A moment of silence

Candlelight vigil unites students in prayer, tears

By Mike Royer
News editor

Monday, the eve of the United Nation's Jan. 15 deadline for Saddam Hussein to leave Iraq, 100-plus students gathered in the Meditation Chapel to pray for those involved in the Persian Gulf crisis.

The service involved a slide show, candle lighting and silent and vocal prayer.

The Rev. Greg Schuler called the vigil an occasion for prayer.

"This was an occasion for the students and the community to gather on the eve of the day of decision for us to pray," Schuler said.

The mood of the service was somber. Many students prayed silently and some cried. A slide show was presented depicting multiple images of life set to the music of Bette Midler's song "From a Distance."

Jan Engel, a student helping with the vigil, said the slide show illustrated happiness, pain, wars, poverty and homelessness.

Following the slide show, each person in attendance held candles which produced the only light in the chapel.

A silent and vocal prayer session, lasting approximately 15 minutes, began after all candles were lighted.

Many of those assembled sat praying in the silent candlelight while others would periodically break the silence to say the name of someone they wanted prayer for in Saudi Arabia.

Schuler said it is good for others to hear our prayers and ask people to pray for "people we love and people we don't love or even people we don't know."

Some prayed aloud for boyfriends, friends or teachers. One girl prayed for someone whose last name she didn't know but knew he was in Saudi Arabia.

Saddam Hussein, George Bush, Iraqis, Palestinians and Israelis were also among those who were mentioned in individuals' prayers.

When the service was over, many of the students filed out of the chapel in silence, stopping to comfort and hug friends who sat in silence with their heads down.

Schuler said the vigil was people turning to God in a time of need.

"When you're facing something you feel like you can't control, you feel the need for God," he said. "We want peace in our world, families, campus and cities. We only know to come to God for prayer."

One woman's prayer looked for some good in the whole situation: "I pray for the children so they may see that war is ugly."

Douglas Shuntich, a university alumnus from London, England, prays in silence with his family, Richard and Annette Shuntich (top) at a candlelight vigil held in the meditation chapel last Monday for the troops in Saudi Arabia. Candles were lit and held by all through much of the service.

Coalition forces launch offensive on Iraqi targets

War won't affect university, Funderburk says

By Mike Royer, Tom Marshall and Joe Castle

It happened.

At 7 p.m. last night Operation Desert Shield became Operation Desert Storm.

Nineteen hours past the deadline for Iraqi withdrawal, United Nations coalition forces launched a massive air strike on targets in both Iraq and Kuwait, starting the war in the Gulf.

Soon after the air raid began, White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater gave a brief statement to the American people saying "the liberation of Kuwait has begun."

The raid was described as a "massive allied air strike consisting of hundreds of allied aircraft," according to Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney.

Fighters targeted military oriented targets including surface to surface (Scud) missiles, nuclear research facilities, chemical weapons plants, and radar and communication installations, said Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Colin Powell.

The apparent destruction of the Scud missiles helped calm war nerves in Israel. The Israelis feared attack by Iraqi Scuds, but the Cable News Network reported the danger to Israel is diminishing.

Israel's being drawn into the war was a big concern for Israelis and Americans alike.

Along with military installations, the capital cities of Kuwait City and Baghdad were bombed.

CNN correspondent Bernard Shaw, who is in Baghdad, described the attack on Baghdad as "feeling like we were in the middle of hell."

Late last night CNN reported the mission was "a blowout" with no allied losses, according to reports from CNN quoting a Pentagon official.

Forces involved included aircraft from Britain, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United States.

There were no ground forces involved in this first round of conflict. In addition, no U.S. lives were lost as result of the attack, CNN said two hours into the conflict.

At 9 p.m. President Bush addressed the nation concerning action in the Persian Gulf.

Bush defended the military action by saying "the world could wait no longer" for an Iraqi pullout of Kuwait.

"This conflict started Aug. 2, when the dictator of Iraq invaded a small and helpless neighbor," Bush said. "Kuwait was crushed, its people brutalized."

"Tonight the battle has been joined," he said.

Bush also reaffirmed his goals for the resolution of the crisis, saying the Kuwaiti government would be reinstated and that Iraq would live in peace with its neighbors.

"Our objectives are clear; Saddam Hussein's forces will leave Kuwait, the legitimate government of Kuwait will be restored to its rightful place, and Kuwait will once again be free," Bush said.

Iraqi president Saddam Hussein had different ideas about the outcome of the war following this initial attack.

"The mother of all battles has started," Hussein said.

Crisis touches university community

By Susan Gayle Reed and Greg Watts

The face of history took a dramatic turn at 7 p.m. Wednesday when the first United Nations' air raids rained bombs down on the Iraqi capital of Baghdad and university students faced the grim possibility of a long, drawn-out war.

There were many questions that will have to go unanswered for the next few weeks until the reports of United Nations' raids are in, but one thing seems certain—students have suddenly taken a keen interest in the Middle East.

All over campus, the sound of televisions broadcasting the details of the first air strike drew crowds of students.

Sophomore Marie Burnett sat alone in the Dupree Hall television lounge last night listening to the news that the United States had gone to war.

She had been watching the news since 7 p.m., the hour the country first heard of the actions taken in the Middle East.

"I was scared to death," she said. "I didn't think anything would happen. I was hoping it wouldn't."

I feel really sorry for all the people with family over there," Burnett said. "I can imagine how they must feel."

Although Burnett does not really agree with Bush's decision to go to war she asked, "What else can he do?"

"He couldn't just sit back and watch, but I kind of wish he did. I just hope they don't send the troops in," she said. "I hope it's all in the air."

"This may be a terrible thing to say," Burnett said, "but I hope they kill Saddam.

"I'll be watching the news until it all goes off. I'm surprised not as many people are in here watching," she said. "A lot of people went downtown and stuff. I guess they just don't know."

In Palmer Hall, senior Jeff Randolph was watching the events unfold on the lobby television set as well.

"When it happened, I was stunned," Randolph said. "I guess I never thought we'd really go to war."

"It needed to be done," he said. "I

President gives explanation on policies in Middle East

Editor's note: President Bush wrote college newspapers around the country to explain his policy in the Gulf. Although it does not necessarily reflect the opinion of The Eastern Progress, we find it to be an important and telling message from our nation's leadership.

If armed men invade a home in this country, killed those in their way, stole what they wanted and then announced the house was now theirs — no one would hesitate about what must be done.

And that is why we cannot hesitate about what must be done halfway around the world: in Kuwait.

There is much in the modern world that is subject to doubts or questions — washed in shades of gray. But not the brutal aggression of Saddam Hussein against a peaceful, sovereign nation and its people.

Right vs. wrong
The terror Saddam Hussein has imposed upon Kuwait violates every principle of human decency. Listen to what Amnesty International has documented.

Including children. There's no horror that could make this a more obvious conflict of good vs. evil. The man who used chemical warfare on his own people — once again including children — now oversees public hangings of dissenters.

This brutality has reverberated throughout the entire world. If we do not follow the dictates of our inner moral compass and stand up for human life, then his lawlessness will threaten the peace and democracy of the emerging New World Order we now see: this long dreamed-of vision we've all worked toward for so long.

A year after the joyous dawn of freedom's light in Eastern Europe, a dark evil had descended in another part of the world. But we have the chance — and we have the obligation — to stop ruthless aggression.

I have been in war. I have known the terror of combat. And I tell you this with all my heart: I don't want there to be war ever again. I am determined to do absolutely everything possible in the search for a peaceful resolution to this crisis — but only if the peace is genuine, if it rests on principle, not appeasement.

But while we search for that answer, in the Gulf young men and women are putting their own lives on hold in order to stand for peace in our world and for the essential value of human life itself. Many are younger than my own children.

Your age, most of them. Doing tough duty for something they believe in.

Let me tell you about one of the soldiers over there, S.F.C. Terry Hatfield, a young man from Georgia. He sent me a Christmas card. And this is what he wrote.

"Mr. President, I just wanted you to know my soldiers and I are ready to do whatever mission you decide. Freedom as we know and enjoy has been taken away from another country and must be restored. Although we are separated from family, friends, loved ones, we will do what must be done ... We stand ready and waiting. God Bless you and the U.S.A."

"There's no horror that could make this a more obvious conflict of good vs. evil. The man who used chemical warfare on his own people — once again including children — now oversees public hangings of dissenters."

Terry understands the moral obligation that has compelled our extraordinary multi-national coalition to make this stand in the Gulf. To look this international terrorist straight in the eye and say: no concessions. To proclaim for now and for the future: no compromises. To bear witness by our presence to the fact that aggression will not be rewarded.

Terry waits thousands of miles from the White House, yet we share the same thoughts. We desperately want peace. But we know that to reward aggression would be to end the promise of our New World Order. To reward aggression would be to condone the acts of those who would desecrate the promise of human life itself.

And we will do none of this. There are times in life when we confront values worth fighting for. This is one such time.

Each day that passes means another day for Iraq's forces to dig deeper into their stolen land. Another day Saddam Hussein can work toward building his nuclear arsenal and perfecting his chemical and biological weapons capability. Another day of atrocities for Amnesty International to document. Another day of international outlaws, instead of international law.

I ask you to think about the economic devastation that Saddam Hussein would continue to wreak on the world's emerging democracies if he were in control of one-fifth of the world's oil reserves. And to reflect on the terrible threat that a Saddam Hussein armed with weapons of mass destruction already poses to human life and to the future of all nations.

Together, as an America united against these horrors, we can, with our coalition partners, assure that this aggression is stopped and the principles on which this nation and the rest of the civilized world are founded are preserved.

And so let us remember and support Terry Hatfield, all our fine servicemen and women, as they stand ready on the frontier of freedom, willing to do their duty and do it well. They deserve our complete and enthusiastic support — and lasting gratitude.

"We have the obligation to stop ruthless aggression."

Nieces show uncle a whole new meaning of parenting

During Christmas break, it felt good to relax among the holiday decorations, music and food.

I was not bothered with trying to find a place to park on campus, decoding which classes I had on a particular Friday or watching my time to avoid Model students in the Grill.

While home with mom and pop, several family members stopped by to wish us Merry Christmas, and of course, pick up their presents.

However, two visitors arrived during my break with the promise of making it one I would not forget.

Amanda and Kristina Barnett helped me to look past my break and look forward to the start of school. For you see, they are my nieces, and I have my sister, Tanya, and brother-in-law, Alan, to thank for them.

The four members of the Barnett family live in Hazard, so they do not get to Richmond a lot. When they do, Tanya and Alan usually leave the girls with mom and dad while they go to the movies.

Amanda, who just turned 4 last week, is a motivator. I always hear mom telling everyone how persistent she is. But it was not until I was home one night with her and my father that I came to grips with this stereotype.

Amanda has two cousins who live in Hickory Hills, and since she lives in Hazard, she does not get to see them often.

This night, she wanted dad to call them to see if she could go play. Fair enough.

Dad called but no one answered. Try telling a 4-year-old girl who is not satisfied playing Barbies with a 50-year-old man that an unanswered phone is keeping her from playing Barbies with someone her age.

She was not impressed with dad's answer. "Call again," she told her grandpa.

bigger than she was, I watched her grit her teeth with every ring. After at least 20 rings, I removed the phone from her clutches. I thought she was convinced.

"Let's call back. They could have just walked in."

For what it was worth, I told her we would call back later.

I watched her run back through the house with her arms flapping against her body waiting for her return.

This is when I heard dad tell her that he had already tried two times and that he would try later.

That night I realized Amanda would probably assume the life of a politician.

My other niece, Kristina, is not old enough to know what a phone is since she just turned 1.

However, she makes up for her lack of knowledge with her driving ability.

Every time I approached the kitchen to obtain holiday nourishment, I was hit by her baby walker. Kristina had the ability to always be under my feet or run over one of them while I was in the kitchen.

Like a lot of baby stunts, it was cute at first. But once my toes were numb and my stomach was still not full due to the moving obstacle, it became aggravating.

I stood in the middle of the kitchen while she was across the room pulling the fur from our cat. As long as I was not moving, she could care less. Once I picked up the country ham to put in the refrigerator, she jetted across the room to block my path with a smile.

I got used to both of my nieces' shortcomings over the holiday break. Let's face it, they are only kids. I'm sure I acted the same way.

I just don't think I would be a good father. My sister makes mothering look so easy. I really doubt if I could ever obtain the kind of patience my sister displays with kids.

Staff changes announced at Progress

The Eastern Progress has undergone several changes in recent weeks.

Dr. Ron Wolfe replaces Dr. Elizabeth Fraas who is on sabbatical until the fall.

Terry Sebastian, who last semester was the news editor at the Progress, has been promoted to managing editor.

Taking Sebastian's place as news editor is Mike Royer, who was last years assistant news editor.

Returning to the Progress after a short leave of absence is Clint Riley.

Riley returns as this year's assistant news editor. Riley is a junior journalism major from Delaware and past Progress sports editor.

Allen Blair will assume the position of features editor. Blair is a senior journalism major.

Guidelines for letters to the editor

The Eastern Progress encourages its readers to write letters to the editor on topics of interest to the university community.

Letters submitted for publication should be typed and double-spaced. They should be no longer than 250 words. The Progress may condense letters over 250 words. However, grammar, punctuation and spelling will not be changed or corrected.

Letters should be addressed to the newspaper and must contain the author's address and telephone number. Letters must also include the author's signature. Carbon copies, photocopies and letters with illegible signatures will not be accepted. Unsigned letters will not be accepted.

The Progress uses its own judgment to determine if a letter is libelous or in poor taste and reserves the right to reject any letter.

The Progress also gives readers an opportunity to express more detailed opinions in a column called "Your Turn."

These columns should be in the form of an editorial or essay. Those interested in writing a "Your Turn" column should contact the editor before submitting an article. Letters and columns should be mailed to The Eastern Progress, 117 Donovan Annex, Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond, Ky. 40475.

The deadline for submitting a letter for a specific issue is noon Monday prior to Thursday's publication.

Letters and columns will be printed in accordance with available space.

Long awaited bowl games turn sour as they progress

Was it just me, or were this year's New Year's Day bowl games a joke?

Miami 46, Texas 3. Michigan 35, Mississippi 3. Clemson 30, Illinois 0.

Get the picture? It isn't just that the games were blowouts. It's as if one team had their lives riding on the outcome and the other team just showed up to collect their appearance payoff.

One of the announcers on the Louisville-Alabama Fiesta Bowl debacle noted that since Alabama wasn't in the national title hunt, while Louisville was trying to bring some notoriety as a stranger to the national spotlight, Louisville would have more incentive to play.

Alabama's season was the Auburn game. Alabama won. In turn, they were thrashed by Louisville 34-7.

The same can be said for Nebraska, which lost to title contender Georgia Tech 45-24 in the Citrus Bowl. Nebraska's season was the Oklahoma game. Nebraska lost. It had no shot at the national title, and their season was over, for all practical purposes.

So much for blockbuster matchups.

The blowouts, along with the

Ted Schultz

My Turn

fact that three teams can stake legitimate claims to the national championship, brings to nearly every fan's attention the ongoing controversy of whether the NCAA should implement a playoff system similar to the NCAA Basketball Tournament and to every other collegiate sport.

It is time, and more apparent this year than ever, that a playoff system is devised. When the national championship is as much of a travesty as it was this year, something must be done.

Three teams winning three different polls? There is no true national champion.

Is Colorado deserving of the national championship?

Maybe. But the Buffaloes, the Associated Press champions, struggled to beat Stanford and Missouri, and didn't prove anything with a sloppy 10-9 win over an equally-bad Notre Dame team in the Orange Bowl.

Georgia Tech, who won the United Press International poll was probably more deserving than Colorado. The Yellow Jackets finished as the nation's only unbeaten team and played a tougher schedule than most people realize.

And perhaps the most deserving of all is Miami, the New York Times poll champion, who for the fifth year in a row had college football's best team.

Florida State could even benefit from a playoff. They won their last six games, including a 24-17 win over Penn State in the Blockbuster Bowl, and for the third straight year, had the second best team in the country.

There is only one way to determine which of these teams is deserving of the title "National Champions," and that is on the field.

It doesn't matter that Colorado was ranked No. 1 going into the bowls and were victorious. They did not deserve their ranking and didn't deserve the more prestigious AP championship.

So how would Colorado fare if they had to play the likes of Georgia Tech, Miami and Florida State?

Only a playoff would provide the answer.

Schultz, a sophomore from Covington, Ohio, is the Progress' assistant sports editor.

What should the university's response be to the war in Iraq?

Kim Webb, Irvine, junior, accounting

"I think the university should be supportive of whatever decision the government makes, whether it confirms war or peace."

Roger Ard, Somerset, sophomore, computer science

"I think we should support the troops. They definitely need our support in this time of need."

Latisha Robinette, Pikeville, freshman, undeclared

"I think classes should be called off for the day so students can go home to their families and take time to think about what's happening."

Steve Osborne, Berea, junior, political science

"I think they should support the action taken by the president. The worst thing we could do is second guess his actions."

Joe Veeneman, Buckner, senior, police administration

"I guess hold candlelight services. Maybe they should cancel classes for one day."

Kelli Trimble, Greensburg, senior, nursing

"To continue with normal operations and to be more supportive of the United States' decision."

Combs settles libel suit out of court

By Tom Marshall
Sports editor

Former university Athletic Director Donald G. Combs has reached an out of court settlement with The Richmond Register and its parent company, Thomson Newspaper, Inc., in regard to a libel suit filed last year.

The suit was filed in Madison Circuit Court on Aug. 8, 1990.

The case stems from a May 16, 1990 story in the Register, which noted a Donald E. Combs' arrest on May 5 on charges of driving under the influence. The newspaper account said Combs recorded a blood alcohol level of .15 percent and had been detained in the Madison County Detention Center. That story identified Combs as athletic director of the university.

The following day, the Register printed two corrections, noting that the man involved was Donald E. Combs and not the former athletic director, Donald G. Combs.

The case was moved from Madison Circuit Court to the Eastern Division of the United States District Court in Lexington on Sept. 7, 1990.

A joint stipulation of dismissal was granted Dec. 26 to attorneys Robert Houlihan, Jr. for the Register and Charles Coy, who represented Combs, according to court documents.

The amount of the settlement was not disclosed since the case was settled out of court.

Coy said the settlement was part of a joint effort by the two parties to solve the case without going before a court of law.

"People with good intentions usually tend to work dually," Coy said. "Any lawyer that's worth a salt tries to work out a solution to the case. Both sides were on good faith."

"There wouldn't have been a settlement if there wasn't some desire on everybody's part," Coy said.

Houlihan said he was pleased with the outcome of the case but was also wary of discussion due to the confidentiality among the parties involved.

"We had an agreement of confidentiality," he said. "I'm not going to comment on it other than it was settled voluntarily."

Coy also declined to discuss the particulars of the case due to the agreement of confidentiality.

The Richmond Register employees were instructed not to discuss the case due to the pending litigation.

Register publisher Ruth Bryant declined comment on the settlement.

"I'm not prepared to discuss that at this time," Bryant said during a brief telephone interview.

Combs' suit said that the Register held him up to "public hatred, scorn and contempt, both in his personal and professional life."

Combs was out of town and unavailable for comment, according to Coy.

Student senate opens new year

By Paula Dailey
Contributing writer

Student Association President Marsha Whatley welcomed back senators Tuesday evening as the first meeting of the spring semester convened.

Whatley asked senators to consider what students want and what they want changed when discussing plans for campus activities and policies.

According to Whatley, a possible forum could be conducted between students and Student Association during the end of February at which students could ask questions, present problems or discuss something they would like to see maintained on campus.

Student rights and responsibilities committee is planning a candlelight service for the soldiers in the Middle East in conjunction with the Residence Hall Association, Black Student Union, Inter Fraternity Council and Panhellenic. The tentative date for the service is Jan. 29 at 9 p.m. in the ravine.

Rena Murphy, student rights chair, announced there will be a WASP, Whistle Awareness Safety Program, presentation on January 29, at 7 p.m. in the Combs Building in either the Grise or the Ferrel Room.

The committee for public relations discussed ways to upgrade attendance at basketball games with possible door prizes, theme nights and banner contests.

Kim Jarboe, public relations chair, announced Spring Fling will take place on April 2.

Matt Evans, vice president of Student Association, said that the Council on Higher Education is determining whether or not students in state schools should pay tuition on an hourly basis, or on a full- or part-time basis as is the case now at Eastern.

Evans is discussing surveying the students over the upcoming month in order to determine where the students stand on this situation.

The committee on academic affairs is discussing the possibility of publishing a list of scholarships available to students which could lead to students having a better chance of applying for and receiving scholarships.

Whatley said that at this time there is no such publication available to students and that such a publication would help inform students of scholarships available in their majors.

The Student Association presented LouAnn Farar and Paula Anderson of Operation Read with a plaque listing the 15 campus organizations who contributed money to Storybook Christmas, an operation to raise money to buy books for underprivileged children at Christmas time.

Also, guest Kent Owsley of Habitat for Humanity, discussed the program of building and refurbishing homes for people in need.

There will be an informational meeting for anyone interested in the Habitat for Humanity program January 31, at 6 p.m. at the First Baptist Church in Richmond.

Students find adding, dropping classes hard to fit in schedule

Michael Morgan
Staff writer

The university's drop-add period for full semester classes ended Tuesday after five days of student schedule changes.

After drop-add, students must have dean approval in order to add a full semester class and will be charged a small fee to drop or add a class.

Students still have until March 6 to withdraw from a full semester class.

Some students find the long lines during the drop-add period frustrating.

David Homaker said he had been waiting in line for about two hours before getting in the registration office.

"The line doesn't move fast enough and it's just a big hassle," he said. "I think they should stretch the hours."

Another student, Alison Reik, said she waited in line to add a one-hour class. Reik said she left the line to go to class and when she returned it was just as long.

"I think they need a better system. They need specific lines for specific things," Reik said. "People in the longer lines would take a longer time and people who are only going to take a minute can just get on with it and get out."

Loretta Leszczynski, administrative assistant of the registration center, said unfortunately there are no plans to change the drop-add procedure, but the office stayed open late on Tuesday to give every student a chance for a schedule change. Leszczynski said the office was open past 4:30 p.m. when other campus offices were closed.

"We give them every benefit. When they come in here they cannot tell us they came earlier and we were closed," she said.

Leszczynski said one reason the line moved slowly was because the center lacked computer operators for every terminal. She also suggested one way some students can avoid the lengthy lines at drop-add is to pre-register.

Becky Adair, a student worker at the registration center, said the long lines keep the center very busy.

"It doesn't stop. Usually when I would get to work the line was wrapped around the building," she said.

City prohibits student parking on streets bordering campus

Enforcement begins in Richmond this week

By J.S. Newton
Editor

Starting this week, all those who have been parking their cars on bordering campus streets must park elsewhere or face the wrath of a city-imposed penalty.

Residents of Summit, South Third, South Second, University and Oak streets, Wellington Court, and Wellington Drive have successfully petitioned to the Richmond City Commission for their streets to be designated restricted parking areas.

As of this week, these streets will be off limits to students, who normally try to park off campus to avoid tickets, parking hassles and long walks to class.

In recent meetings of the Richmond City Commission, legislation was passed that redefines parking on these bordering streets.

Last fall, residents of Richmond came to meetings of the City Commission to discuss their parking problems — problems that were caused by students parking on their streets during the day.

Late last year, the commission passed ordinance 90-41 to prohibit parking on streets that have been petitioned by the residents of those streets. Two other streets, Breck and High, have yet to restrict their parking, but parking limitations for those streets are likely to be approved soon.

"This isn't a student issue. It has nothing to do with them at all," City Manager Ed Worley said. "It's a matter of the volume of traffic on those streets."

Worley said residents acted almost unanimously in their decision to petition for restricted parking.

Worley said the majority of cars parked on the bordering streets have university parking stickers.

"I'm not allowed to go on to the university and park everywhere I want... It is the same situation on these streets," Worley said.

Some of the kinks of the new parking plan have yet to be worked out, according to some city officials, but they said any problems that might arise will be dealt with as soon as they come up.

"This (the parking plan) has really worked," City Commissioner Bill Strong said. "It has alleviated confusion from the mailman to the resident who lives in the house."

Although some students might feel that the Commission was wrong in restricting the parking on Richmond streets, Strong said that was not the intention of the commission.

"The city isn't trying to do anything against the school," Strong said. "People in the community are getting caught and don't have a place to park. When a kid registers and pays for his classes and is issued a permit, I really think that is where he should park," Strong said.

Strong said students are an important segment of the community. He said the parking ordinance is not in any way directed toward inconveniencing the students.

"The city is trying its best to please everyone... Sometimes somebody gets short changed. I think the relationship between the university and the town is better than it has ever been," Strong said.

As the ordinance reads, residents of the city are individuals owning or renting property in a residential parking permit area. "Preference will be given to residents of single-family dwelling units and issued to residents of multi-family dwelling units on a first-come basis, provided parking spaces are available," the ordinance says.

Residential parking hours will be from 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Those who violate the parking law may be fined $25, according to the ordinance.

Persons renting their property can get parking passes from their landlords, Worley said.

Commissioner Dale Carrier said he thinks the Richmond City Commission acted responsibly in passing the new parking ordinance.

"I think if you bought a house and 30 years later you find you can't park in front of it, that isn't very fair," Carrier said. "Hopefully, it is something we can all live with and work with."

Both Strong and Carrier said they were swayed by their voting constituents, who tend to be made up more so of city residents than students.

"Your lifetime residents are here their whole life," Carrier said. "The college students are here for just four years.... This is where you might say majority rules. These people (Richmond residents) pay the tax dollars."

FORCES

At approximately 2 a.m. CNN reported the U.N. coalition forces had resumed the bombing of Baghdad.

The extent and severity of the latest bombing raid is not known.

Local ties

The evolving war in the Persian Gulf has special meaning to Mutairi, a Kuwaiti student studying at the university.

"I think it's crazy," he said, while keeping his eyes tuned to televised updates late last night.

The events didn't shock the 25-year-old business major. He saw it coming.

"I said it was going to happen," he said. "I think Saddam Hussein has a history as a person who's really like Hitler. He's a person really for himself."

Mutairi's parents left Kuwait about two weeks after the Iraqi invasion. His brother serves in the military with the Saudi forces near the Kuwaiti border at Hasaralbtin.

He said one cousin was taken prisoner and later released after the invasion. Another cousin, a soldier, remains missing.

His family in Saudi Arabia called last night to tell him that they were fine, but he still worries, he said.

"It's depressing," he said. "I'm very frustrated. It's really affected me."

Reports surfacing in the news that Hussein planned to bomb Israel to start a Holy War met with disapproval from Mutairi.

"That's B-S-ing," he said. "That's not even the issue at all. It's not a Holy War."

Mutairi sees the subject simply. Either Hussein leaves Kuwait, or he will be pushed out.

Experts speak

The air strike didn't surprise Dr. Cecil Orchard, a university professor with expertise in Middle Eastern affairs.

"I told my class today that as soon as it got dark they were going to attack," he said. "I totally expected it."

Orchard earned a doctorate in Middle Eastern studies from Brandeis University near Boston. He also spent six months in Israel several years ago, he said. He currently serves as a professor of social science.

"They stuck a very narrow definition of how it could be resolved," he said. "The more he (Hussein) said, the more he put himself in a corner."

Orchard supported the Bush decision to invade.

"The good part of it is they achieved initial surprise," he said.

Events in the Gulf, he said, will linger on.

"We're in there for at least a couple of weeks," he said. "At least."

Political view

Glen Rainey, a university professor of political science, saw the invasion with a degree of suspicion, watching the news and questioning what he saw.

"The Bush administration may have been hesitant to work with economic sanctions even though they were apparently working," Rainey said.

Fears by the U. S. that other allied nations let the embargo fall by the wayside may have contributed to its aggressive attitude, he said.

Financial factors played a major role in the conflict leading to war, he said. Iraqi desires to control Kuwaiti oil reserves opened the crisis.

Numerous factors played into the situation, Rainey said.

"Ethically, this is a very complex situation," he said. "It puts us in the position of enforcing borders that were originally under colonial power."

"Iraq feels they are correcting some old colonial wrongs," he said.

Rainey was also disappointed in much of the Gulf media coverage.

"The television media is focusing on the war as an entertainment and dramatic medium," he said. "I'm concerned that the executive branch is able to gain so much control over the news not granted by the Constitution."

He found the crisis tough to judge as a political analyst.

"It's very difficult to determine whether they were doing the right thing in the heat of the situation," he said.

"The judgments are so hard to make on the spur of the moment."

Campus leaders have responded to the United States going to war by giving their support to President Bush and coalition forces, expressing their hopes for a quick, decisive victory in the Persian Gulf.

University President Hanly Funderburk said he was concerned about the incident but gave his support.

"Now that we are engaged in war, I can only hope and pray it will be short and successful in accomplishing its mission," Funderburk said.

According to Funderburk, the university is prepared in case something like this happens.

"We discussed this thing with our Administrative Council as late as yesterday morning. Of course we have emergency procedures in place for events that might happen," Funderburk said.

"We hope that we can continue with the mission we have, educating young people, and we hope we can continue with that largely uninterrupted," Funderburk said. "Hopefully, this thing will only last a short period of time and no more of our faculty and students will be called up."

Funderburk expressed his hope that people who need support during this time of war will come to the services provided by the university.

"We realize many students have family and friends in the Gulf region. If they have the need, I hope they will call on our special support services and we'll do what we can to help," Funderburk said.

Students, faculty staff called to serve in military conflict

By Janeen Miracle Staff writer

During the fall 1990 semester, 34 university faculty and students were sent to Saudi Arabia because of the Middle East crisis.

Due to the need of medical aid in Saudi Arabia, the college of allied health and nursing has been affected the most.

"We just now have been able to find full-time replacements for two of the tenured faculty that were mobilized to Saudi Arabia," said Patricia Jarczewski, associate professor and chairperson of the nursing associate program.

The week before Thanksgiving, Rita Paxson, a lieutenant colonel in the Mobile Army Surgical Hospital for the 101st Airborne, was sent to Saudi Arabia along with Beverly Vance, a major in the unit.

Prior to this assignment, both Paxson and Vance underwent chemical and germ warfare training at Fort Knox. At this time they were put on alert to go to Saudi Arabia.

Paxson's son Brent, a university student, anticipated his mother's departure for Saudi Arabia in early December. "In the first week of December, we went to dinner because the Army told her she would be going that weekend," said Paxson. "The Army did this about eight times, and then when she finally went, I was ready."

Fauntella McVay, a student in the department, was also sent to the Middle East to fulfill her duties as part of the 475th M.A.S.H. unit of the Kentucky National Guard.

She would have graduated in May, but now she will receive an incomplete.

If war occurs, another factor that Jarczewski sees as a possibility is that nurses could be drafted.

"Nurses were drafted in World War II and this could happen again," said Jarczewski.

As for now, the approximate number of students who have gone to Saudi Arabia is 25.

"The only students of whom we are aware are in Saudi Arabia are those who had to get a refund or withdrawal," said Executive Assistant to the President, Dr. Charles Whitlock. "It's possible there have been more recent call-ups over the break."

CRISIS

just figured it would have taken longer."

Shawna Downey, sophomore, said the news leaves a lot for civilians to wonder and worry about.

"When you hear that the United States has declared war on Iraq, you're like 'Oh my God, my family, my friends, what's going to happen,'" she said. "You read about war in the history books, but now we're wondering how bad it's going to be for us."

"I really hope the draft isn't reinstated," Downey said. "Because we're right in that age group and that means almost everybody we know could get called. I really hope that doesn't happen."

Freshman Robert Cole, a member of the National Guard, expressed a sense of duty about going to war.

"I have everything ready for my paperwork," Cole said. "Now I'm just waiting."

"No one likes the idea of dying, the guys in my unit or me. We'll joke about going, but when we get right down to it, we're very serious about getting killed. It would have to escalate a lot more for us to get sent."

"I first heard about the attack in one of my classes. People got kind of quiet when the report first came on, but everyone was expecting it so it wasn't so much tears and emotion as it was the realization that it finally happened," he said.

Diane French, junior, feels that the action taken was pretty much a necessity.

"It's almost like a relief that we know 'yes, we are at war,'" she said. "I think the scariest part right now is that Iraq hasn't tried to do anything to us yet."

"I could see it all being over in a week," French said. "But I also think going to get worse before it gets better and I think there's a lot we don't know about yet."

Travis Rains, a junior, feels that the action was too long in coming.

"I believe that we waited too long," Rains said. "Hussein had way too much time to dig in and prepare to fight."

"It seems like Bush tried everything else and he just had to do it. It's terrible that it had to come to this."

Freshman Anissa Reed agreed.

"I don't think it should have taken this long," Reed said. "We should have gone in a long time ago, done it, and got our people and my brother home again."

Senior David Moore made a point about the suddenness of the attack.

"They say they surprised the Iraqi's," Moore said. "But even I was expecting it."

Some people feel that the actions were taken too quickly against Iraq. Dwight Hopkins, a freshman from Crab Orchard, said, "I think what's happened tonight is like one scene in a big movie."

"Even though a lot of governments in the world support us in the sanctions, that's only one aspect that's going on," he said.

University mock trial team reaches national finals

Shana Dean
Staff writer

Although the university's mock trial team is only three months old, it has just earned a place in the national finals held in Des Moines, Iowa.

The team was formed in October by Klaus Heberle, professor of government.

The team members are basically volunteers since he invited students to participate.

Although Heberle is excited with the team's performance at the competition in Louisville, he knows they will have to improve to do well in Iowa.

"This is my first time in this business, and the first time E.K.U. has had a team of this kind," Heberle said.

To practice for a competition, the team members must study prepared cases consisting of depositions given by four witnesses on each side of a dilemma.

Team members must prepare for both sides since in a competition they could be asked to be the prosecution or the defense.

During a competition at Bel-larmine College in Louisville, team member Earl Ray Neal was chosen as one of the top 10 lawyers.

"This team is a great opportunity for anyone interested in law as a career, and it helps you develop communication skills," Neal said. "I just wish more people were interested."

The Waiting Game

Students in military wait for answer

By Allen Blair
 Features editor

Like many students on campus, Kathy Smith is waiting.

"I could be going in June," she said. "You never can tell."

Where she could be going is the Persian Gulf. Once there, she would become a part of Operation Desert Storm.

Smith is a member of the Army ROTC on campus and the 475th M.A.S.H. unit out of Frankfort.

Some time ago, her unit was deployed to the Middle East. She was not an officer nor enlisted and therefore was unable to go with them.

Coming in May, Smith will receive her officers' commission. Depending on the war with Iraq, she could be flying to the Gulf after graduation.

Other students on campus who involve themselves with the ROTC, the National Guard or the Army Reserves are also playing the waiting game.

Their units could be mobilized at any time. According to Maj. Seford Olsen, assistant professor of military science, there are no military students on campus facing a trip to the Middle East.

"Right now, we don't have anybody in the first two steps (of alert)," he said.

As the result of last night's attack on Iraq, however, many of those waiting students could be leaving sooner than they thought.

Dealing with that idea of going to war can be a problem for many.

There are a lot of different ways people express their feelings about it, Olsen said. There can be fear of the unknown or anger.

"It is a very frightening thing when you receive orders to go into a combat situation," he said.

Olsen spent 365 days in combat during the war with Vietnam.

"You've also got people who said 'I didn't enlist to go to Saudi Arabia,'" he said. "There's probably as many different feelings as people."

When Smith first found out about her unit's call to duty, she was uneasy. Later she made up her mind.

"You have to realize it's something you've got to do," she said.

According to Olsen, other students are taking it the same way.

They feel if they have to go, then they will do the best they can, he said.

But until then, many are just trying to deal with the possibility of going. Some deal with it by preparing their gear and taking care of last minute business.

Before Smith found out she was not going with her unit to the Middle East, she started getting things arranged.

She talked to her family, checked on her insurance and even provided for funeral arrangements.

"We live in a dangerous world," Olsen said. "What appears to be peace can change tomorrow. I don't think anybody wants to see war."

Those who might be going will be going to a place where people want to kill you, he said.

"It's no longer with blanks and laser pulses."

And like Smith, those who wait for combat need to start dealing with the fact that they may have to answer the call of duty.

"What you have to do is prepare yourself," Olsen said.

They need to get things organized and make sure things such as financial responsibilities and wills are in order.

There are many that sit in dorm rooms, apartments or homes and watch the television coverage of the developments of war in the Middle East.

Most of them ask themselves every night, "Will I be going to war tomorrow?"

They won't know the answer and must wait to find out. Until then they will cope with their situation.

If they are called to active duty, Olsen offered some advice.

"Get your house in order. It's now time to be the soldier you've practiced to be all these months."

ROTC students Rick Atchison, left, and Steve Megan listen to instruction during the Ranger Challenge competition last fall.

"I like to see a lot of support for our troops over there. I would hate to see public dissent over it. I've got close friends that are over there. I think everybody needs to keep giving them support."

Faculty show features diverse media

By Lee B. McClellan
Arts Editor

It is called the "new" faculty art exhibit, although some of the faculty have been here for quite a while. Nevertheless, the "new" faculty show that opened Jan. 14 did give some of the newer members of the art faculty at the university a chance to showcase their work.

Art faculty members Joe Molinaro, Dan Vantrese, Joanne Guilfoil, Esther Randall and Karen Spears represented in the show their individual accomplishments in painting, ceramics, photography, sculpture, illustrations and screen prints.

"This show I used as an opportunity to show a little more diversity in myself," ceramics professor Joe Molinaro said, "more of the private side of my work."

Molinaro took this opportunity to experiment with new forms.

The works such as "Stacked Vessel with Rods" and "Bull Pot #1" are what Molinaro calls "linear extension of a form."

"This show got me really excited about pursuing those pieces," Molinaro said. "I'm used to seeing them on dirty tables in the ceramics room."

Experimentation was also on the mind of art faculty member Dan Vantrese.

"I like to do experimentation with different media," Vantrese said, "trying to get beyond preconceived ideas of what art is supposed to be."

Vantrese's photographs such as "Lily" and "Sweet Dreams" and the screen print collage "Untitled" demonstrate this experimentation.

Vantrese uses everything from a pencil to auto body spray paint to create his art.

While experimentation was a source of inspiration for Molinaro and Vantrese, Joanne Guilfoil finds the stresses and delights of a working mother as the driving forces behind her current work.

After spending some time creating art at the University of Oregon and the University of Kentucky, Guilfoil lives on a dairy farm in Washington County, and her experiences with the life cycle of milk cows struck a chord of resonance in her when she became a mother.

"The two paintings were expressions of what it is like to be a mother," Guilfoil said. "As an instructor and mother, I was interested in the whole life cycle. This is the beginning of that."

The paintings "Service Vehicle" and "Working Mother #20" show milk cows from different perspectives, derived from a 1" x 1" picture of a cow. "Service Vehicle" is a shot of a cow's uterus, the nurturing side of a cow, while "Working Mother #20" is a picture of a cow's head. These pictures represent the alpha and the omega of the life cycle.

As Guilfoil's art draws parallels between a milk cow and a working mother, Esther Randall's sculpture draws parallels between classical figures and the warrior instinct of man.

"It is about the different aspects of masculinity and femininity," Randall said of her sculpture, "the duality between the classical figure and the warrior class."

Such works as "This Is My Weapon," a cold cast bronze sculpture of a nude man holding a rifle, and "Standing Vessel," in which a pregnant woman is holding a knife against her chest, present her ideas in form.

The show will run until Feb. 1. The Giles Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

The coming semester will bring more shows to the Giles Gallery.

Rhonda Smith will present paintings, drawings and prints Feb. 4-22. The seventh annual high school competition will be in Giles Gallery March 3-29. The EKU student show will be held April 7-26 and the bachelor of fine arts candidates show will be May 5-10.

String quartet to play Hensel's work

For the first time in 10 years, the ears of the university will be lulled by the gentle nuances of a major professional string quartet.

The Lexington Philharmonic String Quartet will present a concert Jan. 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Gifford Theatre of the Jane Campbell Building.

The concert will be sponsored by Center Board and the department of music. The show is free and open to the public.

Interpretations of "Quintet in A Major, K. 581" by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart and "Quartet in D Major, Opus 44, No. 1" by Felix Mendelssohn will be featured in the show.

The highlight of the evening will be the first-ever presentation of "String Quartet No. 3" by Richard Hensel, Theory-Composition Coordinator of the department of music.

"I hadn't written a string quartet in 10 years," Hensel said of the work, "so I decided to write one."

In addition to being a composer and teacher, Hensel has won awards, including the Award of Merit from the The National Federation of Music Clubs.

One of the members of the quartet, Earl Thomas, is principal clarinetist of the Lexington Philharmonic Orchestra and a member of the department of music.

Thomas' clarinet will be featured in Mozart's "Quintet in A Major, K. 581."

Thomas has also been principal clarinetist with the Dallas, Houston and Oklahoma City Symphony Orchestras.

Along with Thomas' clarinet, the quartet will feature Daniel Mason and Brice L. Farrar on violins, Ned Farrar on viola and Roberta Guthrie on cello.

Movies have caught the 'rat race' disease

Lee B. McClellan
Blue Notes

For many college students, the thought of TV land without MTV is inconceivable.

I can easily remember a time without the music video channel, and I can remember a time when things in the entertainment industry were different.

MTV is a perfect analogy of how the attention span of the American public has become as short as the fuse on a firecracker. We have the music channel that features short, three minute clips of sex, silliness and praise of the 80's generation's desire to own everything.

But MTV itself is not what alarms me. It is a symptom of a problem in the entertainment industry itself.

The success of the music channel has affected the way in which movies are made.

Modern movies, in the action adventure genre especially, have become much like the music videos featured on MTV.

Martin Scorsese, in the Nov. 1, 1990 issue of Rolling Stone, said, "The influence of MTV over the past eight years on movies—maybe the audience attention span is a bit of a problem now. Things have to move faster, and you can feel that."

Plot and character development have gone out the window. Movies now seem to be super charged scene after scene. Wham, bam and thank you for paying $5.50 for the show.

Characters have become hollow glimpses of real people involved in the super fast-paced plot. The viewer does not identify with a character's background or personality; rather the viewer empathizes with the action the character must take to reach a means to an end.

Plots have become so fast paced that any sense of subtlety is gone. Like a music video, plots have become short chunks of fierce thrashing action, followed by a short transitional scene and more action. Slow, underlying themes that develop over the length of a film are now gone.

Classic films that are subtle in use of plot, intelligent in their writing and take time to flesh out their characters would now be considered "slow" or "boring." Like fast food patrons or intravenous drug users, the movie audience has become desirous of the quick fix.

Being old-fashioned, give me real characters and a gentle plot in my movies. We all run around in a furious rat race, so let the movies relieve us of that tension.

Week's activities spotlight cultural awareness, diversity

By Susan Gayle Reed
Activities editor

E Pluribus Unum, or "One Composed of Many," is the theme of a week-long program designed to help improve cross-cultural relations on campus.

Kevin Hattery, who came up with the idea of a cultural awareness week, said the program's objective is to "work toward unity through fellowship and cultural awareness."

"The essence of unity is the acceptance of diversity," Hattery said. "Hopefully, that will be accomplished."

A committee made up of about 25 people, all of different cultures, united with Hattery in the formation of what they wanted the week to get across.

"I had a rough idea of what I wanted to do and the committee filled in the spots of what to do," Hattery said.

The program will run Jan. 21-28.

Some of the events on the agenda include a commemorative candle-light service for Martin Luther King, a cultural day art show, cross cultural booths and a mixer, a cultural showcase and an African American student organizations' display night.

Hattery said that cultural awareness does not only mean that of other races and nationalities.

The program provides a setting for all people at the university from the Asian Association to the Student Association for the Hearing-Impaired.

Other groups taking part in the program are the Black Student Union, Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic, the Eastern Gospel Ensemble, university track team and the Residence Hall Association.

The program's goal is to allow all people—students, faculty and administration—to learn about the different cultures which co-exist at the university.

Hattery said rather than presenting information through seminars and workshops, the program will use more of a social element which he feels is more comfortable and allows people to mingle more freely.

Tuesday, friendship bracelets called "unity bracelets" will be given away.

The bracelets are black, white, brown, yellow and red, representing the major races of people.

Hattery said the program has already demonstrated the ability to help improve relations among the many different cultures at the university.

As members of the committee met to make the unity bracelets, the members began to mingle and socialize and learn more about the cultures and backgrounds of the others, Hattery said.

"The interaction is incredible," he said.

The program has already gained national attention as both the national Mortarboard and Golden Key honor societies have donated toward the week's activities.

"Cultural diversity is an issue that should be addressed," Hattery said. "You lead by example. That's what this committee was designed to do."

Globetrotters dazzle tonight

By Susan Gayle Reed
Activities editor

The familiar sounds of "Sweet Georgia Brown" will fill McBrayer Arena tonight as one of the most famous sports teams in the world, the Harlem Globetrotters, take on long-time rivals, the Washington Generals.

The game will be a part of the 65th anniversary celebration of the team's existence, which also happens to fall on the same year as the 100th anniversary of basketball.

With an incredible record of 17,380 wins and only 331 losses, the Globetrotters have played more games in more cities and countries than any other team in the world.

This is the second time the legendary team has made its way up and down the court at the university, the first time being in 1972.

Dubbed the "Houdinis of the hardwood," the Globetrotters are well known not only for their expertise in ballhandling, but also their own brand of humor and antics on the court.

The roster for the game includes long-time Globetrotter James "Twiggy" Sanders, team captain Clyde "The Glide" Austin and female team member Jollette Law, along with a host of additional players.

The Globetrotters haven't been defeated since 1971, but Coach Red Klotz of the Washington Generals says this year his team is bent on revenge.

As an addition to the game, both a faculty member and a member of the university custodial staff will get to go up against the Globetrotters for three minutes on the Washington Generals team.

Also, in a drawing held earlier Brad Grant, 8, and Amanda Gayle Perkins, 11, both of Richmond, were chosen as Junior Globetrotters and will get to dress out in Globetrotter shirts and sit on the team's bench.

The Harlem Globetrotters will appear in McBrayer Arena tonight as a part of their 65th anniversary tour. The team will take on long-time rivals the Washington Generals at 7:30 p.m.

Along with that prize, the two winners also received six tickets each to the game.

Four other children whose names were drawn as second-place winners received 4 tickets each for the game.

The contest was in conjunction with the Office of Student Activities and WMCQ radio station.

Admission to the event is $15 for floor seats, $12 for reserved seats and $9 for general admission tickets.

Senior citizens and children 12 and under will get a $2 discount on reserved seats and general admission tickets.

University students will get a $4 discount on reserved seats and general admission tickets.

Tickets for the game are still available at the Eastern Athletic Ticket Office in Alumni Coliseum, the Eastern Cashier's Window in Coates Administration Building, Pink Cadillac Car Wash on the Eastern By-Pass and AllSports in the Richmond Mall.

Tip-off is at 7:30 p.m. The game is being presented by the Eastern Cheerleaders. Proceeds will benefit the cheerleaders and the Little Colonels Dance Team.

Leadership program offers professional advice for success

By Susan Gayle Reed
Activities editor

Students interested in learning the best ways to push themselves up the career ladder or in promoting themselves in other areas of success will be able to get it straight from the experts as a new leadership program unfolds this semester.

The program, brought to the university by Troilyn LeForge, coordinator of student organizations, will bring in guest speakers twice weekly who will illustrate areas falling under the umbrella of leadership.

A committee made up of 17 students has been working since last semester to decide on the topics and speakers which they feel are most beneficial to the entire student body.

These topics range from public speaking, interviewing, time and stress management and organization skills to health-related awareness and cultural diversity.

Two speakers will be presented simultaneously every Tuesday and Wednesday nights in the Powell Building.

The first of the speakers will be presented Feb. 5 and 6.

The program, which has been in the works since last semester, was modeled after a similar program originally started at North Carolina State University.

LeForge brought the idea to Eastern after having experimented with it at Clemson University, where she served for two years as Assistant Director of Student Activities.

"There's no other program like it on campus," said Matt Evans, a member of the student committee in charge of the program. "It is something for all students. There are independents, Greeks, all the people are diverse. As time goes on, I think more individuals will become involved," he said.

"The program is a good opportunity to tap into the students' leadership potential," LeForge said. "Many times students won't come out and volunteer their abilities. This program offers them that opportunity."

Denny Galloway, a member of the student committee, agreed. "I suspect that the number of students in all of the organizations on campus is going to get bigger," he said. "I hope."

Only the first 40-50 students who sign up may attend each seminar. Students may sign up at the office of student activities or at the door.

There is no cost for any of the speakers.

Brochures announcing topics, speakers, dates, times and places will be distributed throughout the university, LeForge said. Also, each program will last about one to one and a half hours.

"It's very beneficial," Shelly Hepke, a member of the student committee said. "It's better than downtown."

Kentucky contest a circus in big tent

The basketball Colonels got a media coup over the holiday break when they faced off with the University of Kentucky Wildcats at Rupp Arena in Lexington.

The last game between the two was in 1928, which the Wildcats won 35-10 in the days prior to that of legendary coach Adolph Rupp.

Eastern shot a scare into the Wildcats by playing them to within 14 points, losing 74-60.

Colonel freshman John Allen led the Eastern scoring, netting an impressive 14 points on six of 13 shooting. Lone senior Eric Sinclair also contributed with his vocal leadership on the floor.

The game sported a circus atmosphere. It was an affair that Barnum and Bailey would be proud of.

With only 10 minutes to play, the Colonels were ahead 48-47, but the Wildcats went on a nine-point run. The Wildcats then proceeded to finish off the Colonels.

Like a circus, much of the game's outcome was predictable, but surprises popped up to keep the big tent (Rupp Arena) in a flurry of excitement.

The real show came during post-game interviews, where Italian coaches Rick Pitino and Mike Pollio put the game into perspective.

"We played the No. 18 team in the nation to a standstill for 31 minutes," Pollio said.

Pollio explained his feelings for the game. He said he was glad to travel the 20 miles down I-75 for the contest.

He said Rupp would turn over in his grave if he had seen the game. Rupp would be simply aghast to see female assistant coach Bernadette Locke on the UK bench. Adding to his fury, he said, would be the sight of UK playing cross-state schools.

"It gets you away from the Little Brother attitude (mentioned by former UK coach Eddie Sutton)," Pollio said. "If Kentucky gets beat, Kentucky will still be Kentucky. Eastern will still be Eastern."

Pollio played the Lexington media like a ringmaster after the game, talking about the close game without disappointment.

"He's coached against Magic Johnson, Michael Jordan and Larry Bird," Pollio said. "I must've scared the hell out of him tonight."

The Lexington media also put Pollio on the spot with a series of questions about some seemingly bad calls. Pollio first ducked the questions, but gave in with a couple of quick quips.

It was more stand up, er, sit down comedy rather than interview time. After a lengthy decision on an out-of-bounds call the Wildcats were awarded the ball, while Pollio flipped a coin in front of the bench.

"When deciding which way, they must have said, 'Hell, who's giving up the check? White ball,'" Pollio said.

Pollio outspokenly thanked Pitino and UK Athletic Director C.M. Newton for the opportunity.

It was a good show for Pollio. Many fans across the state—loyal big blue fanatics—expected Pollio and his cronies to be the clowns in this appearance.

What they got was a surprise. Pollio played his role as ringmaster to the hilt—replacing Pitino in that capacity for a few brief moments.

Pitino played the part of lion tamer that night. The lion kept forging forward, constantly plodding onward, only to be turned back by the tamer, or the Cats.

Like in any circus, the big top becomes a fast paced spectacle, full of colorful people and animals, namely Eastern's mongoose. Sadly for Pollio, the mongoose went home early.

Barnum and Bailey would have been really proud of this circus because it accomplished everything it set out to do. It entertained those in attendance and it sent everyone home happy with the night's excitement.

Pollio played the ringmaster to perfection. Only time will tell if Newton will let him take the show on the road again.

Colonels find success in winning on road

By Ted Schultz
Assistant sports editor

In the not too distant past, the road has not been a kind place to the university men's basketball team.

This season, however, it has been a different story.

The Colonels won two of three Ohio Valley Conference games, all on the road, last week to improve their record to 9-4.

"Obviously, we'd like to be 3-0, but 2-1 is certainly acceptable," Coach Mike Pollio said. "You win two out of every three road games, you're going to have an outstanding season."

The Colonels finished 3-4 in their seven road appearances in their last 10 games. They won all three home games and have a perfect 6-0 mark this season at Alumni Coliseum.

Eastern 84, Tennessee State 74

Guards Jamie Ross and Kirk Greathouse combined for 42 points to lead the Colonels to an 84-74 win over Tennessee State University Monday.

"That's a tough place to go play," Pollio said. "That shows the sign of true character when they can bounce back like that."

Greathouse scored a career-high 25 points, while Ross added 17. Derek Reuben came off the bench to add 13 points.

Tennessee Tech 86, Eastern 68

Tennessee Tech University handed the Colonels their first conference loss with a 86-68 setback Saturday night.

"It's tough on the road," Pollio said. "I think we lost a little bit of focus. But more importantly, they played very well and we didn't."

Aric Sinclair led the Colonels with 18 points.

Eastern 105, Morehead State 54

The Colonels scored the first seven points of the game and never looked back in routing arch-rival Morehead State University 105-54 last Tuesday.

"That game was more of a fluke than anything else," Pollio said. "It was just a case of everything going well for us and nothing went well for them. They're a much better team than that."

Ross and Greathouse led the Colonels with 20 points apiece. Allen scored 19 points, while Chris Brown added 15 and Sinclair 13.

Eastern 65, Southern Illinois 61

Senior forward Aric Sinclair attempts to drive on University of Kentucky forward John Pelphey in Eastern's 74-60 loss at Rupp Arena on Dec. 27. Eastern led 48-47 going into the final 10 minutes of play before succumbing to the Wildcats, who recently cracked the Associated Press top 10.

The Colonels kicked off the new year with a 65-61 home victory over Southern Illinois University Jan. 4.

Four players scored in double figures for the Colonels, led by Mike Smith, who had 17. Ross scored 13 points, while Sinclair added 12 and Greathouse 10.

Kentucky 74, Eastern 60

In the highly anticipated matchup between these two schools, the University of Kentucky prevailed with a 74-60 win Dec. 27 at Rupp Arena.

The Colonels gave the Wildcats all they could handle for 30 minutes. Kentucky led 35-31 at halftime, but the Colonels took a one point lead with just over 10 minutes left in the game.

Allen led the Colonels with 14 points, while Ross added 10. Eastern outrebounded Kentucky 48-28.

Eastern 80, UNC-Wilmington 64

After leading by only two at halftime, the Colonels used a second-half flurry to bury the University of North Carolina-Wilmington 80-64 Dec. 21.

Greathouse scored 21 points to lead five players in double figures. Ross scored 15, while Smith added 14, Toi Bell 11 and Allen 10.

Before the students left for the holidays, the Colonels split four games after winning their first three.

The Colonels went west Dec. 7-8 to play in the Cougar Classic at Brigham Young University and came away with a third place finish.

Brigham Young, the tournament's host defeated the Colonels 90-86 in the first round. BYU freshman Shawn Bradley blocked an NCAA record 14 shots.

The Colonels bounced back to post a comeback-from-behind 70-69 win over George Mason University.

Mississippi State University handed the Colonels their second loss of the season with a convincing 88-61 win Dec. 11.

The Colonels defeated Bellarmine College 76-68 Dec. 15 in their final game before the holiday break.

The 2-1 OVC record is good enough for a second-place tie behind defending champion Murray State University.

The Colonels will return to action Saturday night against Middle Tennessee State University.

Sports briefs

compiled by Ted Schultz

BASKETBALL: The university men's basketball team has signed two recruits for the 1991-92 season.

Michael Meeks, a 6-foot-9, 195-pound, center from Ontario, Canada, signed a national letter-of-intent in November to play for the Colonels.

Meeks has been a provincial all-star for two years and led his team to the Canadian championship both years.

Eric Maye, a 6-7 forward from Jeffersonton High School, also signed with the Colonels in November.

MEN'S BASKETBALL: Forward John Allen was named Ohio Valley Conference Rookie of the Week for the period of Dec. 13-19.

Allen, a 6-foot 7 freshman from Burkesville, scored 19 points and totaled four rebounds, two assists and five steals while the Colonels split a pair of games.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL: Two Lady Colonels were awarded with Ohio Valley Conference honors for the week of Dec. 13-19.

Angie Cox, a junior from Somerset, was named co-OVC Player of the Week. She scored 34 points and totaled 16 assists, six steals and five rebounds in Eastern's two wins.

Shannah McIntosh, a freshman from Middletown, Ohio, won Rookie of the Week honors. She scored 22 points and grabbed 17 rebounds, including career highs of 12 points and 12 rebounds in the win over the University of Louisville.

FOOTBALL: University football coach Roy Kidd has been named Kodak University Division I-AA Region 3 Coach of the Year by the American Football Coaches Association.

Kidd, who completed his 27th season with a 10-2 record, is the third winningest active coach in America among Division I and I-AA schools. He has a career record of 218-79-8.

VOLLEYBALL: Dr. Geri Polvino and Sue Antkowiak garnered the top two awards when the All-Ohio Valley Conference teams were announced last month.

Polvino won Coach of the Year honors for the eighth time. She has a career record of 527-308 in her 24 years at Eastern.

Antkowiak, a senior from Louisville, was named OVC Player of the Year. She ranks in the top 10 in nearly every statistical category in school history.

Antkowiak was named All-OVC for the third consecutive year. Jennifer James, a junior from York, Pa., also made the first team.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK: University head basketball coach Mike Pollio, after his team fell to the University of Kentucky 74-60 Dec. 27.

"We played the No. 18 team in the nation to a standstill for 31 minutes."

Brown ready after year layoff

Former Arizona high school star finds niche at Eastern

By Ted Schultz
Assistant sports editor

For a year and a half, Adrian Brown played in his hometown.

Now, he is playing in his home away from home—2,000 miles away.

After coming up dry in the desert, Brown has come to Kentucky to find the right place to play basketball.

After being named "All-State" twice and earning "Player of the Year" honors in the state of Arizona, the 6-foot-1 Phoenix native accepted a scholarship to play for Arizona State University in nearby Tempe. He played in 20 games as a freshman, while starting six.

But then Brown's playing time ceased the next season after Bill Freider, who coached the University of Michigan team that won the National Championship the year before, took over the ASU program and implemented a new system. He did not play in a game, and before losing his eligibility, decided to transfer to Eastern.

Brown said he was recruited out of high school by Eastern Assistant Coach John Ferguson. He made the move not only for more playing time on the basketball court, but for academics as well.

"I think it was a good move," said Brown, a broadcasting major. "It's a smaller school. You can focus on academics a little bit more here."

Brown was forced to sit out a year after the transfer. He started practicing with the team last January but blew out his knee the first week. He said he lost some of his quickness, but is gaining it back as the season goes on.

"It was kind of rough on me," he said. "It was probably one of the worst things I've been through, being away from home and going through an injury like this, having surgery and not being able to walk for a while. I had never had an injury that kept me out like this."

Brown resumed practicing in October, but wasn't eligible to play until the Dec. 21 game against the University of North Carolina-Wilmington. He has played sparingly in four of the five games since.

"Right now, my role is just to contribute whenever I can, whenever I get the opportunity," he said. "I'm still a little behind and the players on the team are playing well. This year, I just want to contribute the best I can."

Even if Brown doesn't contribute on the court, he still does his part to help the program. He has used his talents the broadcasting field to do "player profiles" for "The Mike Pollio Show."

"I like my major a lot," he said. "When I got here, coach Pollio asked me what my major was and when he found out, he wanted to know if I could do player interviews."

Brown said he would like to work in the television field after graduation.

Brown said he likes playing for the Colonels more than he did for ASU.

"We're more of a team here," he said. "The team I played with there didn't play much as a team. The guys here get along pretty well and play well together."

Since becoming eligible, Brown has played in five games, averaging about four minutes in each. He has scored seven points on 3-5 shooting from the field, including 1-1 from three-point range.

Brown, who will have two more years of eligibility remaining after this season, said he hopes to make more of a contribution the next two years.

"I plan to make more of an impact," he said. "I'm just contributing whenever I can this year. But next year, I plan to do more."

Adrian Brown, a sophomore guard on the men's basketball team, has conducted interviews for "player profiles" for "The Mike Pollio Show." The broadcasting major started his college career at Arizona State before transferring to Eastern last winter.

NCAA convention changes face of athletic programs

By Tom Marshall
Sports editor

The recent convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association held Jan. 7-11 in Nashville brought a series of dramatic changes in athletics on the collegiate level.

These changes will affect the university but not to the severe degree that athletic administrators expected. Many expected the convention to adversely affect Eastern and Morehead State University on the financial side.

Acting Athletic Director Robert Baugh didn't find that to be the case when he attended the convention along with assistant Martha Mullins and university President Hanly Funderburk.

"I can't speak for Morehead, but I actually think the convention doesn't cost us at all financially," Baugh said.

Baugh said he feared the possible effects of the convention because he expected the delegates to adopt indoor and outdoor track as one sport. That would have forced the university to bring in another sport, costing the university extra money, he said.

That didn't happen, and Baugh came away pleased with the developments. Among the items drawing Baugh's approval was the adoption of a program that allows a 20-hour practice week for athletes in their respective sports.

The policy met with resounding approval after a 299-28 vote on the Division I level and a 166-24 margin in Division II.

"Overall it was a good move,"

Baugh said. "It will take a lot of self-enforcement."

The move also met with Mullins' approval, although she mentioned concerns with the administration needed to make it work.

"That requires us to keep some data on how the time is being spent," Mullins said.

Baugh said he favored the move because it gives students more time for studying and other activities.

"There's only so many hours in the week for a student," Baugh said. "There's not a lot of time for socialization left."

The NCAA also accepted measures which will reduce the number of scholarships available in a number of sports.

Baugh and Mullins said they foresee the move as a positive one. "We won't be hurt very hard," Baugh said. "We will lose a few in football."

Football scholarships at the university will be cut from 68 to 63. Basketball will be left without one scholarship, cutting from 14 to 13.

"The competition should stay good because all the teams have been cut," Baugh said. "From an athletic standpoint it's not going to hurt us."

Currently basketball teams can play 28 games and the proposal before the delegates would have reduced the number to 25. The delegates finally decided to reduce the number by one.

"That's not all that significant," Mullins said.

"All of us in the OVC, in general, were interested in voting for any cost cutting efforts," Mullins said.

Lady Colonels find going rough on road

By Ted Schultz
Assistant sports editor

After a 5-3 start, the university women's basketball team has fallen on hard times.

The Lady Colonels have lost four consecutive road games since upsetting the University of Louisville 71-68 Dec. 15.

"We played very consistent against Louisville," Coach Larry Inman said. "But since then, we've been too inconsistent. We're not getting the consistent play that we need."

The Lady Colonels now stand 5-7 overall and 0-3 in the Ohio Valley Conference. They lost three conference games last week, all on the road.

Tennessee State 80, Eastern 72
The Lady Colonels trailed by only two with 14 minutes left in the game, but fell to host Tennessee State University 80-72 Monday.

"We were very inconsistent as a team, both offensively and defensively," Inman said. "We're not playing with the intensity that we need to play with for 40 minutes."

Angie Cox led the Lady Colonels with 20 points. Jaree Goodin scored 17 while Kenny Cowan added 16.

Tennessee Tech 75, Eastern 55
Tennessee Tech University, one of the top 20 teams in the country, handed the Lady Colonels a 75-55 setback Saturday evening.

"We played harder, but we still lacked the consistency," Inman said. "We missed too many shots and we made too many floor mistakes. Our assist to turnover ratio isn't what it should be and we're not creating enough turnovers with our defense."

Goodin led the Colonels with 16 points while Cox scored 14. Shannah McIntosh grabbed 11 rebounds.

Morehead State 84, Eastern 83
The Lady Colonels lost a nine-point halftime lead and dropped their conference opener to Morehead State University 84-83 last Wednesday.

"We should have beaten Morehead," Inman said. "We suffered from the same type of thing that has been our demise in the games that we've lost--no defense, inconsistent offense, turnovers and a lack of total intensity for 40 minutes."

Cowan led the Colonels with 32 points. Cheryl Jones scored 13 while Goodin added 10.

Dayton 84, Eastern 75
The University of Dayton overcame a nine-point second-half deficit to post a 84-75 Jan. 5.

Goodin and Cox led the Colonels with 20 points apiece. Jones added 11.

The Lady Colonels will play Middle Tennessee State University Saturday at Alumni Coliseum.

Mahaffey named Academic All-American

By Ted Schultz
Assistant sports editor

Danielle Mahaffey has accomplished something no other volleyball player in school history has done.

She is an Academic All-American.

Mahaffey has been named to the 1990-91 GTE Academic All-America team, which was voted on by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Mahaffey, a junior from Mishawaka, Ind., was named to the Region IV first team and made third-team All-America.

A chemistry and pre-medicine major, Mahaffey maintains a 3.93 grade point average. She said she has always placed academics as her top priority.

"Academics have always come first to me," she said. "Volleyball is important, but it's not going to get me a job someday. I think I've always placed emphasis on my academic standing over anything else."

Mahaffey, who was nominated for the award by the university, has garnered several awards while at Eastern.

Mahaffey has been on the Dean's List, the Ohio Valley Conference Commissioners Honor Roll and has been a Colonel Scholar every semester. She has also earned a Presidential Scholar, a Medal of Honor, and had the highest GPA of any female athlete at the university one semester.

On the volleyball court, Mahaffey played in 70 games last season, starting 35. The 5-foot-11 middle hitter earned two letters as a Colonel.

Her totals for the 1990 season include 100 kills, 53 digs, 26 blocks and 19 service aces. She recorded career totals of 220 kills, 260 digs, 54 blocks and 55 service aces.

Mahaffey said she plans to attend medical school after graduating from Eastern, where she plans to pursue a career in medicine.

Becky Klein, also a junior from Mishawaka, Ind., earned second-team Region IV honors. She maintains a 3.71 GPA while majoring in forensic science.
