TO BE FRIEND, NOT TO BE 'BROWNIE' MOST STUDENTS' SINCERE DESIRE

The Progress Salutes —

Although it has never occurred to a large number of Eastern students, there are, nevertheless, many instructors on campus who are interesting and worthwhile friends, strictly apart from their usual functions as our trusted mentors. Moreover, a small segment of the student body has discovered this fact. They have wisely taken advantage of the emotional maturity and broadening cultural influences which a sympathetic, understanding faculty fosters so effectively.

Eastern's faculty members have been tiring, tolerating, and teaching would-be fanciers of a college education for quite awhile. It is only logical that time has served to unlock for them the secrets and problems of students. We may be enigmas to our friends, our families, and perhaps even to ourselves. But we are much less so to our instructors. Experience has thoroughly familiarized them with most of our fancies, EXCUSES, and goals. Therefore, it is rather disconcerting and grossly unfair to tag on or use the term "Brownie" when referring to an intelligent and enlightening student—a sharp cookie, if we may be pardoned for a digression into the vernacular—who respects and appreciates an individual's worth, though he may chance to be an instructor. However, let us emphasize that the term, enlightening student, does in no way include or refer to those misguided "varmints" who are trying to influence their grades apart from normal classroom procedures. Any terms of derision or pointed behavior, within limits, of course, directed towards these "sidewinders" are certainly deserved.

Far be it for us to suggest or endorse a "Be Kind to the Faculty Week, or any movement of a similar nature. Place as many barriers as you desire between yourself and any or all of the cultural influences and guides along the road to intellectual maturity which abound here at Eastern. Those of you who apparently subscribe to the theory that instructors are a strange lot only to be encountered in class and then ignored as much as possible—why continue in your boorish ways. You have our sympathy! Nevertheless, let's exercise a little care and discretion—maybe even a degree of thought, if that could be arranged—before we charge about the grill branding everyone a "Brownie" who is seen talking to an instructor. There is no reason whatsoever to criticize or embarrass a student whose motives are above reproach and who is merely taking advantage of all the opportunities which Eastern offers toward the attainment of that elusive goal—an education.

WE VOTED FOR IT - - SUCCESS DEPENDS ON STUDENTS' SUPPORT

This coming Monday and Tuesday are election days on campus. Election for what? Election for four students to be the officers of the first Student Association Eastern Kentucky State College has ever organized.

The trial constitution was accepted last March 30 by the huge majority of 71.9 per cent of students who voted.

This acceptance of the proposed constitution was on a one year's trial basis.

The responsibilities of the students elected will be tremendous. Their leadership and sincere interest in the fulfillment of the true purpose of a Student Association will result possibly either in the continuation or in the doing away of the association after the first year. These officers will need encouragement and support from all college students throughout the year.

Perhaps many students are now forming prejudices and opinions on next year's officers. If your own particular favorite nominee doesn't win the honor, or prejudices and opinions will be formed easily—possibly in moments of anger. Jealousy, anger, and an opposing faith against Student Association is an unfair approach to the organization and to the officers and students backing it. This is especially true when the majority of voting students accepted the Association on a trial basis.

All nominees now candidates for the offices are well qualified persons. Each will contribute his share to the program the Student Association hopes to achieve.

The weakness and strongness of the officers will depend on us as individual students. Regardless of person feelings, may we resolve to support Student Association with a great loyalty since the constitution was passed by a majority vote.

An honored senior girl We give as a riddle to you; Try to guess who she is Before you are through.

Just for some hints We'll tell you who and what she's like;

So you go on from here And guess with all your might.

She's like Secretary Dulles, Since that's her position in Kappa Delta Pi;

She's like Pat and Roy Perkins, Because she hails from Danville, K—y.

She's like most of us About one thing sure; That is, she thinks Eastern Is a place qualified and pure.

She's like Dr. Clark (Now hear, hark, hark!) Her major is English, Her minors—French and art.

She's like most economists Since about low salaries she'll soon preach

Because her one ambition now Is to go to Florida—and teach!

She's like ambitious people Because she likes to get things done;

But she has several pet peeves, Ash trays, cold weather, and second hand chewing gum.

She's like 15% of the senior girls (We don't mean she's cynical) We mean besides the Canterbury Club

She belongs to Collegiate Pentacle.

She's like Marilyn Monroe (Although she is a true blonde)

She likes dancing and sports Though football, not baseball, has her heart won.

She's like Ralph Kiner That is, now she's playing the field;

There's no engagement, no steady, No lips that have been sealed.

She's like Babe Ruth* And that's no fake, Her favorite foods are French fried onions and steak.

Last of all, she's like spring, That is, she's fresh and lots of fun, If you haven't guessed her yet, we'll tell you, We salute Connie Robinson.

'KAMPUS KATS'

Jeannene Fraley has been seen quite a bit lately with a certain "Sputsy" Tressla. And who will Mack McDonald be seen with tonight? Could be Burly Stephens. This ol' Kat heard Linville Reed was engaged. What about this, Linville? Rumors are that Mary Elizabeth Johnson and John Sullivan are in the process of breaking up. Sure can't understand this!!! Betty Points has been seeing Paul McNeese "night and day" lately, and Connie McCormack seems to see as much of David Florence as she can.

The Kat congratulates Alice Turner. Here's wishing you and Eliot lots and lots of happy times. What's this between Earnest Clifford and Barbara Isaacs? Oh, well!—about time he settled down! Jean Walton sure has been sparkling with smiles this week since she knows Charlie will be here for the big dance tonight. Wonder if Jim Wilson and Boots Whitaker will be at the Prom!!!

Progress Writer Dourian Names And Comments On Ten Best Movies

By TOM DOURIAN

Despite Hollywood's preoccupation with three-dimensional effects, wide screen processes, and other technical achievements, the Progress presents its selection of the ten best films released during the past year.

(1) James Jones' portrait of our pre-Pearl Harbor army, "From Here To Eternity," was transferred to the screen with singular success. Not only was the raw, earthly flavor and impact of the novel substantially retained, but the dramatic values were heightened by compact integration of the story line and deletion of Jones' annoying, sophomoric bits of philosophy. The stars of the film delivered the performances of their careers under the direction of Fred Zinnemann. Frank Sinatra's enactment of the sympathetic Italian Maggio, rising to a climactic height in the death scene, has restored him to an exalted position in the theatrical firmament. Deborah Kerr endowed her characterization of Karen with a face, figure, and dramatic credibility which achieved a three-dimensional effect without any technical assistance whatsoever. Once again, Montgomery Clift convincingly essayed the role of a sensitive, shookey introvert and the tough, but sensible Sergeant Warden was projected with proper vitality and force by Burt Lancaster. Heretofore, Donna Reed merely looked beautiful in her movie assignments, but the meaty role of Lorine, gave her an opportunity to emote and very convincingly, too. From every standpoint, "From Here To Eternity" was a superlative accomplishment in adult film entertainment.

(2) George Stevens, Alan Ladd, and some beautiful landscape photography resulted in an off-beat western titled "Shane." Ladd's detached facial posturings and his frigid monotone delivery, occasionally varied by an intense whisper, are tailor-made for the role of the gun fighter who tries to unhitch his holster and settle down to more peaceful activities. Brandon de Wilde contributes another one of his fascinating characterizations, rendering it impossible to designate him as a child actor. He is fully as proficient as any adult in projecting a variety of expression, nuance and sensitivity in a thoroughly artless, natural manner. "Shane" is such a successful motion picture—due to a large extent to director George Stevens' artistry—that it will doubtless be imitated often and probably with disastrous results.

(3) An interesting and highly laudable Hollywood excursion into adult entertainment was "Ruby Gentry." Certainly after this motion picture no additional testimonial is required to impress one with Jennifer Jones' versatility as an actress. "Ruby Gentry" is a frank discussion of adult love, hate, various emotions less intense, and the futile climb of a backwoods girl into the upper strata of society. Charlton Heston generates a good deal of masculine masculinity in the male lead, and contributes immeasurable to the dramatic impact of the movie.

(4) Causing quite a stir among national and local censorship boards throughout the country because of its daring introduction of such words as virgin, seduce, and pregnant in a movie was a slightly naughty comedy, "The Moon Is Blue." Maggie MacNamara presented an ingratiating portrait of a "professional virgin," while Bill Holden radiated the proper blend of dash and "savoirfair." After the idiotic abjections to this film ceased, it was justly appraised as a fine, rather innocuous comedy about adult manners and morals.

(5) "Lili" was a refreshing musical change of pace from multi-million dollar technicolor bores which Hollywood has been grinding out in such large quantities lately. Leslie Caron, cast as an appealing French waif, becomes the featured human foil of a carnival puppet show directed by handsome, dramatically capable Mel Ferrer.

(6) William Wyler's production of "Roman Holiday," a leisurely film excursion throughout Rome, provided Audrey Hepburn with a spectacular debut vehicle. Enacting a princess who has tired of her royal obligations, Miss Hepburn, quite by accident walks out of her princely surroundings and embarks upon a holiday jaunt about the Italian capital with an American journalist and his photographer friend. Unknown to the princess, who naively supposes she is jaunting incognito, the reporter is aware of her identity and is creating a scoop for the news service with which he is affiliated. Naturally love intervenes and preserves Princess Anne's international prestige and royal reputation.

(7) New York's Coney Island is a fabulous place for children—as well as adults—and "The Little Fugitive" is a delightful exploration of this famed amusement park by little fugitive Richie Andrusco. Persuaded that he has committed murder, the little lad decides to run away from home, and where is there a more inviting place to lam to than Coney Island? The camera follows Richie as he discovers and unfolds the fascinating... (Continued On Page Six)

A Peek in the Closet

By DEAN FASHION

For the girl who know clothes it is the whirling skirt! This is the time of the year for the cotton parade to begin, and here are a few suggestions for you and the parade.

These warm-weather favorites are musts almost for the college girl who looks her level best no matter how high the mercury soars. A star in this category: A Sea Shell Denim, it is a honey of a dress. Easy going skirt, sailor collar, completely tubbable chambray denim in conch pink or sea blue with white sailor braid oyster with navy. THE PATIO FASHION—everybody's dress in bold, glamorous cotton print. It has whittled waist, wide swirling skirt. Smart for every occasion. Also it has a fare framing neckline and the big patch pockets outlined in nylon velvet. Looks wonderful on the little figure that takes an 8 and just as charming on a staturesque 20. Black or Navy.

Young In Heart

The line that favors the young n heart. . . and vice versa. Gently curved, whittled to your waist, whirled away in yards of skirt. Freshly patterned, crisp cottons, happily un-price-conscious, completely and wonderfully washable. One couldn't ever go wrong in buying this with its pert winged collar and jeweled buttons on a scratch-pad print in black, navy or red on white.

Step-In Style

A dress you'll love to wear. . . a cool, comfortable step-in style. Brightly bound with pencil-thin piping . . . all a glitter with rhinestone buttons, tiny tucks at the waist and shoulders. A whirl wide skirt nipped at the waist with a plastic belt. Red, black, navy dots on a white background.

Pet Of A Dress

Here is a pet of a dress to make your world sit up and take notice. It comes in sheer cotton, woven and checked with every trick in the book. A bodice of narrow tucks, a row of glitter buttons, and a skirt that's a beautiful stand out in red, green, or . . .

The Open-Mind Column . . .

By CHRIS CALLAS

What do you think of replacing the Telford Music Building with a new music building?

Betsy Otis, senior: "I think the next building that is to be constructed on the campus should be a music building and not just a house."

Paul Bybee, senior: "After my year with an 88 average in music appreciation it really makes no difference. I'm bitter!"

Grace Denny, senior: "I believe our campus has outgrown the building which is housing the music department. We definitely need a new building."

Wanda Smyth, senior: "I have had contact with the Telford building, but it seems to me that a new music building would be a real asset to Eastern and of real value to music students who need more and better practice rooms. However, I am sure we will have a new one as soon as it can be included in the budget."

Ruth Hulker, senior: "I certainly think we need a new music building. In the first place, Telford is falling apart. In the second place, there aren't enough practice rooms. I think as important and as hard working a department deserves much better facilities."

Chuck Carty, sophomore: "Definitely, yes! The music department is growing constantly, and Telford can no longer meet the needs. A new music building would be a great asset to both the music students and the rest of the college. By all means, let's have a new music building as soon as possible."

Doris Edwards, freshman: "It is a wonderful idea to replace it, however, the new building should be larger."

Carl Bays, junior: "I once had a class in that building, the facilities are very poor; a new building is a good idea."

Paul Hager, senior: "After the new dorm, Eastern must have a music building if the present fine music department is to continue. Telford is just too small."

Junior Miss

JUNIOR MISS for this issue of the Progress is Edie Taylor whose poise and quick smile have won her a place in many campus organizations and activities, from a candidate for Homecoming Queen to newly elected president of the English Canterbury Club.

TRIVIA

By MR. TRIVIA

Having heard all sorts of glamorous facts about the country club that was being operated on the roof of Memorial Hall, I decided to haul myself up there and luxuriate a little. Therefore, I trudged up to the second floor, squeezed through a trap door that wasn't built to accommodate my ample lower proportions, and jerked onto the roof. Talk about a disappointment! I was crushed, mangled, and otherwise fractured when I finally cased the joint. Instead of over-stuffed deck chairs, wild tongue games, and free-flowing mint juleps, all I could see were a bunch of dried up tennis balls, some tar that unfortunately was not so dried up, and a few solitary sinders. Also in attendance were several other characters in the process of getting broiled, but I couldn't tell whether they were boys or girls. At any rate, my one thought about them: if they were human, the woods are full of them. Needless to say, I gathered up what was left of my dignity, not to mention my scraped buttocks (that term was borrowed from Fred Darling's track class) and wiggled back down.

Tevis, Robbins, and Howard: Confidential

My private pipeline tells me that Norma Tevis has been feeling downright lousy lately. Norma, honey, my prescription for you—and you can't fill it in a drugstore—is a passionate, rolling, screaming, biting, scratching love affair with one of those sharp paramours running around loose hereabouts. I'll be over with my tape measure and other standard equipment to gather all vital statistics such as height, weight, but—HMMMMM! You know!

Friday isn't Friday to Gene Robbins and Roger Howard; it's "Mammy Day." Every week without exception these two perennial suitcases pack up on Wednesday and take off for the mountains on Friday to see Mammy. If Roger was ever FORCED to stay on campus over a week-end, his mother would probably rush down by Saturday with a battery of loaded (charged) doctors, a barrel full of moonshine for medicinal purposes, of course—and a senate investigating committee investigating subversives.

Verified Rumors

Rumor has it that Floyd Compton is writing a sequel to A Child's Garden of Verses in Old English. This epic novel is tentatively titled Captain Chanticleer and His Space Cocks, or Freud Is a Freak by Floyd . . . Gayle Smith and Teddie York were seated in a booth in Walgreen's, Lexington, poring over the menu when Gayle finally changed his mind for the last time and decided what he wanted to eat. Said Gayle to the waitress: "I'd like a bacon and tomato sandwich. Can you club it?" (Mind you, he was just as serious as could be!) Needless to say, Teddie was highly amused in a sort of embarrassing fashion, so he shrieked at the startled waitress after the shock wore off: "Heck, yes! Beat heck out of it!" . . . An open letter to Jo Ann Milligan: Lover, you were grossly misinformed. Barbara Ball definitely is not, has not been, nor ever will

Miss Moss Came To Eastern From Western By Degrees

By MARY ELIZABETH JOHNSON

"The Home Management House is operated so that senior girls who major in Home Economics may apply the principles which they have learned in budgeting their time, money, and energy," according to Miss Willie Serena Moss, the supervising home economics teacher for the house. The enthusiasm with which Miss Moss explained new equipment, new interior decorations exemplifies her interest in the house and the girls who live in it.

"An ideally groomed home economics teacher" as judged by one of her pupils, Miss Moss enthusiastically explained the new equipment, a roaster oven, an electric stove, an automatic washer, and a dryer. The entrance hall has recently been redecorated in rose and green paper with harmonizing shades of paper and paint in adjoining rooms. Miss Moss has also planted roses to "fill in the bare spots."

Usually four girls live in the Home Management House for half a semester working at jobs such as balancing a budget, cooking, cleaning, planning meals, marketing, and entertaining. These girls are encouraged to carry a regular load of classes and enter into all regular campus activities. The girls attempt to live as a family unit as if they were homemakers with a job so that they can learn to meet the needs of outside activities and live on a schedule.

Odd Occurances

As in a family odd occurrences will pop up, and this unique family is no exception. Even mistakes can be funny as when the hostess hurriedly copied a cake recipe and doubled the amount of sugar, and consequently the cook came up with an odd creation. An excited hostess entertaining at a dinner party also had to adjust to a humorous situation when she served all the food to her guests, leaving none for herself.

Kizzie Spradlin, Denyse Campbell, and Nancy Stone are living in the House during this part of the semester. They have enjoyed their experiences but wish that other girls would feel free to visit them at the house as they did while they were living in the dormitory.

U. of Ky. Graduate

Miss Moss, herself, practiced her principles of budgeting in the management house at Western State College. She earned her master's degree at the University of Kentucky. After serving as State Lunch Supervisor in Western Kentucky, she taught home economics at Clark County and came to Eastern's campus only two years ago. She teasingly said, "I had to come to Eastern by degrees from Western by way of a state job and Clark County High School.

Warren County claims Miss Moss as a native daughter although she had some of her high school training in Tennessee where she was very active in 4-H work and the home economics clubs.

Advisor of YM-YW

Besides being actively employed with the Home Management House, Miss Moss finds time to work with the YM- and YWCA, which this year have sponsored the Big Sisters, Freshman Week, the Hanging of the Greens, a Christmas party for over 100 children at Telford Community Center, a tea during Teacher Appreciation Week, a Sunrise Service on Easter Sunday, Religious Emphasis Week just recently, and are planning to take part in a Mother's Day program on Sunday, May 9. She is also college club secretary of the Kentucky Home Economics Association.

Foods and Furniture

Foods of all varieties and any period furniture, so long as it is comfortable, suit her fancy. She sang in Western's College Chorus and now enjoys collecting records. Her nickname is "Babe" which was given to her by the "little children of the family."

Slow Time? Fast Time? Amusing Incidents And Confusion Cited

By MARY JO CAMPBELL

"Do you mean to tell me I have to get up an hour earlier to go to class? I might make it up at 6:00 for a picnic but NEVER for a class!"

"You'll never know the difference if you set your watch up an hour."

"O. K. Then what time do I go to my classes? And what time do the girls have to be in, and when do I eat and when does the movie start? And what about night classes?"

"Just do the same as you've always done with a few simple exceptions. Classes are the same time if you set your watch up, but if you don't they're an hour earlier. Somebody said the girls come in at eight o'clock on weeknights and twelve on week-ends."

"Oh, no. They'd never get that big-hearted."

"I don't think so either. Anyway, meals are an hour earlier if you go by the SUB clock and the same time if you go by your watch, if you've set it up. The movie is 30 minutes later if you go by town time, and 30 minutes earlier if you go by campus time. So, that couldn't be right. Well, you need to study on movie nights anyway. Just go to your night class when you get ready. Now isn't that simple?"

"No. And I'm not the only one who's confused."

Three Observations

"How right you are, brother! Conversations like this one have been going on since last week, and although no conclusions have been reached as to what time to go to what, three interesting observations may be made about the time: (1) Nobody on this campus knows what's happening to God's time, (2) Eastern's new schooling could be, "Oh, I'll never, I'll never, change time again.", and (3) NOW is the time for somebody to come to the aid of Eastern's faculty, students, administrators, and Mozart, and tell them what time it is.

If you think you've got troubles, think of poor Mozart! He is positive the whole music appreciation class hates him, because at as he arrives at the 9:00 class, everyone there, including the teacher, comes charging out. He may be smart, but not smart enough to know that he's getting in just as the class ends. Somebody ought to tell him before he has of a broken heart.

Amusing Confusion

Many amusing things have happened since the time change on the campus, or rather, since the time hasn't changed—so they tell. That is, these things are funny if you aren't the one who gets confused.

For example, a certain professor of history arrived on the campus bright and early Monday morning probably thinking that somebody could fool him by changing class schedules. But he got fooled. It was 6:30 a. m. Evidently he had set his watch the wrong way. This part is funny, but the tragic part of it was that his arm clock had broken the night before, and he had to keep waking

Methodist Banquet On Monday At Benault Inn

Wesley Foundation Banquet is to be held Monday evening, May 17, at Benault Inn at 6 o'clock.

Tentative plans include Rev. Ted Hightower, minister of St. Paul's Methodist Church in Louisville, as guest speaker.

Guests are to be Rev. and Mrs. William Poore, minister of the Methodist Church; Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Raper, faculty advisor, and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hurst, W. F. Director.

Faye Marcum and Billy Roy Murphy are in charge of decorations and program.

Deputation Program

On Sunday evening, May 2, the Wesley Foundation group journeyed to the Winchester Methodist Church where they presented the evening program. This was the second deputation program given this semester.

On Monday evening, May 3, all members of Wesley Foundation were invited to the home of Dr. and Mrs. Horace Raper for dinner. A short business meeting followed.

up to see if he was getting up early enough. He did, and he arrived for a hard day's work after a sleepless night.

Another faculty member was sitting at her desk probably contemplating reporting her whole class to the dean for cutting, when in they walked—one hour late, she said, although they were positive they were on time. You decide who was right.

Asked if the change in schedules caused any difficulties at Model High, one of our most efficient practice teachers replied, "No, I'm not any later than usual to my classes." It must be nice to have things straight.

Midnight Curfew

Dr. Burnam Hall Sunday night the rumor got around that since no one knew what to do about coming in, the girls could come in on either old time or new time. As a result, more than a few girls made a night of it and came in at midnight. "You just can't win," to quote the house mother unofficially.

And more than a few people have arrived at classes an hour early, or an hour late, and even a few have gotten there on time.

These are only a few of the difficulties. No doubt this new schedule will be fine when it adjusts itself to the students' habits, but until then, just one bit of advice: Don't ask your roommate what time it is. He or she may throw the nearest clock at you.

be a "BOTTLEneck" to your romantic reveries.

Serious Again

Faithful readers: I have heard, over-heard, and otherwise been told many times the rather tedious complaint that the names which appear in the Progress, particularly in a column of this type, are always the same. Well, people, it is only possible for me to know a certain number of students, and since I'm a darnyankee, that limits my circle of acquaintances even more so. Unfortunately, it is impossible to compose little prose etchings about individuals of whom you have no knowledge. Therefore, I shall need some help, cooperation—call it what you will—and a lot of plain old dirt to prevent this column from degenerating into one of those also-rans. Y'ALL: If you have any choice bits of juicy gossip tucked away in the lower recesses of your brain, why out with it! Write it down on a slip of paper, seal it if the info is explosive, and drop it in the College Post Office with Box 205 written on the front. All items of sufficient interest and fit for human consumption will be tossed into this column some way or other.

Parting Pot Shots

Marty LeFever's intangible assets and vry tangible points of interest are back on campus again, much to Tommy Holbrook's delight. Welcome back, Marty; I—particularly my eyes—have missed you . . . Ann "Eppy" Eppertson is afflicted with a strange, wiggling disease that is so apparent when she walks. A rabid admirer of hers calls it EPPYLEPSI, and claims he likes to talk to her just so he can watch her walk away. Fads and fashions change, Ann, but since walking is always in season, you might as well walk with everything you've got. It's rather like putting your "all" into it . . . A certain person is reputed to be so conceited that he holds his own hand at the movies . . . A gang of us swarmed out to Boonesboro Beach the other day. It was my first visit, and if this is "The finest river beach in America," then it must be the only one . . . Well, in the words of that immortal bard, Louella Parsons, "That's all for today; see you tomorrow." However, in this instance, I must amend that statement to next issue.

McBrayer To Coach All Stars

Coach Paul McBrayer has been selected to coach the Kentucky team in the annual Kentucky-West Virginia All-Star Basketball event, sponsored by the Ashland Junior Chamber of Commerce. The first game will be played at Memorial Fieldhouse in Huntington on May 28 and the second at Ashland High School Gym the following night. Conflicts with some high school commencement dates will prevent some of the leading Kentucky stars from participating but this was the only time the fieldhouse in Huntington and the gym at Ashland were available. The coach and players will report in Ashland on May 26 for two days of practice before the first game.

After this occasion, Coach McBrayer will start preparations for two state-wide coaching schools he has been asked to conduct this summer. On July 1, 2, and 3, he will be in charge of the basketball section of the Virginia High School Coaching Clinic at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blackburg, Va.

DICK CULBERTSON

6-1, 180 lb. guard, who saw considerable action during the 1951-52 season and who has just completed two years in the Navy, will be returning to school and is expected to add much strength to the guard positions.

Prospects appear bright for the best freshman team in Eastern's history. Tentative plans call for a freshman preliminary game to all home varsity contests. Coach McBrayer stated that he hopes to go back to playing a full freshman schedule again to provide game experience for the young players which he believes is so important in their development. "However," he added, "any freshman who

Cwens Present Panels To Neighboring Schools

On Tuesday, April 20, and Wednesday, April 21, members of Cwens, national sophomore women's honorary, visited Waco and Central High Schools where they presented panel discussions on "You and College" to the senior students.

Plans now include the presenting of these panel discussions to the students at Kingston and Kirksville High Schools.

These discussions are being given with the hope that they will help students understand what college is and answer their questions concerning: Why Go To College, First Week in College, College Terms, Finances, What to Wear, and Extra-Curricular Activities.

Chairmen of the two panels are Kitty Wright and Shirley Pettit. All members of Cwens participate on the programs.

Baseballers Continue To Win

The Eastern Kentucky Maroons, well on the road to having one of their best baseball seasons in years, will be seeking their eighth and ninth wins of the season this week when they play host to Tennessee Tech and Louisville.

Friday, the Maroons, whose records now stands at seven wins against two losses, meet Tenn. Tech in an important conference game. Last week Eastern defeated the Eagles at Cookeville by a 5-1 count, behind the beautiful four hit hurling of Ron Pellegrino and Don Richardson, who pitched the last three frames. Coach Wilburn Tucker's Eagles have a strong outfit and revenge will certainly be sought by the Tennesseans, reigning champs of the Eastern Division of the O. V. C.

Should the Maroons win, only a single victory over Morehead would stand in their way to winning the divisional crown.

Try To Break Jinx

Saturday, Eastern will be attempting to break the University of Louisville's "jinx" over the Maroons. In the last two years, U. of L. has taken four games from Coach "Turkey" Hughes' boys; those being by a total of six runs. In 1952, U. of L. dealt the Maroons losses by 10-9 and 8-6 and last year, the Louisvilleans won by scores of 8-6 and 5-4, respectively.

Jim Odle, senior second baseman from Portsmouth, Ohio, has taken over the batting lead, hitting at a .405 clip. The little keystoneer has banged out 15 safeties in 37 trips. Rudy Bicknell, senior shortstop from nearby Panola, is second, hitting at .317. Don Richardson, junior curveballer from Richmond, is the leading hurler with three wins against no losses. Jack Rodgers, freshman from Covington, has a 2-0 slate, while sophomore Ron Pellegrino of Portsmouth, Ohio, and junior, Don Feltner, of Hazard, have collected one victory each.

Game time Friday and Saturday is 2:30 p. m., (DST).

Ted Cook Appointed Park Assistant Director

Appointment of Ted Cook, football and basketball coach at Lebanon High School, as assistant director of Lebanon City Park was announced recently by the chairman of the park board.

The former Eastern athlete will assist in all phases of the park's operation, but is expected to devote a major share of his time to development of a Little League Baseball program.

The new assistant director went to Lebanon last August and in his first season at Lebanon High piloted the Yellow Jacket gridders to the school's first S. C. K. C. championship in 20 years. His newly formed connection with the park is a summer job only and has no effect on his status at Lebanon High. He was a member of last year's graduating class.

Among the Marine second lieutenants completing the five-month officers' basic course at the Marine Corps School at Great Lakes, Ill. recently was George W. Bales, a member of the class of '53. He has been assigned to Marine Corps School, Quantico, Va.

Mrs. Hesser, who had been suffering ill health for the past two years, was born May 5, 1916, in Corbin, Ky. She attended public schools in Corbin and graduated from Eastern with a B. S. degree in Education in 1938. Prior to her marriage in 1939 to Mr. Hesser, she taught school in Corbin.

With her husband and family, Mrs. Hesser lived at 191 S. West St., Geneva. The family moved there in November, 1952, from Fairmont, W. Va., where Mr. Hesser served as a Scout executive. He is still in charge of Scouting activities in Wayne, Ontario, Seneca and Yates Counties, which comprise the Finger Lakes Boy Scout Council. Mr. Hesser was also a member of the class of '38.

Ten Best Movies

(8) William Holden, the screen's perennial nice-guy type sparks his sagging film career with a poyful portrayal of a slight heel in "Stalig 17," a cryptic, unusual commentary on life in a Nazi prison. Before this film version appeared, "Stalig 17" was a highly successful Broadway stage hit. Conspicuously absent from the movie are the brutal prison masters torturing their inmates with various sadistic contraptions and the familiar stereotyped characters and gruesome details so artificially injected into every film dealing with the subject. As a result, a fresh, almost documentary effect was achieved by the producers of "Stalig 17."

(9) "My Cousin Rachel," Daphne du Maurier's latest and most interesting novel since "Rebecca," provides the material for another handsomely mounted film showcase of Olivia de Havilland's substantial pictorial and histrionic attributes. With admirable restraint Miss de Havilland successfully projects the central character, the puzzling Rachel, upon whom the entire plot hinges. English actor Richard Burton was a bad choice for the male lead due to his apparently forced dynamism and mechanical mouthing of many climactic phrases. However, despite this weakness, actress de Havilland and the competent supporting players mesmerize one's attention away from Burton's studied competence and weave a tantalizing web of suspense.

(10) "Moulin Rouge," the motion picture biography of French artist Toulouse-Lautrec, was a memorable experience. Jose Ferrer's attempt at re-creating the deformed artist in this film lacked verisimilitude and consequently was rather disappointing. However, Mr. Ferrer's formidable reputation may lead us to expect too much from him. At any rate, Collette Marchand's piquante charm, Houston's knowing direction, and the best technicolor I have ever viewed on a movie screen are a potent trio of attributes for any film. Lautrec's paintings were generously sprinkled throughout "Moulin Rouge" and succeeded to portray the spirit and atmosphere of the Paris of his time more effectively than the efforts of the movie-makers.

Newest Alumni Club Is Organized For Central Kentucky Region

Eastern has a new Alumni Club in the Central Kentucky Eastern Club, which was organized at a called meeting at Henry Clay High School dining room on Saturday, April 10.

Otwell Rankin, president of the Eastern Alumni Association, had asked Jack Faries '42, to serve as chairman of a committee to organize such a club. After a lunch served by the Henry Clay cafeteria staff, Mr. Faries served as chairman for the business session. President Otwell Rankin spoke to the group on the purpose of Alumni Club organizations and on the work of the Alumni Association as a whole. Mrs. R. R. Richards, Alumni Secretary, discussed the mechanics of club organizations and explained the constitution for Alumni Clubs approved by the Alumni Association. After general informal discussion by those present, Edward Gabbard moved that the 34 Alumni present organize themselves into a Central Kentucky Eastern Club and that they adopt the approved club constitution. Motion was seconded by Owen Floyd Cammack. The following officers were then elected: General Secretary, Mrs. Owen Floyd Cammack (Glenna Begley

Mary Jo Campbell, Mary Elizabeth Johnson Named Co-Editors Of Paper

Climaxing the program of the Progress banquet was the announcing of next year's co-editors. Miss Mary Jo Campbell and Miss Mary Elizabeth Johnson were named co-editors by W. L. Keene, sponsor of the Progress, at the banquet held for the newspaper staff Friday, April 30, at Allman's Smoke House.

The theme of the banquet was "Tonight's What's When" with each part of the program imitating one of the columns of the Progress. Edie Taylor, editor, was mistress of ceremonies. Joanne Arnsperger gave the invocation. Peggy "Hoppy" Brown entertained with her "uke" and the group sang during "Kampus Kats." The News, Past, Present and Future, an after dinner speech, was given by Mary Elizabeth Johnson, who told of oddities from The Progresses of 1927, 1934, and 1954 and suggested ideas for future issues.

In concluding the program, Mr. Keene gave a short talk on "Faculty Facts" after which he announced the newly selected editors.

New Dormitory For Men To Be Completed Sept. '55

At long last Eastern is to have a new dormitory for men and when it is completed college women will reoccupy Sullivan Hall, which the men have had since 1946.

The new dormitory, a three-story building having 88 rooms, will be "L" shaped and located on the site of our present baseball field. (The baseball field will be moved to its old location in front of the Health Building.) The structure will be fireproof throughout. Each room will be equipped with two built-in desk and dresser units. The desks will have three drawers and pull-out slide, a fluorescent lamp, and three book shelves over the desk. Each dresser will have six drawers, a mirror, fluorescent lamp, and shelves for toilet articles. In addition to the two closets in each room, there will also be storage cabinets above dressers and desks.

Ventilating fans will be placed in the attic to circulate air throughout the building.

The plans include a lounge and laundry to be used by students and an apartment to be occupied by the hostess or supervisor.

The Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency has notified the college that the Agency has approved a loan of $465,000 to finance the construction, but President W. F. O'Donnell stated that the college will probably get the money through a bond issue. The Government charges 3½ percent in-
