Colonels make TV appearance Saturday

By KEN TINGLEY
Sports Editor

Morehead's 84-70 thrashing of Murray this past Saturday opened for the first time a televised "OVC Game of the Week."

After overcoming many obstacles the idea has finally become a reality and this Saturday it will be a reality at Eastern as Tennessee Tech's Golden Eagles visit the Coliseum for a 1:30 p.m. contest that will be televised live out of channel 27 in Lexington.

Don Combs, Eastern's Athletic Director, is chairman of the TV committee and commented that things were not finalized for last Saturday's game until Tuesday night while he was in San Francisco.

Because of the late hour at which things were finalized, the Morehead-Murray State game was not broadcast live but delayed until later Saturday night.

But things are all set for Saturday and Tennessee Tech's arrival. The game will be telecast live and a sellout Coliseum crowd is expected. The first in a long time.

The announcers are two experienced professionals who know their OVC basketball. Tom Dunn, a long time announcer for Western Kentucky University, will be doing the play-by-play and George Connolly who is a former OVC referee will be doing the color commentary.

The game will be a rare 1:30 afternoon game and will feature a Banner Day contest sponsored by the Progress (see details page 12).

The game itself will feature Eastern's first place Colonels who are 3-0 in Conference action and 9-4 overall. They are led by James "Turk" Tillman who is the eighth leading scorer in the country.

Tech is 6-8 in Conference play and 2-1 overall. The Golden Eagles are led by pre-season All-OVC picks Marc Burnett and Jimmy Howell. The Colonels have won the last four meetings between the schools and Eastern leads the series 35-20.

This broadcast will be the second of seven "OVC Game's of the Week" that WKYT will telecast. Each will be a Saturday afternoon game. Next week's game will feature Middle Tennessee vs Western Kentucky. There will be four other games but they have not been selected as of yet.

Stations that will be carrying the telecast include, besides WKYT in Lexington, stations in Bowling Green, Hazard, Evansville, Nashville, and Crossville, Tenn.

Committee grants refunds to 25 students

By SARAH WARREN
News Editor

About 25 students have been granted refunds on parking tickets received last semester by the University's Parking Appeals Committee.

Established last October to handle all parking ticket appeals, the committee has received about 230 so far, a small number, according to its chairman, George Brown, considering 9-10,000 tickets were given out last semester.

About 30 cases had not been decided as of last week, but according to Brown, these would probably be heard at this week's meeting.

According to Brown, about 200 appeals were submitted before the committee had actually met and "set down guidelines."

Therefore, some appeal forms filled out at the beginning of the semester weren't heard until November, Brown said.

When one student complained about the delays, Brown said he thought he was right, "but it just took us so long to weed through all those...read and discuss them...you just don't do that in a few minutes," he said.

Other students have expressed concern because students could not appeal their tickets to the board in person.

Brown said students can come in person if an appointment is made with the Department of Public Safety, administrators of the appeal forms, but only two or three have done so.

Other concern has arisen over the pay first-appeal later policy -- having to pay for the parking ticket before being allowed to make the appeal.

This policy differs from that of the Kentucky State Police Department which gives the ticketed the option of either paying or appealing the ticket.

If an appeal is desired, a certain date is set up for the individual to appear in a traffic court where a jury then decides his guilt or innocence and subsequently whether or not he must pay the ticket.

Brown said there has been some discussion among members of the committee concerning this pay first-appeal later policy.

He said Safety "did check with the state attorney general, and he (the attorney general) said it was legal."

The committee consists of Brown, associate professor of industrial education technology, one administrator, two students and a University maintenance employee.

Brown said he doesn't know why he was selected to be on the committee, that he didn't apply, but "must have been recommended by a dean or a departmental committee."

According to Doug Whitlock, executive assistant to the president, members for the committee were selected by the faculty committee on committees, except the two students who were nominated by the Student Association president and appointed by President J.C. Powell.

The committee meets for about two hours once a week, Brown said, in which time about 40 to 50 appeal forms are read, discussed and voted on.

Few tickets have been refunded because "most of the students admit their guilt," said Brown. "It's funny," he said, "they just want us to let them off."

'Spirit Day' featured at game

By ROBIN PATER
Organizations Editor

"Campus Spirit Day" will be featured Saturday, Jan. 20 as EKU's men's basketball team meets Tennessee Tech at 1:30 p.m. in Alumni Coliseum for a televised game.

"The purpose is to have a unified show of spirit and support for the basketball team," explained Skip Daugherty, director of student activities. "This is geared toward the residence halls," Daugherty added.

Residence halls are encouraged to enter the banner contest that will be judged before the game. The Eastern Progress is supplying the prize money:

$50 for first place; $25 for second place; and $25 for third place winners.

"This is kind of a way to let the residence halls demonstrate their spirit," said Daugherty.

2,500 shakers have been ordered to be distributed at the doors as students arrive at the game. They will be given out one per person until the supply is exhausted.

"The Milestone and Men and Women's Interform have contributed money to pay for the shakers," commented Daugherty.

On Feb. 5, another spirit day will take place entitled "Organizations Day" and will include a banner contest among all student organizations.

Regents denounce possible University budget cuts

By MARK TURNER
Editor

There is a possibility of cutbacks in the University budget for this year and next year, according to University President J.C. Powell.

The cutbacks would come from the state and be a result of the current special session of the Kentucky General Assembly.

The special session is concerned with overall budget cuts for the state.

One area for cutbacks that has been discussed is that of higher education.

Because of the possibility of these cutbacks, the Board of Regents at the University have sent an official statement to the General Assembly expressing their stand.

"We are taking the position that in the event reductions have to be taken in higher education that we do not feel they should be made across the board or pro rata. This is not how we got our funding," Powell said.

Powell said the University is in favor of a set of priorities the Council on Higher Education (CHE) has proposed.

The top priority item for continued full budget is for those programs which currently exist.

Next are funds to cover unavoidable costs such as federal laws and regulations which need to be met.

These are items like the increase of the minimum wage.

Funding to offset inflation costs in salaries and wages and in the cost of running the University are the next priority. The last items to receive priority in funding would be expansion and new programs, according to the CHE proposal.

Powell said no one is sure as to the percentage of funding to be cut.

"There was a request made by the Council on Higher Education based on a three percent reduction," Powell said.

"The percent of reduction would relate to the number of dollars saved by the state," Powell said.

The official policy taken by the Regents was to cut appropriations in excess of CHE recommendations and funds appropriated to CHE for distribution to the institutions.

Other state supported universities are taking similar positions on the subject, according to Powell.

"The schools whose Regents have met have sent out similar statements. The schools whose Regents have not met will be sending out statements as far as I know," Powell said.

The Regent's statement has been sent to the governor, lieutenant governor, the leaders of the General Assembly, members of appropriate committees and the members of the CHE.

It is not known where the cutbacks will occur.

"It depends on how the legislation is written," Powell said.

The cutbacks could effect the current year's budget by the state holding back some of the funds the University was

Outlaws concert confirmed at Senate meeting

By SARAH WARREN
News Editor

The Outlaws concert was confirmed at this week's Student Senate meeting for Tuesday, Feb. 27 as part of the University's Centerboard concert series. Tickets for students will be $6 in advance and the concert will be held in Alumni Coliseum.

No group has been scheduled as a back-up but Director of Student Activities Skip Daugherty said one will be scheduled.

John Prine is also scheduled for Feb. 12 in Brock Auditorium and tickets will be $5.

Spring semester vacancies in the Senate were discussed at the meeting and elections set for Feb. 6.

According to Senator Mike Ditchen, there will probably be vacancies in every college. There are four vacancies now, he said, but they are expecting 10 to 15.

Senate campaign petitions may be obtained from the Student Association office Monday, Jan. 22. Petitions are due Jan. 2 at 4 p.m.

Resident Assistant (RA) applications are being taken earlier than usual, it was also announced, for next year. Those wishing to apply should meet in the Jagers or Kennamer Rooms Wednesday, Jan. 24, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Senate passed a proposal which confirmed their support of a letter sent by the University's Board of Regents to the special session of the General Assembly.

The letter asked that no cuts be made in the University's budget during the special session called by Lt. Gov. Thelma Stovall.

"They started talking about a three percent reduction in the total budgets" of all state universities, said Jeff Cooper, vice president of the Senate and student regent for the University.

"That could seriously affect programs at the University," he said, "and this will at least show that students are concerned about cuts in the budget."

General Assembly should consider priorities before cutting budget

Since California's Proposition 13 of a year ago the entire country has jumped on the band wagon, so to speak, and started looking for ways to cut government spending.

The Kentucky General Assembly is currently involved in a special session aimed at reducing spending by the state government.

One of the areas the General Assembly is looking at is the reduction of funds channeled into institutions of higher education.

What this means is that the University's budget will most likely be cut, either this year or next.

If there are cuts this year non-personal items will have to be sacrificed. No new equipment that had received funds according to the present budget would be purchased.

Dr. J.C. Powell, president of the University has made the statement that no one will lose their jobs if the present budget is cut.

Powell and the Board of Regents have sent an official statement to concerned parties about the position of the University on the situation.

It is suggested in the statement that appropriations made in excess of Council on Higher Education recommendations be cut as well as funds appropriated to the Council for distribution.

The Council has recommended a list of priorities to the General Assembly for their consideration.

Existing programs head the list of items to retain full funding by the state.

Such items as the increase in the minimum wage and other federal laws and regulations have next priority.

Funds to offset inflation in wages and salaries and in the cost of running the University are next on the Council's priority list.

Expansion and new programs have been given last priority.

The University and other State supported universities are expected to support the Council and its proposed priorities.

The Council and the state supported universities seem to know what they want out of these proposed budget cuts. The General Assembly does not.

The General Assembly is still not sure where to cut government spending. They do not know if they will cut funds to higher education. And if they do cut these funds, how they are going to cut them.

The University meanwhile is going on about its usual business of making up the budget for the next fiscal year, which runs from July 1 until June 30.

It is a good idea to cut back on government spending. Tax payers are paying too much for some of the waste and luxuries the government has in the past taken advantage of.

The General Assembly should get their priorities set before they consider cutbacks on higher education.

There must be unnecessary jobs and paperwork that can be eliminated before higher education is cut.

The state owes it to itself to continue higher education programs. If for no other reason than the students who will inherit the workings of the state in years to come.

Maybe the General Assembly should look at itself before it starts looking elsewhere for spending reductions. It would be interesting to find out how much this special session is costing the taxpayers.

Lunch time brings University to halt

This editorial should be called "The Hour the University Stopped." The hour the University stopped is from noon until 1 p.m.; lunch hour.

It seems that every administrative office is closed during this time period.

Offices in both the Jones Building and the Administration Building close their doors at noon, shutting out many of the people who need their services who cannot take advantage of them during other times.

There are even cases when the University services are closed up when students must use them.

During registration the doors were closed at 11 a.m. in order to get students through in time for the workers to go to lunch at noon.

The students were herded out at noon. Those who had not completed registration at this time had to come back after lunch and stand in the lines again.

This is hardly fair to the students. Considering the number of people who work at registration it does not seem a necessity for all of them to go to lunch at the same time.

Some times students, as well as faculty and staff, need to cash a check and because of classes or work they cannot do this any other time than the lunch hour.

The cashier's window in the basement of the Powell Building is closed during the lunch hour.

There are quite a few offices in the Jones Building and the Administration Building that lock their doors at noon, or in some cases before.

Financial Assistance and Student Loans are closed at noon to enable those in the office to go to lunch.

Continuing Education and the Office of Undergraduate Studies are closed at noon also.

One office which should definitely stay open but does not is the Housing office. This seems to be a very important operation of the University. Housing is a very basic need, especially at this or any University.

The Admissions office is closed not from noon until 1 p.m. but from 11:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. One and a half hours for lunch is just a little long especially for this office.

Despite all of these offices that are closed there are several that remain open or at least have someone in it to take phone calls and messages during lunch.

Next to the Bursar's office in the Administration Building there is a cashier's window that stays open during lunch for check cashing.

Because the cashier's window in the Powell Building closes at noon, the window in the Administration Building often has a long line during lunch.

The Registrars office keeps the window open for students to obtain transcripts or take care of other business.

Some of the other offices that remain open from noon until 1 p.m. are Student Activities, Placement and Safety.

Why is it that these offices can remain open and others close?

The offices that remain open send their staff on a staggered lunch schedule.

What this means is that some of the staff goes to lunch from 11:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. and the rest of the staff goes when the first group returns.

This is a good policy to follow for some of these offices that close.

Business during the lunch hour is probably not very heavy and a reduced staff could most likely handle it.

There will be offices whose staff is just too small to stagger lunch and this is understandable, but some of these offices with two secretaries and as many staff people could surely eat lunch in shifts.

It is a waste of time to close an office when there are the resources to keep it open.

Vietnam vet

speaks out

Editor, Anyone who saw the television show Monday night (Lou Grant) saw how it really is for the Vietnam War veteran.

We served our country, the United States of America, even though most of us didn't believe in the war.

People complained about the war but they were the people who did or didn't go to the polls to elect decent politicians to get us out of the war, or police action, or whatever official name that was placed on Vietnam.

The men and women who served in the conflict aren't the ones to blame for the Vietnam Police Action or war, it's the people who scorn us now, they are the ones to blame.

The Vietnam Veterans need the help and backing from the people not scorn, hatred and malice from them.

At times I wonder if the worst mistake I ever made was to go into the Navy and serve my country, in the worst mess (the Vietnam War) our country ever endured.

The Vietnam veteran has been through enough hell with the war, so please make life a little bit easier for us at home. We cared about you, do you care about us?

Everyone needs a pat on the back for a good job

Accenting the negative rather than the positive is something that journalists are often accused of (and to an extent rightfully so) but it seems that sometimes the good things that people do are not recognized with so much as a thank you under any circumstances or by anyone.

When the words ego, egotist or egotism are used in regard to a certain individual or group of individuals it usually has a negative connotation. "He really thinks he is God's gift, what an ego" or "politicians are an egotistical, self-centered group." It is not generally considered as a very nice label.

While there are people or groups of people that do, as a rule have this type of label applied to them, egos are something that we all have and teachers, administrators, parents and other students, it seems especially important to enforce a more positive self image.

Take a look at the people who have a good self image, they are the ones that are noticed by perspective employers and are likely to be successful. They like and feel good about themselves and this is what helps them to put themselves across well to others.

Of course there are those who are so egotistical that they are obnoxious bores, we all know a few of those and this is when a positive self-image turns around and becomes negative.

Even in cases like this a word of praise from someone else might shut them up and keep from feeling the need to do it themselves.

to put someone else down in order to make yourself look better, but a good word to someone else now and then might do a bit for your own self image.

While I'm on the subject of saying a kind word now and then, a group that we all tend to rush by as we go about our daily routines, is the maintenance workers.

Without them we would be living in very dirty dorms, and the roaches would be breeding faster than they already are.

They really do a lot for us and don't get much more than an occasional "hello" as we pass quickly by them in the halls.

It isn't hard to stop and show a little extra appreciation.

In the Progress office I've noticed that people sometimes take for granted when someone writes a really good story, or takes extra time to do a little more when they really haven't got the time. This is probably true in just about every other office as well. You may think it but nothing takes the place of saying it.

Budget official announces mistake

The state's top budget official was quoted in yesterday's Lexington Herald as saying the 1976 budget for higher education of $55 million did not cover the total cost of projects authorized by the governor.

A summer program Upward Bound aids low-income students

By GINNY EAGER
Features Editor

Upward Bound is a summer program designed to motivate high school students from low-income families to attend college. "So What?" says the average college student.

But most students at the University do not realize that there are summer job opportunities available through the Upward Bound program.

Each summer 110 high school students from 12 counties in Eastern Kentucky come to the campus for about six weeks. During this time the students are required to take five classes. Math, social science and English are required and the student can elect to take anything else from music to industrial arts.

the University said that he strongly believes in the program.

According to Power, 95 per cent of the Upward Bound students do go on to attend college and that is the primary goal of the entire program. He is very pleased with the program here on campus and considers it one of the finest in the nation.

McCleese, the outreach counselor of the program, said, "We're trying to get over to our kids that just because you're poor you can still be a success."

As the outreach counselor, he is the first contact with prospective Upward Bound members. He travels to the various high schools and with the guidance counselors reviews possible candidates for Upward Bound.

to keep in touch with students after they graduate.

An important part of the student's summer are the tutor counselors. They are college students hired to work with the students the six weeks they are here.

According to McCleese, there are approximately 12 positions open for college students who wish to be tutor counselors. He said that juniors and seniors are preferred but occasionally an exception is made.

"It is important to remember that we are preparing these children for college and that they come from low-income families," said McCleese.

The tutor counselor must live in the dorm with the students and maintain very close contact. McCleese added that it is important for the tutor counselors to be aware that they are constantly preparing the students for college.

Among the duties of the counselors are being directly responsible for 10 students, being responsible to the resident director and the Upward Bound staff, they must enforce the rules, help with advising the students as well as being a big brother or sister to the students.

To apply for tutor counselor positions, one must obtain an application from the Upward Bound office, 422 Begley. He will be interviewed by Powers and another Upward Bound official as well. The interview consists mainly of putting the applicant in hypothetical situations and finding out his or her reaction.

McCleese stressed that although Upward Bound is a program for high school students, job opportunities are available for college students. Now is the time to apply and more information may be obtained from the Upward Bound office, 622-1424.

'The student must show some form of academic talent.'

But the summer is not filled with classrooms and homework, while here the group always takes at least one overnight trip. Last summer they traveled to Opryland in Nashville and according to Bob McCleese, they will possibly go to Kings Island this coming summer.

Pizza parties, swimming parties, trips to Whitehall, square dances, skating parties and intramurals are also a part of the program.

Upward Bound is federally funded by HEW and "is designed to generate the skills and motivation necessary for success in education beyond high school among young people from low-income backgrounds."

Louis Power, the project director at

Students fill out applications and McCleese talks with them and with their parents and he talks with Powers about the applicants and they decide which student gets to participate.

The main requirement is that the student must show some form of academic talent. This information is obtained from the various aptitude tests given in high school and the Upward Bound program administers a test also.

McCleese said that the program also likes to follow up on the students who attend the summer program and if the student is still in high school he keeps in touch on his regular visits.

Power added that it is extremely hard

Law enforcers come in four divisions

What do those young men and women in green uniforms do on campus besides give parking tickets?

Cadets, as these young law enforcement students are officially known, are affiliated with the Division of Public Safety and their duties include not only patrolling the parking lots, but also patrolling campus streets to look out for student safety.

Actually, the cadets are only one of four divisions of law enforcers involved in the Division of Public Safety, which was known as the Division of Safety and Security until last August.

According to the director of the division, Thomas Lindquist, the divisions involved include the Department of Safety Services, the Patrol Services, The Parking and Transportation Services and the Division of Criminal Investigations and Crime Prevention.

The Department of Safety Services involves people who plan ahead for emergencies such as fires, floods and any other type of emergencies that might involve the evacuation of dorms and buildings. Also, they work to give personal protection to the employees of the Division of Public Safety.

The Department of Parking and Transportation Services includes six full-time bus drivers who have the access to nine University buses. Fifteen vehicles are also included within the department.

According to Lindquist, the Patrol Service is what most students on campus are most familiar with as far as the Division of Public Safety is concerned. These are the law enforcers who circulate the campus in uniform.

Blue uniforms are worn by the commissioned police officers. Under the police officers are the cadets dressed in green and tan uniforms.

The most dominating difference in an officer and a cadet is the fact that an officer has the power to arrest whereas a cadet does not, Lindquist said.

"Usually, a cadet who earns a degree in law enforcement at the university will be encouraged to stay on with our department and become an officer," Lindquist said.

Once a crime has been observed and reported by a cadet or officer, the Division of Criminal Investigations and Crime Prevention takes over.

These law officers handle mainly important crimes such as rape, major theft or other major crimes.

Scattered throughout the four divisions of the program are 11 women: five cadets, three officers and three security guards.

The Division of Public Safety is located across from Clay Hall.

Coles Raymond M.D. Acne

Acne is the most common skin disorder and skin disorders are about one-fifth of all cases seen in general practice. The figure is enormously increased in the under-30 age group, since acne is a disorder you outgrow.

However, due to the fact that it usually strikes at the onset of adolescence, I believe sincerely that it causes more pain to more people for a longer time than do bone fractures. Agony of mind and spirit is still agony, and you can't scratch it.

What is acne, besides being a pustular, often disfiguring skin disease of the face, shoulders and chest?

Well, it is a disease of the oil glands of the skin. Back in the days of side shows, in addition to the Fat Lady, the Bearded Lady, and Jo-Jo the Dog-Faced Boy (all diseased people, disfigured and desperate), was usually the Fish Man who had, quite literally, scales all over him. He too was diseased. He had Ichthyosis, which means "fish disease." He was born with no oil glands to soften and lubricate his skin, so it dried out and flaked off in scales all his life—a fate worse than acne!

However, if a person has too many oil glands, or if the normal number are overactive due to hormone changes associated with glandular irregularities, he or she gets acne. That means that the oil ducts from the glands to the skin become plugged (whiteheads or blackheads) and the glands themselves become infected.

Of course, glandular irregularities are most common premenstrually at adolescence, and commonly up into the twenties. Most acne clears up spontaneously by the thirties. Of course to a teenager that seems like the second half of the next century, and is no comfort at all.

Most acne can be helped. Here is a treatment plan from Dr. Schauer, a professor of dermatology at the Kansas Medical Center, plus a patient's treatment guide published by the journal "Modern Medicine." Acne is classified by severity, grades I thru 4.

Grade I—Use an antibacterial soap (Dial or Safeguard). Also "Liquimat," an over-the-counter sulfur-resorcinol lotion, applied daily.

Grade II and III—all the above plus tetracycline, which has to be prescribed. This is usually given orally, but a tetracycline ointment has recently become available and is better. Also plus retinoic acid gel plus ultraviolet light therapy, plus extraction of blackheads.

Grade IV—all of above with higher dosage of tetracycline or trial of a different antibiotic.

Advice for Acne Patients from "Modern Medicine:"

Wash your face twice a day with an antibacterial soap (Dial or Safeguard) on a wash cloth. Do not rub too vigorously.

Drink 4 to 6 glasses of water each day.

Certain foods may aggravate acne. Be aware of the foods that affect you and, as a general rule, avoid or greatly limit your intake of the following: chocolate, cocoa, cola soft drinks, whole milk, butter, whipped cream, ice cream, rich or sharp cheese, buttermilk, fatty meats, spicy condiments, spicy smoked meats, pizza, peanuts and peanut butter, brazil nuts, animal fats, and coconut oil. You may eat the following foods (this is by no means an exhaustive list): hard candy, diet cola, other soft drinks, skim milk, sherbert, margarine, cottage and cheddar cheese, fish, chicken and turkey, almonds and walnuts, and corn or vegetable oils.

Avoid violent exercise because the increased perspiration will increase the activity of your oil glands.

Moderate suntanning is beneficial, but sunburn should be avoided. Do not use oily or greasy suntan preparations.

Performance of maintenance workers receives mixed views

By KAREN LEWIS
Guest Writer

The University maintenance department has been the subject of much criticism.

Students accuse maintenance personnel of idleness and inefficiency. Some female students even accuse maintenance men of being "Peeping Toms."

Despite these negative feelings many students and dorm directors feel that the maintenance department does an adequate job.

"Considering the size of the buildings and the number of work orders, they are doing an efficient job," said Angie Siders, Sidney Clay director.

Approximately 319 men and women are responsible for the upkeep of the 17 dormitories on campus. These same people care for the classroom buildings and the buildings housing administrative offices.

Students whose rooms need common repairs such as replacing broken locks and fixing faulty plumbing, broken light fixtures or damaged furniture must submit a requisition to the residence hall office.

Three copies of the requisition are made. One is sent to the maintenance department, one is sent to the Housing Office and one copy is retained at the residence hall office.

"The use of requisitions verify what needs to be done," said Nancy Ward, director of Martin Hall. The requisition procedure here differs from methods used at other universities.

Many universities call the maintenance service directly whenever there is a problem.

Most dorm directors, however, feel that the requisition policy is efficient and more convenient.

At times of emergency, however, the requisition procedure is impractical. If there is an emergency requiring the aid of maintenance personnel, the dorm director calls the office of Buildings and Grounds directly.

In most cases personnel respond quickly to their call.

Most room damages reported by students are things which are fixed or replaced easily such as light fixtures or blinds.

Several students, however, say that maintenance personnel have neglected to fix damages reported at the beginning of last semester.

One reason given for the neglect of some repairs in the dorms is the use of too many men working on a job that could be performed efficiently by one worker.

By reducing the number of men sent to do minor repairs, more work could be done in other areas of the campus.

One dorm director said, "Most of the complaints from students are minor ones but during a major emergency they really come through."

Neglect by the maintenance department also occurs in the men's dorms. Among those were door knobs, door locks, window sills and holes in the ceiling.

Elain Alvino, a resident of McGregor Hall, said that her sink overflowed for two weeks, flooding her room as well as other rooms in her hall.

Mary Auge, a Combs Hall resident, waited two months for maintenance personnel to put a new lock on her door. During those two months Auge worried about the security of her possessions while she was in class.

An RA at Commonwealth said that his hall went without heat for two days this month. The showers and the water fountains weren't working either.

Many women living in the dorms complain that the presence of maintenance men in the halls threaten their privacy. Some even accuse them of looking in their rooms as they walk by.

In some dorms the presence of men working in the halls is announced. Many women, however, don't feel this is a satisfactory solution to the problem.

The use of female maintenance workers to clean and sweep floors, in addition to their other duties, has been suggested.

Frat doesn't stand ghost of a chance in Sigma Chi house.

By MATTHEW DURHAM
Staff Writer

It feels funny writing about a house being haunted and living in it at the same time. I'd heard all the stories before I moved in, however I wanted to live off campus and it seemed the natural place to go.

The Sigma Chi house on Barnes Mill Road has the look of an Alfred Hitchcock movie set.

When I first initiated into the fraternity I thought the stories of six children dying in the house were told to scare people and make your date slide closer to you. The people who told the tales swore by them, but who really believes in ghosts?

"I was sitting in my room upstairs working on my stereo and I thought I was alone in the house. All of a sudden my door was kicked or something flew up against it. I was right by the door and threw it open and looked down the hall. No one was there. That bang almost knocked the door off its hinges," said

Shane Mahan, a resident of the house. A mile in back of the house is a graveyard in the middle of a field. The house used to be a farm house on which the residents of fifty years ago owned all the surrounding land, including the field the old graves are on. It's rumored that the farmers and their children are buried back at the grave site.

"I was asleep in my room when the smoke alarm went off and woke me up. My bed was shaking and when I got on the floor it was shaking also. I was the only one in the house and when I went to bed all the lights were off. Now the smoke alarm was going off and on and every light in the house was on, even the ones in the bedrooms, whose doors were padlocked," told Steve Wilec.

One resident moved out after he woke and felt his bed shaking. He moved back after two weeks but always kept his car in the driveway with the keys in the ignition. When he heard something he didn't like, he would run down to his car and leave in a hurry.

Four years ago when two residents were filling the coal stoker to heat the house, they complained of not enough light. At that instant the coal room light came on. The light had not been on for a year before, despite putting in two new light bulbs.

Several residents including myself have heard footsteps in the attic. One time several went up to the attic to investigate and found a black candle that had been burned down.

Babies crying have been heard by several. One sat in one room and heard crying in another room but was too frightened to see what it was. Others have seen doors open by themselves.

I have lived out at the Sigma Chi House for several months and in that time have seen and heard a pinball machine playing by itself, camodes flush themselves and foot steps in the attic.

I would say I don't believe in ghosts because there is no proof, but I say it because about midnight tonight I turn off the lights to go to sleep in the house.

Black Student Union sponsors memorium for late civil rights leader

By WANDA CHILDRESS
Staff Writer

A standing-room-only crowd attended a memorial service for the late Martin Luther King, Jr., in the University Chapel Tuesday night.

The memorium was sponsored by the Black Student Union (BSU), a University organization, as a commemoration to the civil rights leader. Hayden Dudley, a participant, began the service by leading everybody into singing "Lift Every Voice and Sing," the Black national anthem.

President of the BSU, Sharon Boggs, followed with the welcome and then the University Ensemble, a black choir, sang three songs, directed by senior Isham Corderly.

Their music was the catalyst for an emotion-charged evening. During its renditions, the Ensemble and many of the audience responding by clapping and the audience insisted on an encore. Janet Cosby, guest singer sang two songs which added to the already heated emotions of the audience.

Gwen Buffington, 24, an Ensemble member, calmed the atmosphere by giving a brief account of King's life.

Guest speaker, Reverend Joshua R. Cutler, pastor of Centennial Olivet Baptist Church in Louisville spoke on how to "Keep Your Bread Fresh."

Cutler cited King as a example of the bread of life by reminding the audience of King's goals and achievements. A self-proclaimed militant, he warned everybody that segregation still exists today.

"Don't you believe that Jim Crow is dead. He is more sophisticated today," he exclaimed.

Ending his sermon with a solo rendition of "Yes, Jesus Loves Me," Cutler's audience responded by demanding an encore in which they joined in.

Kevin Cosby, a Louisville Baptist minister, concluded the service by speaking about the apathy of black students towards the BSU. He said that we can better commemorate King by upholding black organizations.

As a result of the program, Richard Shanks, 22, Richmond, praised the service and said that he felt that it helped him to realize his own potentials. "It gave us a spiritual uplift," added Terressa Banks, 19, student and member of the Ensemble.

Cutler also believes that "Having this service helps to remind us that he (King) still lives."

"Remember, you are black," he said.

Study program increases awareness of Mexican culture

By WANDA CHILDRESS
Staff Writer

In May of 1977, 18 students and teachers participated in the University's Mexico Travel Study Program, a trip designed to increase the student's experience with other cultures.

Because the program's intention is to reflect the uniqueness of the student's Mexican experience, the trip incorporates an unrestricted learning experience.

The Travel Study Program was started in 1959 as Dr. Kenneth Clawson's idea. The Dean of Special Programs took the first group to Mexico and since then the trip has been an annual affair.

"It's a great vacation!" according to Rafael Grenier, graduate Spanish major. He said the trip was worthwhile and historically enlightening.

Grenier added that there were no strict rules for students.

"Everybody had their own freedom," he explained. The participants only stayed together while traveling.

Norris MacKinnon, Spanish instructor and director of the trip, encouraged the students to explore on their own.

Although the trip has no classroom instruction, the students are expected to attend orientation sessions before they depart for Mexico. Afterwards, they are required to submit a written report.

"There's no real work, just a written report," said Grenier.

According to Kim Rittenour, a part-time Spanish instructor, it was a most "marvelous experience for anyone."

Rittenour said she felt she got more out of the trip because she increased her Spanish fluency.

Even though the trip organizers prefer Spanish majors, MacKinnon encourages anyone to go.

However, the student must be in good academic standing.

The program is open to students from other universities also and not all the participants are students or Spanish majors.

"Some people think you have to speak Spanish, but you don't," said Grenier.

Although some knowledge of the language is recommended, it is not required.

In addition to going on the trip the students receive three semester hours of undergraduate credit for Spanish 496 or three hours graduate credit for Spanish 681.

Graduating high school seniors may also enroll in the program and earn their first college credits by completing Spanish 496 requirements.

MacKinnon foresees an expansion to twenty or twenty-five participants in the future.

The students who went reacted "very well," he commented.

MacKinnon said that any stereotypes the students might have had of the Mexican people diminished because of the variety of the people they encountered.

"They were very interested in the American people," added Rittenour. No one encountered any trouble with each other or with the Mexicans.

"The people were warm and friendly," said Rittenour. She cited one instance in which some of the participants joined in a game with Mexican children in one town they visited.

Because of this relaxed attitude she encountered, Rittenour now feels that Americans are too rigid.

"The Mexicans have a more relaxed attitude towards life," she said.

Even better than the relaxed attitude, recounted Grenier, was the fact that he survived for three weeks in Mexico on $200!

Double Coliseum wins leave Colonels 9-4, fans hungry

By CHRIS ELSBERRY
Staff Writer

"Because we are picked number one in the conference, everyone is going to come out at us as hard as they can every time, whether we are at home or on the road. Our kids have got to realize that," said Ed Byhre, basketball coach.

The Colonels this week upped their overall record to 9-4 and a league leading 3-0 in the OVC, winning two close games, 82-73 over Austin Peay and 73-69 over Murray.

Against Murray State Monday night, the Racers opened with a semi-delay type offense and were leading 9-0 after the first four minutes, and Murray played as if they were 12-2 rather than their actual 2-12 record.

But the Colonels rallied back to take a 12-11 lead on a layup by Vic Merchant. Eastern then slowly pulled out to a 32-21 halftime advantage mainly on the strength of 12 Merchant first half points.

The second half was a free-for-all. James Tillman, who only had eight points at the break, suddenly exploded for 12 quick points to build the Colonels to a 55-43 lead with eight minutes to play.

The lead stayed at nine, 69-60 with only two minutes left, but the Racers would not give up and play dead.

A tip-in by Kenny Hammons cut the lead to 71-69, but "Turk" iced the victory with a pair of free throws with 10 seconds left.

"They (Murray) executed very well," said Byhre. "They tried a lot of different things out there. We had talked about it the day before but we were just not alert out there."

Racer center John Randall led Murray with 21 points and 12 rebounds. Eastern's two big men, Dale Jenkins and Dave Bootcheck could only manage six points and six rebounds between them.

"We've had no center play at all the past few games," said Byhre. "This has got to get better."

Dunk fever hit Eastern this past Saturday night as they powered past the Gavs, 82-73.

Kenny Elliott and Turk Tillman each had two big slams and Vic Merchant and Chris Williams stuffed home one each as the Colonels led anywhere from six to 12 points throughout the game.

Tillman again was the showman for the maroon and white as he pumped in 13 of 23 shots and two of four from the free throw line for 28 points. Elliott and Bruce Jones both hit double digits with 11 points for the Colonels.

"I felt we took this game a little too lightly," said Byhre. "We committed some foolish fouls and we gave up a lot of second shots."

Byhre was referring to the fact that Eastern was out rebounded by the smaller Austin Peay club, 38-37.

"You've got to remember," said Byhre, "that this was our first game at home since last Dec. 9th. We have had six straight road games. We have to get back in the flow of the home crowd. We were a little shaky out there. We had 14 turnovers at halftime and that's not too good considering we only average 16 a game."

TV, Tech, Urbana featured next in Coliseum

By KEN TINGLEY
Sports Editor

In the glare of the TV lights and the pressure of a regional television audience on hand, Eastern's cagers will take the floor Saturday afternoon at Alumni Coliseum for the toughest test of the young OVC season.

The Golden Eagles of Tennessee Tech will take a 2-1 conference record to the floor of the coliseum where the Colonels have yet to lose a game this season. A departure from tradition that is more than welcome to third year coach Ed Byhre.

Byhre's teams have never lost a game to Tech and they are once again a good bet to take the game. The Colonels are the only team in the OVC who are undefeated in conference play and are averaging more points a game than any other team in the league.

The Colonels also feature the leading scorer in the conference in James Tillman as well as having Kenny Elliott and Bruce Jones in the top twenty.

Tech will arrive Friday on the strength of a two game winning streak that saw them defeat both Middle Tennessee and Western Kentucky to improve their overall record to 6-8. Both Middle and Western have winning records. The Colonels defeated Middle earlier in the year by four points on Middle's court.

Tech features a balanced scoring attack that sports four players averaging in double figures. Jimmy Howell, a 6-1 guard, leads the quartet with a 14.7 scoring average. He is also second in the league with an .862 free throw percentage.

Paul Chadwell, a freshman guard, is second with a 12.5 scoring average. Pete Abuls, another freshman is one of the forwards and is averaging 12 points a game. Abuls is also leading the conference in field goal percentage. Brian Troupe rounds out the top four. The senior is averaging 10.9 points. He is also sixth in the league in rebounding, snaring 7.4 a game.

The Golden Eagles head coach Cliff Malpass described his team as "very, very young." Tech features only three upperclassmen on their roster as well as seven freshmen.

The Colonels round out next week's action with a non-conference tilt against Urbana College. The Colonels will be home for one more game after Urbana when they host Morehead.

Keith Burton, a junior from Washington D.C., was right behind, jumping 50'3" for a personal best. Gerry Gible, a freshman from Dublin, Ireland, ran the 1000 meter race in 2:14 for a personal record. In the shot put two personal records were set when Dennis Graham, a junior from Meridan, Kansas, putted the shot 54'3" and Brian Dowds, the 1978 Ohio State Champion, went 50'6" for the Colonels. Bill Morgan, a sophomore from Rochester, Michigan, set a personal best in the mile, running it in 4:08.1. Morgan was also All-OVC in cross country last fall. The tracksters next meet is Saturday with University of Kentucky and Morehead State University at Richardson Arena in Morehead.

Wilkerson all-around best Gymnasts upset national powers in Louisville meet

By MONICA KEIFER
Staff Writer

The victory was oh so sweet this past Saturday for the women's gymnastic team because Eastern's young squad upset three nationally ranked teams.

The women scored impressive wins over the University of Louisville, University of Georgia and Indiana State University, Saturday afternoon in a four-way meet held in Louisville.

Louisville was ranked tenth in the nation last year, while Georgia was ranked 13th and Indiana was right behind them with a ranking of 19th.

Eastern was declared the winner with 132.05 points while Georgia was runner-up with 129.05 points. Louisville was third having 126.35 points and Indiana followed with 125.00 points.

"It's always nice to beat ranked teams," commented Eastern's coach Agnes Chrietberg. "Our team is made up of mostly freshmen and they've learned how to perform under pressure with good competition and to control their nerves."

"We're starting out with our two hardest meets so the women are almost having to peak early," she added.

Rhonda Wilkerson scored highest for the Colonels with 33.45 points in the all-around competition. It was good for second place overall. Cheryl Behne third with 33.30 points and Beth Miles the only senior on the team, was sixth, having 32.1 points. Laura Spencer also scored well with 31.15 points.

According to Chrietberg, any score over 30 points is very good.

"In gymnastics, the top four people score in each event," Chrietberg said. "So if one woman has a bad day the others can cover for her."

There is much depth to the Eastern squad, making for the high scores Chrietberg added.

The Colonels won every event except the floor exercises, which they lost by three tenths of a point.

"They did super on the beam," smiled Chrietberg. "It was the highest scoring event of all the other events."

Rhonda Wilkerson was the highest scorer on a single event with an 8.7 on the balance beam.

The gymnasts next meet is Saturday when they travel to Columbus, Ohio and meet Ohio State, Bowling Green State, and West Virginia.

According to Chrietberg, Ohio State has a tough team and the meet should prove to be great competition and very exciting.

Miami falls again as gymnasts set records

By ROB DOLLAR
Staff Writer

Three school records were broken last Saturday when the men's gymnastics team soundly defeated a team from Miami University of Ohio, by a score of 178.80 to 142.75.

Team captain, Tony Webber set a new school record on the pommel horse with a score of 7.9, breaking his own record of last year.

New school records were also established on the parallel bars and rings by Guy Watson with respective scores of 8.75 and 8.55.

According to Coach Gerry Calkin, the meet was further highlighted by the fact that the team score of 178.80 was within two points of the all-time men's gymnastics school record.

Calkin added that "We see a lot of room to grow from the 178," and stressed that video tape of the meet revealed some areas for desired improvement.

"Quote of the week"

"We purposely didn't build a swimming pool because Coach Bryant wanted to keep it like the other dorms."

Charley Thornton, Assistant Athletic Director at the University of Alabama describing the men's athletic dorm which is sometimes referred to as the Bryant Hilton because of its palatial quality.

He also pointed out that the Eastern line-up was "greatly strengthened" by the return of Dave Cole, a sophomore from Lexington, who had missed the first two meets with a shoulder injury.

Two freshman team members, Gibson Hocker and Stan Hewett, were also singled out as having good meets.

Hocker had the highest single score in the meet with a 9.0 in the vaulting event.

Calkin further commented that he was pleased with the results of the meet, as well as the fact that a good crowd attended to see some fine routines and performances turned in by both teams.

The Colonels return to action tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the Weaver Health Building for a home meet against Southeast Missouri and Northern Michigan.

Calkin stated that little information was known about either team with the exception of two team scores turned in by the Southeast Missouri team before Christmas.

Eastern's Tony Webber is shown performing on the rings during the Colonels 178.8-142.75 victory over Miami of Ohio. Webber and Chris Haynam both posted 8.0 scores in the rings which was the high for Eastern. The men's next meet is Friday night in the Coliseum against Southeast Missouri.

Western dumps Eels in first dual meet

By WILLIE SAWYERS
Staff Writer

The Eastern men's swimming team lost their first dual meet of the season last Friday at Bowling Green. Western Kentucky captured nine of first-place finishes out of the 14 events in defeating the Eels by a score of 69 to 44. The loss drops the Eel record to 2-1.

Sophomore Chris Gray accounted for two of the four first place victories by the Eels as he won the 1000 meter freestyle and the 500 meter freestyle. Gray was voted "Eel of the Meet" by his teammates for his performance.

Captain John Meisenheimer edged out Western's Carter for first place in the 100 meter Freestyle. Gary Jameson won the 200 meter individual medley rounding out the top finishers for the

Even though Western won the meet by 25 points, the meet was actually closer than that time-wise as many of the events were decided by only a few seconds. "We weren't beaten that badly," commented Coach Dan Lichty. "We had at least two lifetime best swims. We were very tired going into the meet."

Disappearing leads, inconsistency foil women cagers

By CRAIG COMBS
Staff Writer

The Lady Colonels basketball team came back to Alumni Coliseum for their second and third contests of the year and split with Ohio Valley Conference foes Austin Peay and Murray State.

Eastern rode a 36-11 first half lead to a 78-64 victory over Austin Peay last Saturday night, and then lost to Murray 80-70 on Monday.

But the most interesting thing about watching the women is that it has been like watching a disappearing act. A disappearing lead act. Head Coach Shirley Duncan says she views the trend with mixed emotions.

Duncan says she is concerned most with the fact that, "we just aren't putting two good halves of basketball together." One example she gives is last week's Middle Tennessee game which saw Eastern fall behind by 20 points, come back to within four, then finally lose, 75-61.

The last two games seem to prove her point. Against Austin Peay, the Lady Colonels held a 61-40 lead with 9:38 to go, but before you could say "Let's go Lady Gobs," Peay, with the help of a pressing defense, had launched a 13-2 spree that pulled them to within 63-53.

In a mirror image of that game Monday night, Eastern found themselves behind Murray 47-29 at halftime, then staged a great rally to eventually tie the game at 62 all with 5:15 left.

Individually for the two games, guard, Loretta Coughlin had 18 points against Austin Peay and she netted 20 more against Murray. She also grabbed 11 rebounds.

Peggy Gay and Sandra Mukes also scored well against Murray with 20 and 19 points respectively. Both also had fine efforts on the boards, combining for 20 rebounds.

Guard, Rita Taylor hit for 15 points Saturday against Austin Peay, while Vicki Viox came off the bench to grab a team-leading 12 rebounds and score seven points against Murray.

Apart from inconsistency and too many turnovers against the Austin Peay press, Coach Duncan says she feels the Lady Colonels offensive problems stem from not shooting well. "It is a simple fact that you have to be able to put the ball in the basket," she says, adding, "and that's something we just haven't been doing lately."

Eastern shot 46.2 per cent against Austin Peay and a dismal 37.2 per cent against Murray (including an ice-cold 29.2 per cent in the first half).

With five games remaining on the current homestand, and seven out of the next nine games at home, Coach Duncan says she is not discouraged, however.

"We decided to make some commitments in different directions after the first part of the schedule," she says, adding, "we want to run as much as we can and create as many turnovers as we can, and in that respect I think we are improving."

It is interesting to point out that the early February Ohio Valley Conference Tournament will be held at Alumni Coliseum this year.

The Murray loss dropped the Lady Colonels record to 3-8 overall and 1-3 in the OVC, going in to Thursday night's intrastate matchup with Louisville at Alumni Coliseum.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association recently ended their three day convention in San Francisco with some legislation that would seem to affect every one of the 800 member schools that was represented at the convention.

Legislation which would seem to outlaw athletic dormitories has been the biggest newsmaker as of late but already many of the universities that it would seem to affect are finding ways to get around it.

At first it was thought that the NCAA had outlawed exclusive athletic dormitories but now most of the schools seem to be interpreting the legislation to mean that they are in compliance as long as the dormitories don't come under the "extra benefits" category.

The legislation seems to have been aimed at some of the bigger schools that have a reputation for football and basketball factories. The University of Alabama has an athletic dorm that is known as the "Bryant Hilton" because of its luxury. But officials at Alabama believe that the dorm is in compliance.

Alabama's Assistant Athletic Director Charley Thornton commented, "I don't think it's extravagant. We have some new men's dorms on the campus that are nicer. We purposely didn't build a swimming pool because coach Bryant wanted to keep it like the other dorms."

The University of Kentucky also seems to have an athletic facility which seems to come under the category of "extra benefits." The Joe B. Hall Wildcat Lodge houses the UK basketball team and has been described as a bit nicer than your average dorm. In fact descriptions of the Hall of Mirrors in the Palace of Versailles have been used in the same breath with the Wildcat Lodge.

So what does this all mean. Well for once it seemed like the NCAA was taking a step to benefit the student-athlete instead of just the athlete. But it appears that the legislation passed isn't strong enough to stop the big schools from getting around it.

In Eastern's case it might have been a lot nicer for the athlete's if they had been separated into different dorms. Eastern's athletic dorms are not quite of the palatial quality of some of the larger universities.

Eastern's Athletic Director Don Combs stated that the only reason that the athletes at Eastern were housed together at all was because of the football team's early arrival in August and the basketball team's needing to stay at school over the

Athletic palaces

Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

"This dormitory thing has been blown completely out of proportion," said Combs, "The only reason we house all our athletes together is that the University won't allow all the dorms to be open when only the athletes are going to be here."

Combs stated that the new legislation would not affect Eastern since the athlete's dormitories are not under the extra benefits category and would not give Eastern a recruiting advantage.

It is a shame that the NCAA did not go at least one step further. For years many coaches have been under the impression that for a team to play together they must live together. Whether this is true or not is debatable but Penn State's football coach Joe Paterno has an interesting perspective on athletic dorm living.

Paterno does not require his team to all live in one dorm. He believes that part of the learning experience of the student-athlete is to meet and learn about all kinds of different people and to share ideas with them. Paterno adds a twist to this by saying that he thinks that depriving the rest of the student body a chance to meet some of the fine young men on his team would be a shame.

Although Paterno uses this philosophy to his own advantage, it does have a certain message which if taken seriously by most coaches could be beneficial to the growth and mental development of each athlete. After all that is what people go to school for. Even athletes.

DIAMOND DUST:
The NCAA has also voted to drop the number of football scholarships in IA football to 75 from a high of 95. Eastern was allowed 55 by OVC rules last year.

The OVC has also regained its automatic bid to the NCAA baseball playoffs. This comes despite the fact that the OVC has never won a NCAA playoff game.

The women's gymnastics team pulled out the surprise of the year as Agnes Chrietberg's freshmen dominated squad won a quad meet with such national powers as Indiana St., Georgia and Louisville. Rhonda Wilkerson finished second in the all-around competition while finishing first in the beam.

Newman Center provides ministry for students

By ROBIN PATER
Organizations Editor

An estimated 1,100 Eastern Kentucky University students, faculty, staff, and some local residents as well comprise the Catholic Newman Center, located on University Drive next to Walters Hall.

Serving as a base for campus ministry under the chaplaincy of Father Ron Ketteler, the Newman Center is a very young facility. The Center actually originated in a small residence on Oak Street in 1970 along with Rev. Ketteler. In August of 1977, the Newman Center was built under the parenthood of St. Stephen's parish. Starting out with virtually no money, according to Rev. Ketteler, the Newman Center—equipped with a sanctuary, living quarters, offices, conference room, kitchen, and multi-purpose hall—has incurred a debt of $83,000.

The debt will likely be paid off through means of support by alumni, the dioceses, parents of students, and other factors, Ketteler reported.

"The basis of participation, of course, is through the Sunday masses," said Ketteler. Liturgy planning, religious education classes, ushering, providing music at masses, and other activities are just some of the ways students involve themselves.

Studying scripture readings, retreats, and especially pre-cana (pre-marital) conferences also happen throughout the year. About 25 couples prepared for marriage at the Newman Center last year.

Ketteler feels that a very healthy sign is that "we deal with a lot of upperclassmen." 12 students serve on the Newman Council, that in a regular parish, would act as a parish council.

About the accomplishments of the Council, Ketteler smiled and remarked, "You have to be geared to the experiment of a campus community—it's quite different from a regular church." As chaplain of the Newman Center, Rev. Ketteler spends much of his time counseling students who come to him with personal, religious, and relationship problems.

"The number one thing we try to do is create an environment in which people can mature; to find their religious and personal identities," answered Ketteler.

"When I first came here," remembered Ketteler, "there were about 800 students who came to the Center. Since then, I would say the Catholic Church has really grown," he added.

Before he came to the Newman Center, Rev. Ketteler served as chaplain of the University of Kentucky. "The last 14 years, I've been only in campus ministry," commented Ketteler.

Masses at the Newman Center are held on Sunday at 10 a.m., 12 noon, and 5:30 p.m. Weekday masses are at 12 noon on Monday and Friday and on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at 5 p.m.

Though Rev. Ketteler encourages students and members to register, it is not mandatory in order to "belong." "Everyone belongs," stressed Ketteler. "You belong to the Newman Center because you belong to the Catholic Church."

Rev. Ron Ketteler takes time out for relaxation and reading in his living quarters at the Catholic Newman Center on University Drive.

Sororities say 'no' to sorority row

By ROBIN PATER
Organizations Editor

With the impending possibility of Eastern adopting a fraternity row in the future, the question that arises most, especially among females on campus, is: Why not a sorority row?

"The sororities don't want it," answered Skip Daugherty, director of student activities.

"Tight finances" is the reason for the decline of the nine sororities on campus. The national sororities have a policy in that they will not finance buildings or houses on leased land. Also, according to letters Daugherty has on file from national sorority bases, the nationals did not want to see the sororities burdened with large debts that would be incurred to build such houses.

Although nationals were negative about the suggested "sorority row," they were in favor of the possibility of one common panhellenic house or lodge.

"The thing behind a panhellenic building," told Daugherty, "is that it would provide possible meeting places, kitchenettes, and offices for the sororities."

Over the past two years, the sororities were polled about the housing suggestion. "We simply found they were not interested in individual housing," remarked Daugherty.

Thus, the reason for not having a sorority row is definitely not a matter of discrimination. As Daugherty sums it up, "They were included along the line until they opted to get out."

Disco

Future of disco reflected on bathroom walls

Last week while casually standing at a urinal in a local bathroom, my eyes scanned the graffiti scrawled on the wall before me. Amid the usual amateur attempts at poetry and the dirty jokes, one phrase stood out. It read: "Disco sucks for air."

America follows its usual pattern, disco, like streaking and the CB craze, will fade into blessed oblivion in a very short while.

Soon people will most likely be saying things like "remember when we used to get out there on the dance night. Disco music is about as stale and unexciting music that can be found anywhere. Every song employs virtually the same beat and rhythm that totally drowns out the lyrics, which is okay since most of the lyrics are about as dumb and childish as an Alice and Jerry first grade book.

Couple this with the fact that most discotheques play the same songs every night for weeks on end, and you've come up with a very boring night.

The music in discotheques is turned up full volume, creating a noise so loud and jarring that it must surely wake up good 'ol Hank Williams in his grave. I can just see him scratching his head and saying "surely I didn't do it this way."

A couple of nights ago at a disco, the music was so deafening and loud that some friends and I were forced to use sign language techniques in order to communicate.

The major point against disco music is that it offers no culture whatsoever. Students who travel to the Richmond discos every night are missing out on a great part of college life. College should be a time for students to enjoy different aspects of life; when you settle for disco you settle for repetitiveness.

Larry Bernard

Arts Editor

How appropriate, I mused, that the word disco should be mentioned in a bathroom, since disco is a complete "waste" of time anyway.

Disco is the crazy kind of phase America goes through ever so often. Several years ago America decided to bare all and streak through the streets, and not so very long ago everyone was talking into little microphones and uttering phrases like "that's a big 10-4, good buddy."

Now America has decided to "shake their booties" and "boogie-oogie-oogie" on a dance floor. If floor and make asses out of ourselves while that silly disco music was playing."

The main reason disco music and discotheques are so unworthwhile is that they have no substance. Everything involved with disco follows a set pattern: flashing lights, spacious dance floor (with the exception of some Richmond discos), the same music played continuously, boy meets girl, girl meets boy, boy meets boy, etc.

Nothing new and exciting ever happens at a disco; everything stays the same, night after night after

John Prine, Outlaws concert coming

Wait a minute, students, don't fall over from shock, but Centerboard has scheduled two concerts for this semester. Not not one, but two concerts.

An announcement such as that has got to be the surprise of the year.

John Prine, a singer-songwriter from Kentucky, will appear in Auditorium Feb. 12 at 7:30 p.m.

Prine is renowned for the authorship of such tunes as "Paradise," "Hello In There," "Dear Abby" and "Sam Stone." His songs have been recorded by such accomplished musicians as John Denver, Joan Baez and Tammy Wynette.

Tickets for the Prine concert go on sale Feb. 1. Prices are $5 for students.

The Outlaws, a country-rock band, will perform in concert at Alumni Coliseum Feb. 27 at 7:30 p.m.

The Outlaws are popular for such songs as "There Goes Another Love Song" and "Green Grass and High Tide."

Tickets for the Outlaws' concert are $6 for students.

Happy birthday, Nipper

RCA and its trademark, the foxterrier dog named Nipper, are celebrating their 50th anniversary this year.

'Harvard Hates America' attacks America's universities

By ROB DOLLAR
Staff Writer

It's been said that "nice guys finish last," but if John LeBoutillier, author of Harvard Hates America has his way, that saying may one day be obsolete.

LeBoutillier maintains in his book that the leaders of America should be "good, honest, and well-intentioned individuals."

Now there's an idea that someone should have thought of sooner!

LeBoutillier's book is an attack on what he considers the miserable state of America's leadership, but more specifically on Harvard College, as well as to a lesser degree other universities, for their failure to produce honorable leaders.

The author claims that nothing is wrong with the people or system of America, but that the real threat to our country is represented in the leaders from every sector of our society, many of whom are Harvard trained.

Granted these are serious charges, especially since they come from a 25 year-old recent Harvard graduate, but the scary part is, they seem to make sense.

From his experiences at Harvard College and Harvard Business School, LeBoutillier writes of what he calls the "Liberal Mind" and "Big Business" mentalities that are developed and thrive at Harvard, and which are taken out into the world by potential leaders.

With future leaders reportedly spouting off remarks like "there is no such thing as ethics or morality—there's just getting what you want," LeBoutillier unquestionably gets his point across.

Especially amusing to the college reader are some vivid descriptions of some rather disillusioning experiences in school, known all too well to the average collegian.

LeBoutillier points out examples of professors tailoring class courses to fit their own personal ideologies, as well as to correlate with course textbooks, which often were coincidentally written by the professor himself.

The examples of hypocrisy are illustrated quite well, especially the incident of the world-renowned professor who was totally in favor of a 100 per cent inheritance tax advocated by his particular candidate for president.

The professor turned out to be the third largest donor to the candidate's campaign, a fact made entirely possible by his wife's inheritance as an heiress to the Singer Sewing Machine fortune.

LeBoutillier writes of students receiving A's in courses for telling professors what "they want to hear."

He writes of the "insecurity" that he witnessed among his fellow students and the joining of causes simply because they were "in" or because "everybody else was doing it."

He mentions the drug scene and his personal experience of being assigned a roommate who was always "spaced out," whenever the old fellow happened to be conscious, that is.

After reading these amusing experiences, one begins to wonder if the author was joshing about having graduated from Harvard and instead may have actually attended some state college or perhaps even Eastern.

Surely, this type of behavior doesn't occur at Harvard, the institution that has given us the largest number of U.S. Presidents, as well as government leaders.

But the point is, it does go on, according to LeBoutillier.

The author further emphasizes that it is the atmosphere at Harvard and other universities, which in part help to create and allow the development of such cold attitudes as "let's take care of number one, first."

The book hints at optimism because LeBoutillier does not only condemn, but is fresh with ideas for change to help alleviate the problems that he suggests plague America.

Harvard Hates America is a book that should make you think, as well as admire John LeBoutillier for having the guts to write about what has probably crossed the minds of many Americans.

LeBoutillier still has the idealism and devoted love of country that has made America the nation that it is, but which unfortunately many of us have lost.

He simply won't accept the notion or professed reality that "it's a cold and cruel world out there."

Thank God, there's still some people left who wear a white hat!

With latest album Summer reigns as disco queen

By DON MCNAY
Staff Writer

Donna Summer's Live and More album has become the biggest selling record in the nation. This is a tribute to the rising appeal of disco music, and to the fact that Live and More might be the best collection of disco music since the soundtrack from Saturday Night Fever was released.

Live and More has a very unusual concept. The first three sides of the double-album set are a recording of Summer in concert. The last side is a series of songs done in a studio setting. The studio songs are set to the theme of Summer's latest hit

"MacArthur Park."

The live section of the album contains most of Summer's biggest hits. It contains a shortened version of "Love to Love You Baby" which is not bad, but not quite as good as the long version. On the other hand, "I Fell Love" is stretched out into infinity as Summer introduces her band during the song.

The best songs on the album are "I Love You" and "Last Dance." "I Love You" sounds every bit as good as her original version; "Last Dance" is not done as well as on the soundtrack of Thank God It's Friday. Still, the live version does not take much away from this fantastic song.

Summer is not the type of performer who is at her best on a live album. The kind of background support that she needs makes her more suited to the studio rather than a live set. However, the album is excellent from the standpoint that most of Summer's best songs are all contained on one album.

Donna Summer is the undisputed queen of disco music. It seems as though every song on Live and More has the potential to become a hit single. Live and More is a chance for one to hear the best music of the most versatile disco performer today.

Dozin' on the job

Glenn Brock of the Jim Ross Construction of Richmond has handled a lot of messy jobs but a slush-laden campus is certainly one of the worst. Mr. Brock is engaged in clearing the parking lot by the A.C. Coliseum.

Where did we put that proposal?

By SARAH WARREN
News Editor

"Happy anniversary," announced Student Senate President Steve Foster and Vice President-Student Regent John Cooper to a baffled Student Senate Tuesday night.

"It was one year ago today that we passed our rider's service board proposal," said Foster as he revealed a line-covered blackboard that looked like a road map of New York City.

Riders service board?
That's what the Student Senate said, too.

You see, Foster and Cooper weren't really celebrating the passage of the proposal.

The ironic celebration actually marked a year's passage since the proposal was first sent through the University's "proper channels."

The proposal called for a "rider's service board" to be built - a type of bulletin board for students who wanted to advertise rides needed or offered to and from school.

After leaving the Senate last year the proposal went, as usual, to President J.C. Powell's office. It was then approved and sent to Chad Middleton's Department of Building and Grounds, where it evidently disappeared.

So the Senate tried again.

This time the proposal also went to a subcommittee within the Senate and then to the subcommittee's chairman, Skip Daugherty, who was on sabbatical at the time.

Somewhere along the way, it was approved by Powell's office again and resent to Middleton's office. Foster said nobody knows where the proposal is now.

"If it takes a little time to get your proposals through, here's why," said Foster as the Senators laughed or shook their heads in disgust.

Foster later said this proposal really typical of proposals sent by the Senate, but just an example of some of the problems the Senate has in accomplishing even minor tasks.

Cold duck

the Stratton Building but not to learn. Ducks just like to swim around and quack alot, but with the weather lately these fowls have had to ice skate.

counting on for the rest of this fiscal year.

Any cut that would occur this year would be small.

The most that could be affected by the time legislation is enacted would be around 40 per cent.

A fiscal year for the University runs from July 1 until June 30. There are less than six months left of the current fiscal year.

If there were cutbacks on this budget they would be in the form of non-personnel items, according to Powell.

"No personnel will lose their jobs," Powell said. The cutbacks would be made in "the purchase of equipment, for example."

Powell pointed out that in the mid-1960's the state could not realize enough funds and the University budget had to be cut.

"We had to cut the budget then but we made it," Powell said.

The plans for next year's budget are going on as scheduled, though.

"If there are decisions by the legislature this spring we will incorporate them in our thinking on the budget," Powell said.

"We are going ahead with our internal budget on the assumption that the appropriations will come," Powell said. The final budget for the fiscal year 1979-1980 will be completed by middle or late March, according to Powell.

"We hope we know something by then. Right now all we know is what we read in the newspapers," Powell said.

Foster squelches Duggins rumor

By SARAH WARREN
News Editor

Rumors that the Student Senate was investigating former Senate President Mike Duggins' use of Senate funds has been squelched by current President Steve Foster.

"We are in no way looking into the actions of Mike Duggins," Foster said. It would be nearly impossible for anybody in the Senate to acquire funds without detection by the University because all checks and withdrawals must be made jointly with University officials, he added.

Foster said a question had arisen over an incident which occurred when Duggins made a trip to Washington, D.C. for a student government convention.

Duggins supposedly drove to the convention and took a plane home, leaving his car with some students from the University of Kentucky to drive back. One student was trying to contact Duggins, he said, concerning some gas money.

G. M. Brock dies

G. M. Brock, retired comptroller whose career on campus spanned more than half a century died last week.

His 51-year career spanned the tenures of four presidents and included a stint as operator of a motion picture series for students that began in 1935 and continued for several years after his retirement.

Brockton, a married student housing complex, was named in his honor some years ago. "Brockton," said Powell, "insures that his memory shall always remain alive at Eastern."

"He will be remembered as a truly remarkable man because of his many talents and great dedication to his work at Eastern."

Outlaws concert confirmed

A three percent reduction in the total budget would mean a $1.35 million cutback in the University's annual $45 million budget, he said.

Steve Foster, Senate president, also expressed concern at the meeting over the proposed establishment of an advisory committee that was to unofficially represent students on the state's Council on Higher Education (CHE).

According to Foster, the committee was to be composed of student government presidents and was to work with Harry Snyder, president of the CHE.

"I've yet to be notified by Mr. Snyder that I've been appointed to this committee," he said much less when it's goint to meet."

Foster said he thinks Snyder merely promised formation of the committee to appease demands for student representation on the CHE.

The Senate readopted a resolution in support of student representation on the CHE.

"Representation is something we feel that we need," said Cooper, "something the Student Government Association of Kentucky has been working on."

Committee grants refunds

The greatest number of tickets are given when students park on a red or yellow curb and, Brown said, the Safety Department is also "really tough" on people parking in the middle of a lot.

A few are given to those who park illegally in spaces reserved for the handicapped. A good number are also given to people parked illegally, sometimes in fire zones, who have left their emergency flashers on.

"Someone has got the idea that you can use your flashers and get away with parking illegally," said Brown. But "it's not permitted at all; it's not in the regulations anywhere."

"Students park out here for two hours and leave their flashers on. it doesn't mean anything," he said.

Most appeals granted last semester went to persons who received tickets at the beginning of the school year for parking without a permit or to those who had received two tickets in a 24-hour period.

A faculty member was granted an appeal for parking out of zone in the Martin lot instead of the Weaver lot.

Brown said the committee has recommended to Safety that the three faculty parking zones be abolished and general parking established for all faculty, just as general parking now exists for all students.

Student teachers

Most school administrators agree that, other than the actual interview, an ap-plicant's student teaching evaluation is the most essential element in the employment screening process for teaching positions.

Upon completion of student teaching, the
EVALUATION FORM FOR STUDENT
TEACHING is forwarded to the Division of Career Development and Placement. If you have credentials on file, it is maintained as part of your credential folder. If you have not filed credentials, it is maintained by the Division, but cannot be released on your behalf without your consent.

If you student taught Fall semester, and would like this document released on your behalf but do not have credentials on file with our office, we encourage you to stop by and sign a statement of release.

Career exam

U.S. GOVERNMENT PROFESSIONAL &
ADMINISTRATIVE CAREER EXAM
(PACE)

The next and last time the (PACE)
EXAM will be given until November 1979, is scheduled for Saturday, March 24, 1979.
This written exam is required for most entry level positions with the Federal government. Bachelor's or higher degrees candidates are eligible to take the exam which will be given on the ECU campus for the first time. Candidates can also schedule to take the exam at other locations.

A qualifying score of 70 is required to be placed on the employment eligibility roster. Due to the intense competition for most positions, scores in the 90's will be necessary for placement with the majority of agencies who hire from the employment roster.

Beginning Monday, January 22, 1979, the Pace Exam application to schedule you a seat for the exam can be picked up in the Division of Career Development & Placement, 319 Jones Bldg. between the hours of 8 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. All applications are to be returned to the above address by Thursday, February 22 which is the application deadline for the PACE EXAM.
The time and location of the exam along with additional materials, which must be completed and taken to the exam site will be forwarded directly to the address given on the Pace Exam application. Please direct any questions to the Division of Career Development & Placement, 319

United Way program

The United Way Intern Program is a one year program to prepare individuals for a progressional career in the United Way field. Duties would include social planning, budgeting, fund raising, and communications. A bachelor's degree is required. Interested individuals should write for applications (for the June 1979 intern group) to: Mrs. Ann Loper, Administrative Coordinator, Personnel Development Division, United Way of America, 801 North Fairfax Street,
Alexandria, VA 22314, (703) 836-7100, ext.
268. Deadline for returning completed applications (for the June 1979 intern group) is March 2, 1979. Additional information, including brochures on the program, is available in the CD & P Career
Information Resource Library, 319 Jones
Bldg.

Job campaign

*One of the first steps in organizing a job campaign is the development of a credential packet which will be used to introduce an applicant to a prospective employer. In order to assist students in the establishment of credentials, the process is initiated when an individual registers with the CD & P Office. Completion of the data sheet serves as a basic informational document, which when supplemented with letters of recommendation, a transcript and a resume, creates an effective credential packet. May and August 1979 graduates should develop their credentials now as they can be a critical element in obtaining employment opportunities in the upcoming recruiting season.
