result is a performance so focused and exact it elevates the other actors to a higher level so they can match him. No one can slack off while Boggess is on stage, and no one does. In the end, it helps produce one of the finest productions to come onto Eastern's stage.

Boggess hopes 'Hamlet' will open acting doors

BY DANETTA BARKER
Contributing writer

Damon Boggess always puts his teeth into his roles. As the lead in "Hamlet," he spends most of his time onstage barefoot. When he's identifying himself for someone to meet, he mentions his shoes.

"I'll be wearing cowboy boots," he said before his interview.

Hamlet? In cowboy boots? But a look at Boggess eliminates any fears of a man in Western footwear portraying the revenge-minded son of a Danish king. With his youthful face and bushy head of brown-blond hair, he has the half boy/half man look of Shakespeare's tragic prince.

The road to "Hamlet" began in Versailles, where he had already been doing community theater for several years. Boggess first met Jim Moreton, who is directing "Hamlet," while they were working together on "The Music Man," in which Moreton played the lead.

With encouragement from Moreton, Boggess decided to come to Eastern to major in drama. As a freshman, he auditioned for every play being performed at the university. That enthusiasm earned him parts in "Speed the Plow" and "Of Mice and Men," both directed by Moreton.

Boggess also appeared in the comedy "The Miser," directed by Jeffery Boord-Dill.

Now that he is more experienced, he is also more choosy, auditioning for only the roles he wants to play.

Boggess says he hasn't seen Sir Lawrence Olivier's version of Hamlet. He wants to bring Hamlet alive through himself, not an imitation of Olivier or the latest big-screen version by Mel Gibson.

To prepare for the biggest role he has ever done, Boggess read everything he could about Hamlet before reading the play itself.

After four years working in the theater, doing everything from props to ushering and acting, he feels ready to tackle the role of Hamlet.

After graduation, Boggess plans to go to Chicago. He is eager for the city, but not ready yet for New York. He would like to wait a few years before heading for Broadway. "When the time is right," he says.

Boggess would also like to try his hand at directing, but doesn't feel he will ever completely give up acting.

Boggess ignored earlier versions of Hamlet before tackling the role. Progress/MARIE MOFFITT

Letters to Cleo proud to be 'pop'

BY CHAD WILLIAMSON
Arts editor

For Letters to Cleo guitarist Michael Eisenstein, "pop" is not a four-lettered word. Well, it's not a four-lettered word to anyone else who can count, but Eisenstein remembers a time where calling a piece of music a "pop song" made people turn their noses at it.

"Pop music got a bad rap in the post-disco age," said Eisenstein during a phone interview. But he contends the changing of musical labels hasn't essentially changed the music itself.

"Most of what is alternative music is really pop music," he said.

Maybe that's why the Boston-based band, touring in support of its second album, "Wholesale Meat and Fish," isn't ashamed to call itself a "pop band."

This is despite the efforts of critics who have thrown a healthy list of adjectives at the band, even summing it up as "single-friendly, non-threatening, alterna-pop."

But in addition to being a rock band that critics feel the anxious need to label, but there was also that whole "Melrose Place" thing.

The band is still dealing with both the fame and the backlash that can only come from your video playing during the closing credits of the infamously campy soap opera. It was the video for "Here and Now," one of the best singles of 1994 and originally on the band's debut, "Aurora Glory Alice"; eventually finding itself on the "Melrose Place" soundtrack.

"It was totally the double-edged sword," Eisenstein said. "The skepticism was that the 'Melrose Place' thing was just a breach of indie rock ethos."

Now the effort is focused on moving out of the "Melrose Place" shadow and finding a place for the band's sound on radio dials and in concert halls everywhere.

Playing smaller dates, such as its show tomorrow night in Brock Auditorium, helps keep the band rooted to its origins of playing the club circuit, letting it connect easier with the audience.

"It's the environment we came up through," Eisenstein said. "I'd rather do two nights at a small venue rather than a large arena."

As well as keeping the shows small, Letters to Cleo also tends to keep its melodies on the sunny side, sometimes in stark contrast to Hanley's dark lyrics. "Awake," the first single from "Wholesale," is an example of this study in contrasting styles, Eisenstein said.

"Awake" is very peppy and happy melodically, but the lyrics are very sarcastic," he said. "Sometimes, people don't pick up on that."

Happy music does have its place, Eisenstein contends, though Cobain-esque angst is more likely to find its way into CD players, he said.

"I just don't hear a lot of happy music on the radio. Give me the first three Beatle albums," he said.

High school football star receives honor

Derek Jones gave up football career for academic honors

By DAN SMATHERS
Assistant copy editor

Former Bell County High School football state champ Derek Jones has a new star in his skies. Jones was elected from five students across the United States to represent the honorary society Lambda Sigma over the Oct. 27-29 weekend.

Sophomore students must have a GPA of 3.3 or more to be invited to join Eastern's Mu chapter of Lambda Sigma, a 73-year-old group which teaches service and leadership in the community.

"It's a good experience. The leadership is beneficial," Jones, a junior, said.

"It will take a lot of time planning on weekends," he added.

Jones lives in Brockton with his wife, Lora, and stays busy with service groups on campus, like cooperative education.

The Mu chapter helps students move into residence halls, provides free tutoring and raises funds. It raised money for United Way, for Robin Stroh, a disabled patient at Rockcastle County Hospital with neuro-fibrosis, and helped with the homecoming parade.

Progress/MARIE MOFFITT
Derek Jones and his wife, Lora, caught up with each other for some quality study time in the library.

Lambda Sigma also provides a one-time $500 national scholarship to two students each year.

As in Lambda Sigma, a high GPA was also necessary for Jones' major, occupational therapy.

He chose this career because he

"I would much rather be out on the field than in the library."

DEREK JONES,
junior, OT major

wants to help people.

Jones started off at West Point, but after completing basic training ("I said, 'See ya, Uncle Sam!'"), he chose to play football for Eastern, gambling that he would later receive a full scholarship.

The gamble did not pay off, and after a year, Jones pursued occupational therapy.

"I thought this route would benefit me more," Jones said.

Jones believes his parents felt negative about his leaving West Point and a promising football career.

"They thought I was throwing my career away," Jones said.

In a non-assuming manner, Jones second-guesses his choice to pursue academics.

"I would much rather be out on the field than in the library," he said.

"I think about (football) every single day. I lift weights every day," he said.

Jones is still getting offers to play football, and during high school, he entertained offers from the Air Force Academy, the Naval Academy, the University of Louisville, the University of Kentucky and West Virginia University.

Lora, who was his high school girlfriend, is a junior dietetics major.

Both put emphasis on good grades and believe in their importance, but they yield that importance to a higher power.

The Joneses attend Faith Baptist Church, and both count God as a major force in their lives.

"I think if more people said 'grace' before they ate in public, it would set a good example," Derek said. "(God is) the utmost in my life."

Cut-a-thon held for charity

By JENNIFER ALMJELD
Activities editor

Visitors to the Fountain Food Court Tuesday could have gotten a haircut with their burgers.

From 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., salon owner Lane Taylor brought a traveling hair salon to Eastern for Alpha Omicron Pi's first cut-a-thon. People were charged $5 for a haircut with proceeds going to charity.

Although cut-a-thons are new to the university, they are old hat to Taylor.

"This is my 10th or 11th cut-a-thon," Taylor said. "We did them at UK every year, and when I moved, I thought an organization on campus may be interested in doing one too."

Taylor chose the sorority because he cuts one of the member's hair.

"We just got to talking, and I knew we had a lot of fun at UK, and we had a lot of success," Taylor said.

Taylor said before the event he would like to do 100 haircuts, but said he was happy to see whoever showed up.

At 1:30 p.m., it looked like the group was well on its way to reaching its goal. A line stretched around the chairs and table that were set up, and the excess of people made it difficult to get in the doors of the Powell Building.

The chairs were filled with people holding towels next to their dripping hair. When patrons came to the table, they paid their $5 and were led to the shampoo room.

In the shampoo room, freshman Kelly Doss waited to wash her hair.

Stylist Lane Taylor cuts nursing major Amy Ramey's hair during the cut-a-thon held on the first floor of the Powell Building.

"I really needed a haircut," she said. "I just found out about it and thought it was great because I needed a haircut, and it was cheap. It was great timing."

Doss brought her friend, Alisha Petrey, a freshman, to the event. "Kelly told me about it, and it was just $5, so I thought I'd get a trim," Petrey said.

Sara Wilcher, also a freshman, thought the haircut sounded like a great deal.

"I thought if they mess up, it's just $5, so I don't miss out on anything," Wilcher said.

The low price seemed to be the biggest draw for those who came to get their hair cut.

"For five bucks, you can't beat it," said freshman Michelle Coke. "Plus, it's for a good cause."

added junior Mandy Blank.

Some might have complained about the long line to get their chance in the styling chair, but it didn't seem to bother those there.

"I'd wait in line for two hours for a haircut for five bucks," Blank said.

While customers stood in line, a radio blasted top 40 songs, and people frequently broke out in dancing. That alone was enough to make many people stop dead in their tracks to stare at the event as they left the food court.

In all, 65 people got their hair cut, raising $325 for arthritis research, Taylor said.

"We were real excited about it and we had a lot of fun," Taylor said. "Having fun was our main goal."

Steppin' Out

Marianne McAdam's country western dancing class sponsored a dance Monday, Nov. 13 in the Weaver Gym. Junior Dan Shirley and his partner, at right, attended the dance, which allowed students to practice the two step and the public to participate.

Toys for Tots, Salvation Army begin Christmas campaigns

By JENNIFER ALMJELD
Activities editor

As the Christmas season nears, certain images and organizations come to mind. During this season of giving, Toys for Tots and the Salvation Army bell ringers are out to make a difference in the community.

The Toys for Tots program has become as much a part of Christmas as candy canes and Santa Claus. The program is sponsored by the Richmond Fireman's Club.

Les Moore is a Fireman's Club representative and has worked closely with the Toys for Tots program.

"We take in toys year-round," Moore said. "There are usually about 600 kids involved."

People began signing their children up to take part in the event Nov. 10, and the last day to sign up is Dec. 20. Children ages 12 and under are eligible to take part.

One Eastern group that works with Toys for Tots is Beta Theta Pi.

Kevin Smith, the fraternity president, said his group raises money and collects toy donations for the Fireman's Club.

"The brothers really seem to like it a lot," Smith said of the program. "The best thing is knowing that we're able to help people who don't exactly have as much as we do, especially during the Christmas season."

Another popular charity activity during Christmas is the Salvation Army bell-ringing which will hold a kick-off ceremony in front of the Madison County Court House.

The red kettles allow people to support the Salvation Army directly, said Lt. Robert Kreft of the Salvation Army.

Kreft has set a $60,000 goal for the organization, twice what was raised last year. He feels that volunteers are the key to a successful campaign.

"In my opinion, we paid people way too much to ring bells for us last year," Kreft said. "We'd really like to see some groups volunteer to take a site for an entire day."

Sigma Chi is a group that plans to spend some time raising money.

"It's just kind of tradition," Tester said. "Ever since I've been in the chapter, that's been four years, we've always done it. Mainly it's just a good way for us to help the community."

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity is looking forward to its first chance to help the community through the Salvation Army.

"We felt like it would be a good chance to help locally," Todd Davis, the fraternity president, said. "We've got a lot of guys staying around here for the holidays, so we thought it would be a great opportunity to get in some community service hours."

Kreft urges people to get involved with the Salvation Army.

"We meet the physical needs of people who come, so without donors and volunteers, we wouldn't exist," Kreft said.

For more information about the Salvation Army, call 624-5826.

Eagle rivalry grounded Saturday

By TIM MOLLETTE
Sports editor

The Eagles have landed — maybe for the last time. With the Ohio Valley Conference dropping Morehead from its membership next season, Saturday's

Eastern-Morehead

Radio: WEKY-AM 1340 WEKU-FM 88.9

Saturday's 1:30 p.m. match-up at Hanger Field could be the last between Eastern and the Eagles, ending a rivalry which has spanned 71 years and 67 games, 47 of those won by the Colonels.

The 1995 installment of the cross-state history features two teams headed in opposite directions.

Eastern (7-2, 6-1 OVC) stands ready to use Saturday's final regular season game as a launching pad into the playoffs and to improve on its 10th place national ranking.

Morehead (2-7, 1-6 OVC) appears headed toward a long off-season, although recent performances point toward improvement for the struggling program. Near wins against Tennessee Tech and Southeast Missouri and a 26-13 win over Austin Peay have the Eagles showing signs of improvement.

"From what I've seen in the tapes, they looked really improved from last year," Eastern coach Roy Kidd said. A deceptive Eagle offense filled with several different formations and option plays could be a challenge for the Eastern defense.

Quarterback Chris Berry has helped revitalize the Eagles' rushing offense.

"The offensive turnaround was really during that loss to Murray," Morehead coach Matt Ballard said. "After a couple of injuries, we went with Berry, and he has helped turn us around on offense."

Defense is where most of the Eagles' problems have stemmed from, giving up 403.2 yard per game.

"Honestly, if we don't move the ball against them and put some points on the board, I'll be disappointed," Kidd said.

For the Colonels, getting offensive linemen healthy continues to be a concern. Tight ends Jason Dunn and Sal Davis are slated to return Saturday, and Kidd said he hopes to get injured center Son Tran 20-25 plays.

On defense, an Eagle running game plan may play right into Eastern's nationally 19th-ranked rushing defense.

With the long rivalry ending Saturday, it may be fitting for Morehead's final OVC game being against Eastern.

"It's sad to see it end," Ballard said. "It's fitting we play our last OVC game against Eastern. They're a program we should model our's after."

Eastern could host playoff

PROGRESS STAFF REPORT

On Sunday, the NCAA will announce locations and pairings for the Division I-AA football playoffs, and Eastern still has a shot at hosting a game in the first round.

The top eight teams in the nation as ranked by the NCAA which meet the minimum bid requirement of $30,000 are awarded home games.

The Colonels are ranked 10th in the Sports Network poll, which doesn't directly correspond with NCAA rankings. The official rankings won't be released until Sunday.

A strong win over Morehead Saturday, coupled with a loss by one of the teams ranked ahead of Eastern, would probably be required for the Colonels to move into the top eight.

"We need to move into that eighth spot," Eastern coach Roy Kidd said. "We'll need a loss by a team ahead of us to move into the top eight."

If Eastern hosts a playoff game, tickets will be available through the athletic ticket office in 128 Alumni Coliseum or by calling 2122 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Confused About Buying a Computer System?

Choosing a computer system for your business can be a confusing experience. We would like to offer the following advice when purchasing a computer system. One tip: always define your job(s) and pick the type of software you're going to use first. This will help you choose the total system that is right for your needs, no more and certainly not less.

Service/Warranty: PC Systems provides fast reliable service. We will offer a one business day turnaround on PC Systems' computer in house warranty repairs. Some other stores offer an on site warranty, be sure to read the fine print about response time. Also, do they guarantee a turnaround time?

Mail Order/Discount Warehouse: Before you buy a so-called bargain computer from a mail order or discount warehouse, check a few things out. How long has the company been in business? How expandable is the system? Is the system board integrated? This can lead to expensive out of warranty repairs.

Knowledgeable Staff: PC Systems has earned the reputation for expert advice. We provide the best solution for home, business and corporate needs. Our staff will gladly and patiently assist you. Our employees are salaried. We don't pay commissions.

About PC Systems: Founded in 1984, PC Systems' fundamental philosophy has always been that not only should a customer get what they pay for, but should also be assured of the long term value and serviceability of that equipment. Our best salespeople are happy customers.

Desire to succeed, religion motivate Colonel captain

By CHAD QUEEN
Sports writer

“Religion kept me sane dealing with football and school.”

“As a freshman, there was so much less stress and responsibility.”

When senior football strong safety Joe Smith first came to Eastern from his hometown of Altamonte Springs, Fla., one factor helped him to cope in the classroom and on the gridiron.

“Religion kept me sane dealing with football and school,” Smith said. “I’ve seen too much in five years.”

For Smith, he said he believes life has remained pretty much the same, but one of the things that has changed during college is his stress level.

“As a freshman, there was so much less stress and responsibility,” he said.

Now, in his senior year, he is doing the things he has always done.

Besides being a leader as co-captain, Smith also is leading the team in two categories.

Along with three other Colonels, he shares the team lead for interceptions with two, and his two fumble recoveries are the most of any player.

For his final season, Smith wants to see the team succeed in the playoffs.

“We’re going to the playoffs,” he said. “I don’t want to make it to just the first or second round.”

Smith has felt the effects of a season that began with conditioning and drills throughout the summer and then having 10 games over the past two months.

“I just need a break; the whole team feels that way,” he said.

Beginning Nov. 25, Smith hopes to be a part of a “new season” as the first round of the playoffs take place.

At the end of his career at Eastern, Smith will be faced with many choices.

“I may have an opportunity in the National Football League; if not, I have options,” Smith said, who was an All-OVC selection last year.

As for the present, Smith hopes to do what only a few teams have done.

“I didn’t want another OVC ring,” he said. “A national championship is what separates former Eastern teams.”

Progress/SELENA WOODY
Senior strong safety Joe Smith had two interceptions in Saturday’s win over Austin Peay.

Eastern wins with 195-yard effort from D.C.

By TIM MOLLETTE
Sports editor

Eastern’s 28-0 win over Austin Peay Saturday at Hanger Field was powered by D.C.

Not direct current, but Daymon Carter, the University of Kentucky transfer tailback who electrified the Colonels’ effort early with a 64-yard touchdown on Eastern’s first play from scrimmage on his way to a 195-yard, two-touchdown performance.

“Carter is a big-time back,” Austin Peay coach Roy Gregory said. “If they get the right draw, they can go a long way in the playoffs.”

The win moves Eastern one step closer to its more-than-likely playoff appearance and pushes its second-place Ohio Valley Conference record to 6-1.

Recovering from their first loss in 26 OVC games with a solid win was important for the Colonels, coach Roy Kidd said.

“I was a little worried about that game,” Kidd said. “Coming off a heartbreaker like last week is tough, but our kids responded very well.”

The Colonels picked up where they left off to open the third quarter when Carter, who got the starting nod after William Murrell was suspended after violating team rules, capped a four-play, 63-yard drive with a 30-yard touchdown less than five minutes into the second half.

“I thought those two plays — the one right before and right after half-time — were the keys,” Gregory said.

Complementing 419 yards of net offense was a Colonel defense which allowed only 210 yards of total offense led by Joe Smith’s two interceptions.

“Defensive line did a great job,” Smith said. “Our linebackers also helped with getting back into their drops.”
