Changes In Registration To Be Explained In Signs

Students should be alert for signs instructing them on times and places for conducting registration business beginning the last of next week. Dr. Charles Ambrose said Wednesday that IBM packets for registration may be ready as early as the end of next week. Signs will be posted when they are available. Signs will also tell students where they can claim their grades. Dormitories will be notified Sunday afternoon, Jan. 31, when they are ready. Students are reminded that the registration schedule is wrong as listed in the catalogue, but correct as found in the schedule of classes. These schedules are available to each student in the Dean of Students Office. Freshmen and graduate students will register Monday, Feb. 1. The three upper classes, sophomore, junior and senior, will register for classes on Tuesday.

No one is to report to Weaver Health Building until five or ten minutes before his alphabetically designated time. Registration will begin at 8 a.m. instead of 7 a.m. as in previous years. The two and a half days allotted for registration will be nearly half the time used previously. Because of this Dr. Ambrose urged that students check and recheck each of their IBM cards in order to prevent mistakes. Classifications are listed by IBM according to the number of hours obtained by last July. For the first step of registration students must enter the door adjacent to State and O'Donnell Halls in the newly remodeled Weaver Health Building. The Dean of Students section will be in rooms under the big gym because of the new dance floor in the little gym where these services have been in the past.

PR's Display Viet Cong Flag

New Bill Would Give Kentucky $31 Million

The United States Office of Education estimated that Kentucky will receive more than $31 million from President Johnson's $1.68 billion education program proposed Tuesday, should it pass. The proposal provides that the aid be directed to students of poverty-stricken families. The biggest-ever program of federal aid to education that will provide funds for public and private schools will begin six days of hearings Tuesday. It is generally known that arguments against will come from groups opposed to federal aid to parochial schools. For Under $2,000 a Year Though Kentucky school officials have not studied the proposal, they agree the effect of such funds in the State would be substantial, especially in Eastern Kentucky. The measure provides $1 billion for assistance to public elementary and secondary schools serving families with less than $2,000 annual income, with public and private schools encouraged to cooperate in such programs as shared time. The 1960 United States Census Bureau figures show that about one of every four Kentucky families is in that category. Families of incomes less than $2,000 number 195,985, 26 per cent of the 753,671 families in the State. Of the number of families in the under $2,000 category, 90,923 of their incomes are below $1,000. No Discrimination Any school district could qualify for the program if it had 100 pupils or 3 per cent of its pupils in the under-$2,000 group. In order to apply, however they must meet one or more of the following: Pledge there is no racial discrimination within the district. Show it is operating under a court order to segregate. File with the US Commissioner of Education a plan for desegregation which meets with the commissioner's approval. Five Other Areas The remainder of $1.6 billion (Continued On Page Five)

Cafeteria Adds Four New Specials For Greater Student Menu Choice

One Offered Each Day With Regular Entrees

In order to give a greater selection to the menu, one of four specials have been added in the cafeteria line in addition to the minimum of four entrees each day. Mr. Larry O. Martin, Director of Auxiliary Enterprises, expressed the desire of his staff to satisfy the students as he explained, "We are always trying to improve the services we have to offer." Different Each Day The specials vary including a choice of two vegetables, a salad, bread, a drink, sometimes a desert and either steak, pork cutlets, spaghetti, or fillet of sole. As in all food served, only the highest grades of meat and vegetables are used. The fillet of sole, for instance, is a fresh, not frozen fish, shipped in each week from the coast. He said that the only regularly scheduled offering is a very high grade of liver offered each Wednesday. Mr. Martin explained that the main problem faced by his staff is that "we must serve the desires and demands of the students, especially in colloquial dishes, repeating just the right foods and not having others too often. It is our hope to see the meals being more balanced, but you can't tell a person what to eat." Lunch Hour Longer In an effort to serve the student body at their convenience, the noon hour in the Keen Johnson Student Union Building Cafeteria has been extended. This makes the hours run: breakfast, 6:30 to 8; lunch, 10:30 to 1:30 and supper, 4:30 to 8. The longest any full line has been timed to take in being served is 22 minutes from the lobby to the serving line. The variation in hours at the Martin Hall cafeteria is found in the breakfast hours which last until 9 and the supper hour which lasts until 6:30. These facilities are open to women as well as men. Mr. Martin explained that his staff is one of experts and experience. Mrs. Ronald Lakes, in charge of food preparation, has had thirty years of experience and with her staff of artists she is responsible for the buffets held here on special occasions. Doughnuts Galore Mrs. Della Masters supervises the making of salads and Mrs. Sarah Thompson sees that 300 dozen doughnuts are made on this campus each day. Pastries are the speciality of Mrs. Zona Hazelwood and Mrs. Charles Cameron is the cook supervisor. Mrs. Tutor supervises the buying for all departments. Throughout his staff there is an average of 25 years of experience. "Sunday offers a very impressive sight to me," Mr. Martin said. "The cafeteria is open to the public at all times, but we have many more guests on Sunday than any other time. Eastern really has her best foot forward when so many of her students are seen as they return from church, eating in the cafeteria. I only wish that those this into consideration would watch their attire at Sunday noon." Student suggestions are welcomed, since "it is the students we must please," he continued. "Just give me your ideas."

Students Try Specials

Mr. Larry Martin, Director of Auxiliary Enterprises, watches as students check through the cafeteria line in the Keen Johnson Student Union Building. They are trying one of the specials recently added to the regular menu of four various main dishes. This addition and the extension of the lunch hour are two examples of the effort his staff is making to serve the students.

Peace Corps Bound

Winning 'Old Hat' For Coffey

Winning laurels has become old hat for Eastern's Tom Coffey, senior Political Science Major from Lexington. In fact, since Tom has been a student at this Blue Grass College, his accomplishments have ranged from top honors in speech and debate to leadership positions in the Collegiate Council of United Nations, as well as selection to the Peace Corps. Following his graduation in June, he will receive an assignment in either Bolivia, Ecuador, or Peru from the Peace Corps. In preparation for the job, last summer he attended Yale University summer school for eight weeks, under the auspices of the Peace Corps, and studied Spanish, economics, government, foreign policy, and community development training for South America. His term of service in South America will be for two years. A native of Somerset, Coffey's latest honor came last summer when he was named one of five U.S. delegates to the International Student Movement for the United Nations, to be held April 21-28 in Saint Vincent, Valley of Aosta, Italy, near Milan. Delegates From 74 Nations Other U.S. delegates to the convention, which will number about 370 students from 74 nations, are from Colgate University, Texas Christian, Drake University, and the University of Florida. A University of North Carolina student is president of the organization. Executive director of the C.C.U.N. is Edison Elkins, a graduate of the University of North Carolina. Their selection as delegates to the ISMUN conference was based on scholarship, personality, understanding of world problems, and a test given by the national C.C.U.N. Board. attempt to build friendly relations among nations, and the students will discuss problems faced by the United Nations at this time. Preliminaries for the meeting begin with briefings in New York City Thursday and Friday, April 15 and 16. Although a resident of Lexington, Coffey calls Somerset his hometown. His parents Mr. and Mrs. Shelby Coffey, of 1008 Fontaine Road, moved to Lexington shortly before he enrolled as a freshman at Eastern. Charter Member of C.C.U.N. He has been active in the Collegiate Council of the United Nations since its organization. As a freshman, he attended the first C.C.U.N. conference in St. Louis. For the past two years he attended the National Leadership Conference at Sarah Lawrence College in New York, where he was elected associate regional director for the Middle South

The week-long meeting will begin and Kentucky State Chairman. Coffey has served as president of the local C.C.U.N. for three years, and is secretary-general for the Blue Grass (Continued on Page 5)

Keene Speaker

Miss Mary Jo Rudd receives her award as winner of the first W. L. Keene Women's Oratorical Contest from Mr. Keene of the English Department. Miss Rudd, whose topic was "I Knew Kathy," will represent Eastern along with William Peyton, winner of the Weaver Oratorical contest, in the Kentucky Intercollegiate Oratorical Association Conference.

Mary Jo Rudd Wins 1st Keene Oratorical

The W. L. Keene Women's Oratorical Contest was staged for the first time at the weekly assembly with Miss Mary Jo Rudd taking the honors. Miss Rudd, a sophomore foreign language major from Burkhart, chose "as her topic, 'I knew Kathy,' and explores the situation of a girl in college who is pregnant. She commented that her purpose was not to condemn or uphold Kathy but to see why this happened. Educated and Prevent She proceeded to tell of the unpreparedness of young people when it comes to matters of sex. Also she brought out that if young people were educated along these lines there would not be Kathy's such as she knew. The three other finalists were Mrs. Doretha Ballew, a Junior English major from Wirtland, whose speech was "The American way of Life," which affirmed that trading stamps have become a tradition in our society. Miss Kathy DeJarnette, a sophomore English major from Naples, Florida, spoke concerning "The Threat of Communism in the United States." She brought out the point that Communism is infiltrating this country by the effectiveness of the tactics used and that we must fear the effectiveness of these tactics. Do You Conform? Miss Jane Champion, a sophomore English major from Salvisa, spoke on the topic "Obsessed With Conformity." She went on to show how our society is a conforming one by fearing to be different. Miss Rudd and Mr. William Peyton, winner of last spring's Weaver Oratorical contest for men, will represent Eastern in the Kentucky Intercollegiate Oratorical Association Conference which will be held here February 27. Over a dozen Kentucky colleges will take part.

Folk Festival Plans Started

Any students interested in taking part in the Thirtieth Mountain Folk Festival at Berea College on April 8-11, should contact Don Stacy in 272 Brockton or Mrs. Virginia Jinks of the health, physical education and recreation department. Dances for the festival are being taught Tuesday nights, starting at 6:30 in the Weaver Dance Studio. The first practice will be held February 2. The Mountain Folk Festival is composed of such activities as folk dancing, singing, informal dramatics and music from the American, English, and Danish tradition. The festival is held to encourage the preservation of our cultural heritage through enjoyable participation in authentic folk activities. It is open to groups and individuals throughout the Southern Appalachian Region. The festival is sponsored by Berea College and the Country Dance Society of America. Groups are urged to share interesting versions of songs, stories, puppet plays or dramatizations. Musicians are invited to bring their recorders, dulcimers and other instruments.

Student Council Will Find Books For Next Term

The Student Council will operate the Student book exchange beginning Monday, Feb. 1, and running through Wednesday of that week. The service will be available in front of the grill. All students may list the books they wish to sell and check to see if someone has listed the ones they wish to buy.

The splash of light from a lamp post gives this ice-laden tree the appearance of being made from glass. This is one of many winter scenes left by Sunday's sleet and snowfall that followed Saturday's unseasonably tepid weather. ## War On Poverty

President's Education Bill Needed

THE BILL PROPOSED by President Johnson this week that would allocate $1.6 billion in federal aid to public and private schools at all levels seems a necessary measure if the United States is to maintain the educational standards needed to perpetuate our system. We will support President Johnson in this phase of his "war on poverty," and drive to the "Great Society," education very definitely being our concern.

There is merit in the argument that parents who sent their children to private schools pay federal taxes just like anyone else. There is always justification to question the constitutionality of such a program on the basis of church-state separation. Since those children in private schools have the opportunity to attend public facilities we feel that if aid to parochial schools will prevent the bill's being passed that it should be omitted.

It would be one of the great tragedies of our time if the vast majority of school children were prevented gaining benefits from federal aid because no measure that would include the minority could be devised. This is not as harsh as it seems since public schools receive support only from tax revenues while private schools, for the most part, are heavily endowed by sources not available to state-assisted institutions such as Eastern.

The new education act would, if passed, concentrate most of its funds where they are most needed, in the public elementary and secondary schools of underdeveloped areas. $1 billion is proposed for this area, and would go to schools serving families with less than $2,000 annual income.

Kentucky stands to gain $31 million from this program, since the State ranks low in per capita income with 193,985, or roughly one-fourth, of its families in this category, many of them in the Appalachian Region. Any federal program that would help Eastern Kentucky back on its feet should receive state-wide support.

Higher education would receive much-needed benefits in 1966, when the President's proposal would reach its second year, if approved by Congress this session. Colleges would receive additional funds for construction, graduate fellowships, and basic research. Kentucky and Eastern would be almost certain to benefit from this program.

While the bill is comprehensive in scope, its major difficulties in becoming passed will stem from its very completeness—the clauses that would provide federal aid to private and parochial institutions.

This very issue has prevented the passage of adequate federal aid programs in the past and could again, unless some workable compromise between the disputants can be perpetrated. Both sides have what they consider strong arguments, and neither seems willing to concede.

Federal aid to education, dating to the Northwest Ordinance, is not a 20th century innovation, but federal aid that would assist both public and private schools would be new and like many new proposals has met with opposition.

There are two obvious sides of the

Speeches Make Good Points

WE WANT TO COMMEND the finalists in the first annual W. L. Keene Oratorical for women students for a job well done. The interest was extremely high, especially for a new event, and the speeches were well done.

The winning speech, "I Knew Kathy," by Mary Jo Rudd is a penetrating look at the archaic mores of our culture and the problems which they cause. It is a well-done analysis of an unwed mother, not her problems, but what created her. The speech is printed in its entirety on this page.

The speeches of the other three finalists, to be re-presented in the Progress during the second semester, were equally well-done and extremely appropriate.

The four speeches, running a gamut of sex, trading stamps, communism, and conformity, all point out important aspects of our American society, and all have a message. We hope that through their representation in the Progress that their messages can be carried to a much larger audience than the one fortunate enough to have heard them in Alumni Coliseum Wednesday.

In Retrospect

The Semester Revisited

WITH A SEMESTER ENDING it seems fitting to go back and look at parts of it, see what happened and what should have happened; see what was done and should have been done, in short see it for what it was.

The thing about this semester that has most impressed the Progress is the Eastern student body. The vast majority of Eastern students have spent a constructive 16 weeks since school started, intent upon using the College for what it was intended — gaining an education. Of course, there were the isolated instances when the Eastern student wasn't perfect, but these were few and far between, more so than in past years.

Many things happened during the semester. A new classroom building was opened and another readied for renovation, a football season was unsuccessful, but promised of better things to come, a Student Plaza (met with both acclaim and disdain) was planned and constructed, a basketball season was started successfully and promises of things better yet to come, a tree was stolen and later found, and Eastern students went to class.

Going back to the start of the year we find registration still somewhat of an unpleasant memory. With more students than were expected registering the lines were uncommonly long, and more than one student nearly gave up in frustration. But, an apparent solution, or partial solution, will be tried next semester as the three lower classes register together alphabetically in hopes that the lines will be shorter.

Dr. Charles Ambrose, dean of admissions and registrar, says he hopes the new system will work, but doesn't expect it to be perfect. "We'll have to wait and see what the students say," Dr. Ambrose said, "they have to go through it."

Something that was conspicuous by its absence was the campus movie. Good pictures at low prices have always been featured in Hiram Brock, and with the Administration Building under reconstruction this year they weren't held. When the seats are placed in the new baby-blue auditorium, the movies should be resumed.

The Progress and Milestone gave up their "suites" in Hanger Stadium to be housed together in the Administration Building, only to be greeted by about an inch of water on the floor when the rain and snow came over the weekend and a leak was discovered.

The semester was not so different from those that went before it here, growth still delivered the keynote, and adjustment to life at a college becoming larger reached a new high. We hope that final examinations will show that it was time well-spent.

'I Knew Kathy'

Winning Address Says Sex Education Essential

(Editor's Note: Following is the text of Miss Mary Jo Rudd's winning speech in the first annual W. L. Keene Oratorical for women. In the first three issues of the second semester the Progress will print the speeches of the other three finalists.)

By MARY JO RUDD
Burkhardt, Sophomore

Because of the controversial nature of what I have to say to you today, I don't expect, nor do I ask, all of you to agree with me. If I succeed only in stimulating your thinking, I'll have accomplished all that I have a right to hope for. But I am going to speak my convictions. I couldn't do otherwise and still be honest with myself. And I have some convictions, for you see, I knew Kathy.

Kathy had to leave school. She was going to have a baby. I saw her the morning she left. She was crying. Crying because she didn't want to leave school. Crying because she didn't want to have a baby. But the school authorities and the fear of social disapproval were forcing her to leave. She had made a mistake and would have to pay for her hour of realized desire.

Now I don't propose either to uphold or to condemn Kathy. She's but a symbol. For there are unknown scores of Kathys in our high schools and colleges each year. And for each score of Kathys, there are hundreds of others, who in one sense at least, are also Kathys, but who are, shall we say, "luckier" than she. But I do propose to indict the social order whose false modesty and laissez faire dogmatism keep the Kathys in ignorance until it's too late.

A social order that tells her the subject of sex is taboo; that it's shameful; that because it's physical attraction between individuals, it's base and low. She's not to discuss it. She's not to understand it. She's to be kept in ignorance of its function and use in human relationships because of the stigma placed upon it by previous misunderstanding and unenlightened generations.

Psychology teaches us that sex is one of the most potent of human drives. Basic religious beliefs teach us that it's noble and sacred. Standard principles of moral training teach us that its ultimate satisfaction must come only after marriage. But the drive and the desire to gratify it exist before marriage. And it's just as potent then as after marriage. It demands expression of some sort. Lacking direction, it finds its outlet through vicarious experiences in obscene literature and smutty jokes.

But these are neither sedatives nor remedies. They serve only to excite additional curiosity and desire. They serve only to make the downward road easier. And then — Kathy must leave school! And did the social order which condemned her mistake do anything to keep her from making it?

Did the school which expelled her offer her courses of training that would teach her how to direct her desires? Did the educational system of which she was a part provide her with direct and complete instruction in the one fundamental vocation in which she, as a girl, was ultimately expected to engage?

The irony of the situation becomes even more pronounced when we recall that Kathy was offered courses in secretarial science that she might engage successfully in business; courses in education that she might become a good teacher; courses in art, literature, music, and drama that she might develop her aesthetic tastes.

But nowhere in her school experience was she given under competent guidance and direction, forthright and detailed information on marriage relationships, mating, and prospective parenthood. This vital knowledge had to be gained from "gossip sessions" from companions who knew only distorted half-truths; from sex books and pamphlets snatched furtively from drug store shelves and magazine counters and read secretly in the privacy of her room.

Books which propounded false doctrines, engendered illicit desires and practices, and spread information of sexual perversions. Books which focused her attention upon and perpetuated the very things which should have been denounced. Books which made it easy for Kathy to be Kathy.

And if you require more evidence that round-about instruction received through biology and nature study courses is fruitless, if you need more evidence of the separate need for straight forward, unincumbered, and thorough information, I suggest you read "The Salvaging of American Youth" by Dr. Isabel Davenport. You'll find evidence a-plenty.

You'll be appalled at the gross ignorance of girls and boys your age and mine. You'll be astounded at the general lack of information, information vital to the health and happiness of every American youth. You'll be awakened to the crying need for instruction anywhere and everywhere.

Thinking people are concerned over the fact that one marriage is four in the United States is ending in divorce. They are concerned over the fact that one in every fifteen births is illegitimate. They are concerned about the number of illegal abortions performed every year — some eleven hundred thousand, as estimated by the Birth Control Clinical Research Bureau of New York.

But are they enough concerned to be willing to put aside old prejudices and superstitions and offer to the present generations adequate training and education in the one thing which, basically, is at fault for the whole situation? Are they willing to acknowledge that the preparation for marriage and parenthood is the right of every normal child, on a par with its right to the education and training essential to earning a living?

Are they willing to see to it that sex education is lifted out of the precarious position into which superstitious psychology and unfavorable social attitudes have placed it? Are they willing to offer it to the students in our public schools and colleges as a social necessity, as every child's inalienable right?

If they are, there is work to be done. Men and women with personality and the ability to approach such a delicate and personal subject objectively need to be trained as teachers. Suitable text books need to be written. A tangible and feasible program of instruction needs to be developed.

Your task and mine, it seems to me, is to arouse an educated public opinion — parents, teachers, and citizens that will demand that future generations of school children be trained to develop and foster understanding, wholesome attitudes, and desirable expressions of God's most misunderstood gift. A training which, in future years, will make it increasingly unnecessary for Kathy to have to leave school.

I know that Kathy didn't want to leave school. I know that Kathy didn't want to have a baby. I know that Kathy would have given all that she possessed to have been able to undo what had been done.

I also know that Kathy wouldn't have been crying, she wouldn't have been leaving school, she wouldn't have been having a baby if she had the opportunity to learn what she discovered too late. I know, because I knew Kathy.

Music Boasts Two Quintets
 The Music Department has two woodwind quintets which will be representing Eastern and the department in various performances this year. This is the first time that such a group from Eastern's campus will be making appearances in high schools across the state.
 Small woodwind ensembles are organized by Mr. Harold Robinson, assistant professor of music, primarily for two purposes: to make available another medium of performance for outstanding woodwind students, and to acquaint the student body and the public with the fine literature composed for small combinations of woodwind instruments.
 On Thursday (January 14) one of the quintets presented programs for music students at Simon-Kenton, Brainerd, Lloyd, and Ludlow high schools. Music by Haydn, Beethoven, Hindemith, Bartok, Debussy and Washburn was performed. The students participating were Sharon Gebby and Gail Hammons, flute; Garrett Tiffney, clarinet; Pat Gilbert, French horn; and Sue McCowan, bassoon. Mr. Robinson played oboe.

Dr. Clyde Orr, Associate Dean of Instruction for graduate studies at Eastern, will meet with those who are interested in extension work at Durrett High School on Wednesday, Jan. 20, at 6 p.m. in room 207.

 Education 510 — Curriculum Problems and the Improvement of Instruction in Elementary Schools — 3 hours

Health 480 will be open to juniors, seniors, and graduate students. The courses numbered "500" are open to graduate students only.

David E. Barkman Is Week's Cadet

Cadet David E. Barkman, of Lexington, has been chosen as this week's Cadet of the Week. Barkman, a freshman accounting major, represented "A" company, second platoon in the weekly contest. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Barkman, and graduated from Lexington Catholic High School.

The selection, directed by the Military Science Department, was based on cadets' knowledge of the chain of command, marching maneuvers, the manual of arms, and current events.

ANOTHER semester is starting. (I am sure you are well of the fact!) and as usual it is a real pleasure to say "Hello" again to the friends of last semester (and those of several years standing) and to experience the genuine, appreciated chance to meet new people — I like people — I am not rich in a financial or material sort of way — but — I am rich in the number of friends I have — this has been proven!!

MAY I roll out the traditional plush, red carpet to each and every one of you? This so-called column is not written in a commercial vein. It is written in the hope that I may be of some help when you are a little confused as to "what for when." If you would like me to assist you I will be honored.

ANSWER to a post card I received before Christmas, and this is the first time I have had the chance to answer. (I quote Verbatim) "Are you a real person or just a name tacked onto a column?" and it was signed "J.W." Jr. at Eastern State College. Answer to Junior — "I appreciate your interest and hasten to say at the present moment I am a real person, not just a name tacked onto a column — but — who knows what tomorrow might bring! Thanks for writing.

THIS Column is difficult to write at this time of year as it is a sort of in-between season and actually nothing is new upon the fashion horizon as yet — TILL JUST say I hope every one had a fine, neat, cool swimming holiday — you know you are always welcome to browse at our "establishment of trade." Welcome back and welcome to the new people!

HOPE to see you soon in the "Kentuckian Shop."

PR's Receive Vietnamese War Trophy

Eastern's Pershing Rifles received a Viet Cong flag last week from Major David Holliday, former ROTC instructor who is now serving in Viet Nam.

The flag was accompanied by a letter explaining that Major Holliday had been given the flag by Captain Hien, the Division G-4 of the 1st Vietnamese Division. Major Holliday has conversed with him about America and Eastern and especially the PR's.

A few days later Hien asked Holliday if he would send the Eastern PR's a war trophy for him. The flag had been captured at Ca Mau earlier in December. It is a new one and believed to have been issued for display on a big Viet Cong holiday, Dec. 20.

The operation which captured the flag, however, caused mourning instead of celebration for many Viet Cong in the area.

The flag is now on display in Lancaster House.

Department Adds New Member

The military science department has added one member to its faculty and is expecting two more in the coming weeks. Captain Calvin DeWitt, III reported to Eastern last week after a year's duty in Pleiku and Kontum, Vietnam.

Before being assigned to Vietnam Captain DeWitt was with the 1st Howitzer Battalion, the 10th Artillery, 1st Battle Group, 7th Infantry in Schweinfurt, Germany from 1958-60. In 1960 he was with the 1st Battle Group, 3rd Infantry in Fort Myer, Virginia and from 1960-62 he was a member of the 35th Artillery Brigade, Fort Meade, Maryland.

A native of Alexandria, Virginia, he graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1957. He was also schooled in the Field Artillery Officer's Basic Course, Fort Sill, Oklahoma, 1957; Airborne and Ranger Schools, Fort Benning, Georgia, 1958; and the Artillery Officer's Career, Fort Sill, 1962.

Captain DeWitt and his wife, Barbara and son Calvin Graig live on Magonolia Avenue in Richmond.

United Nations Assembly which will be held on Eastern's campus in April.

Activities Numerous

His other activities at Eastern include the Debate Team, where he took superior awards at Ball State Teachers College and the Bellarmine Invitational Tournament. As a sophomore, he won the Weaver Oratorical Contest. He is active in the Young Democrats Club and is the newly-appointed counsel for the defense on the Student Court.

In his spare time, young Coffey has earned much of his college expenses by working at a local store. He enjoys reading novels by Faulkner and Tolstoy and studying philosophy.

Open House Will Be Held

An open house will be held by the home economics and industrial arts departments Tuesday from 2 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Fitzpatrick Arts Building.

A display of projects completed by students enrolled in home economics and industrial arts classes will be open to the public.

Head of the industrial arts department is Ralph Whalin, and Miss Mary Turney is head of the home economics department.

The public is invited to view these new facilities and the class projects completed during the semester.

Charlie Wells Will Serve In Trinidad

Charles Wells, senior, BSU member, will serve on a mission project in Trinidad this summer. He is one of seven students selected to represent the Kentucky Baptist Student Union on projects in 1965. His appointment was approved by the State Baptist Student Advisory Committee.

Wells will work directly with Southern Baptist Convention foreign missionaries in Trinidad. A major emphasis of his work will include Youth Evangelism and Music.

A native of Nicholasville, Wells is a music major at Eastern. He is a member of the BSU executive council, college choir, and Sigma Chi Delta service fraternity. He directs the BSU choir and is vice-president of the senior class. He also directs the music of the Red House Baptist Church.

All BSU activities will be discontinued during exam work. Vespers will resume on Feb. 3 at 6 p.m.

Baptist students are invited to participate in a week of Bible study at the First Baptist Church, Feb. 1-4. Sessions will be held from 7-8:45 p.m. The Rev. Carter, pastor of the Central Baptist Church in Lexington, will teach the Old Testament of Deuteronomy. BSU leadership and other interested students will participate in the mid-year retreat Feb. 6. It will begin at 2 p.m. and will be held at the BSU Center.

Something to crow about

Here's some good advice for roosters who haven't got a roost. You might not even be planning marriage at the moment. But chances are, it won't be long. There's never going to be a better time to start a program of life insurance than now. As a college student, you'll find rates at their lowest and with a Policy Purchase Option a young man will never have to worry about one day becoming uninsurable. Just being a policy owner gives you something to crow about.
