Demands May Be Met

Eastern Applauds Legislature

THE KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE is to be commended for the action they took in the passing of the bill which will affect all higher education.

Eastern is indeed proud of the law granting us university status. As of July 1 of this year, this institution will be officially termed Eastern Kentucky University. But, much more came as a result of this bill than the changing of the name of the College.

The chief result of the bill on higher education is the opportunity it provides for the institutions of this state to be better prepared to meet the demands of our constantly changing world.

Eastern will be afforded the opportunity to accelerate expansion of its academic departments, especially in graduate fields other than education. Eastern has, since the organization of this institution, been the state's leader in teacher production. Over 75 percent of its graduates, since the first two-year degrees were conferred in 1907, have entered the teaching profession. But now the need and demand has determined that we should advance into other fields of graduate study. University status now granted to Eastern will allow us to make this expansion.

Other benefits which we hope to enjoy as a result of achieving university status include one of the most obvious — that of the prestige value. Eastern students may rightly feel very proud of their college, taking comfort in the knowledge that their degrees will be much more meaningful. Perhaps true appreciation of this fact will not be realized until after these students become alumni and experience the values for themselves. Therefore, besides making the degrees of future graduates invaluable, it also will help make the degrees of 14,000 graduates much more meaningful.

The deeper, perhaps most important value of our new title cannot be measured in terms of the value of degrees, but rather in several aspects which provide the value for these degrees. These might be summed up in terms of school spirit, faculty retention and recruiting, financial support, calibre of students and faculty, athletic recruiting, and public opinion.

School spirit, or the lack of it, has long been a favorite topic of student editors. Student involvement and interest are often a good measure of atmosphere of an institution. We feel that university status will promote a better school spirit and morale in behalf of both the student and the faculty member. Pride in the institution will be keener and desire to improve and progress will be inherent.

Faculty recruitment and retention will be easier. Qualifications will be clearly defined. Academic progress will stimulate desire and need to improve. Also pride in a recognized and progressive institution will again generate interest.

Athletic recruitment will be facilitated again by the name of the college as well as the academic development of the College.

Pride in the College will enhance interest in alumni affairs and desire "to do something" for the Alma Mater will take the form of a greater alumni financial support. In addition corporate loans and grants, endowments, and research grants will be forthcoming for further development. And, increases in the present academic plant will be more easily attainable as the needs arise.

With the increase in academic offerings as well as the phenomenal yearly increase in the student body, the quality of the students will increase with more clearly defined objectives.

We are grateful for the chance to continue to progress as an educational institution and praise those in the legislature who had the foresight to recognize our need and act accordingly.

Educational Stew

Out-Of-State Tuitions Raised More Yet?

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following editorial, considered of prime importance to many of Eastern's students, is reprinted from the Sunday "Courier-Journal.")

The University of Kentucky will raise tuition fees for out-of-state students next fall from $620 a year to $820, and the five state colleges will raise theirs from $400 to $580. The raises are less than some members of the legislature and some college-survey groups had suggested, but they are at least a long step in the right direction.

No responsible educator wants to discourage out-of-state attendance. A campus peopled entirely of Kentucky students would be provincial, depressingly so, whereas the association and exchange of ideas and customs with students from other states and other lands is a vital part of true education.

But Kentucky, which is basically a poor state, should not assume the financial burden of educating the children of northern and neighboring states because its college fees, designed to accommodate students of an average economic level, are low. In this respect, there is reason to wonder whether state-college fees, which each year help attract to these campuses an unusual proportion of students from nearby states, could not be further raised. If these schools desire rating equality with the University, as they contend, they should not object to maintaining equal tuition fees.

Why They Protest

Inheritors Of War

(ACP) — The war in Viet Nam has generated a good deal of debate on college campuses recently. Why do these people, and others, protest and argue? Well, says the University of Oregon Daily Emerald, the present generation of college youth was born deep in the bowels of the greatest world war in history. Many of them have no living fathers because of that war, and many others have fathers bearing the lifelong scars of battle.

Five years after the war, when most of today's students were between the ages of 3 and 10, another major conflict was at hand, this time in Korea. The youngsters saw their older brothers drafted for battle — many of them just out of college. Some never came home.

Today, 12 years after the end of the Korean war and fewer years after Quemoy and Matsu, Berlin, Lebanon, and Cuba, America again faces a major war, this time with implications the world has only recently begun to imagine.

Today's college student had little or no contact with developments which led to the present situation in Viet Nam. Precious few voices were raised in question when President Eisenhower first committed American troops in Southeast Asia as early as 1956. The adults who today criticize the student for inspecting his government's policies paid pitifully little attention to the warnings sounded a decade ago about America fighting a land war in Asia.

So today's student watches draft calls rise and wonders who will be next. He watches Sen. Wayne Morse's predictions of massive war in Asia slowly become reality, and he rightfully questions Defense Secretary Robert McNamara's three separate and widely-spaced forecasts that American boys would be home by the end of 1965. Most of all, he wonders about the real reasons for this war 8,000 miles from home, reasons which have yet to be fully explained.

The fact is that many more college students should concern themselves with this war — more even than they are now concerned. It may be the most important problem they will ever face. Those who are vigorously debating the issue are asking questions all Americans should be asking, regardless of political belief. These students are worried. They're not kidding themselves into unthinking acceptance of glib official answers given by diplomats.

Today's student would like a chance to finish school, get a job, and perhaps marry and raise a family, uninterrupted by nuclear inferno. If his body is to be committed to war of another generation's making, then today's student wants some answers, and his right to demand them is implicit.

This, America, is why they protest.

COMPLETELY UNAWARE!

Petitions Due

'D-Day' Draws Near

EASTERN STUDENTS will soon become acquainted with the truth that student government cannot function without student involvement.

The Student Council elections are near at hand — March 22 to be exact. Petitions for the elections are due next Friday. Petition forms for students interested in running for any of the major offices of the Student Council may be secured from the receptionist in the Student Union Building Lobby or at the Student Council office in the S.U.B. These petitions must contain the signatures of 150 students attesting to the qualities of the person seeking office, but are not an agreement to vote for that person.

Student involvement has this year been at an all-time low. Previous elections have proven that the student is not interested in considerations which might affect him. He does not care to try to find out if, and how the Council is functioning. He has shown that he is not concerned enough in student governmental affairs to bring his comments, suggestions, and criticisms to the governing body. Yet, this is the same student who sits in the grill and complains most about the operation and "in-operation" of the Student Council.

The Student Council at Eastern has been a progressive organization for several years acting in behalf of the student. Students need to show that they care about their campus and its operation. As of publication, no petitions have been presented to the Student Council office. Any students who feel that they have the potential to lead campus government should secure petitions, and begin their campaign.

A University Without Greeks ...

The Next Step-Fraternities, Sororities?

By BILL RAKER

Progress Feature Editor

Can a university be a university without fraternities and sororities? That is a question that may well be answered on Eastern's campus within the near future. Achieving university status has brought to Eastern the recognition it has long merited as a progressive institution in the field of higher education. At the same time, however, this step up the ladder of growth serves to bring to a head the question on whether or not social fraternities and sororities should be established on Eastern's campus.

The initiating of Greek organizations to a campus that has previously been closed to them is something that needs to be approached from all standpoints with a mature viewpoint and an attitude of open-mindedness.

Since the students themselves are directly involved in such a proposal, the Student Council appointed a committee of seven students at the beginning of the fall semester to investigate and evaluate the opinions and reactions of students in regard to fraternities and sororities.

The members of the committee were Ruth Reibling, Fred Mariana, and Robert Hughes for the pro faction. Charlene Conn, Rebecca Rader, and Bob Messersmith presented the con arguments. The chairman of the committee, Jud Cross, furnished statistics obtained from the National Interfraternity Council and summaries of other committee findings.

Because the entire student body is concerned with and will be affected by any decision which is ultimately determined, it is important that the students be aware of the present situation. As an informative aid to the student, a synopsis of the committee's findings and final report is presented herein.

The con side of the committee argued that the expenses of fraternity - sorority living were beyond the reach of most of Eastern's students. Out of 6942 full-time students, 1300 applied for National Defense Loans last semester; and 949 such loans were granted. In addition, 506 students were on the federal work-study program, and 400 are on the college employment program. These categories cover nearly 30 percent of Eastern's students. By regulations, all of these students would be financially ineligible to join fraternities and sororities.

They further argued that these organizations are cliquish, prankish, and that they limit the personal freedom of their members. The dependency of a fraternity member upon his organization limits his personal growth and adds to his prejudices.

The pros argued that living expenses for Greek members are on a level comparable to dorm expenses, except where social activities are over-emphasized. They felt that fraternities and sororities enhance the character of their members, rather than alienate the belongers. For example, many such organizations sponsor cultural events, their members are taught social graces, and the very selectivity of Greek organizations leads to explicable conduct on the part of their members.

The effects of Greeks on the well-established suitcasing practice was also discussed. The pro side felt that Greeks would offer a variety of social functions that would check the weekly exodus of suitcases. The cons contended that suitcasing occurs now, even on weekends when major campus functions are scheduled, and that fraternity functions would be no more attractive to the habitual home-goers than the present ones.

The cons also presented the theory that the interfraternity competition for campus political offices and popularity would injure the friendly, open atmosphere that Eastern now affords. The pros, however, felt that an Interfraternity Council could serve to channel the competition towards beneficial athletic programs, charity drives, and other worthwhile projects.

Fraternity and sorority members usually have higher point standings than their non-Greek counterparts, the pros pointed out. The cons felt this was so because the Greek organizations select strong academic students to hold up the over-all average. A main argument was that the heavily scheduled social life of the Greek member leaves him far less time for study than the other students have. The pro side upheld that the strong academic members tutored the weaker ones, and that supervised study was a part of almost every pledge program.

The pros also felt that these institutions could act as a line of communication between the administration and the student and aid in the control of student and campus affairs. The opposing side insisted that fraternities and sororities would tend to function only as organized interest groups, with little perspective of campus problems outside of their own limited realms.

Both sides of the argument were thus consolidated to present to the Faculty Committee. In the final report, both sides agree on one point. Perhaps this agreement holds the key to the answer to the social fraternity-sorority question for Eastern.

The concurrency was that the primary function of Greek organizations is to provide a suitable, organized social life for students; and the word "social" is too often misinterpreted to connote "party." There is more social functions than partying, and if the word "fraternity" means parties to Eastern students, then Eastern isn't ready for Greek organizations.

Fraternities and sororities demand political, social, and financial maturity. On campuses where they function best, there are certain governing factors, among which are a large body of enough mature upperclassmen to provide leadership and to set standards for the underclassmen and an interested faculty to provide guidance and assistance in fraternity-sorority affairs.

The committee's report contended that if Eastern students are adult enough to realize these things and if they are mature enough to accept Greek letter organizations as a social responsibility and not a mere social outlet, then Eastern is ready for the next step — fraternities and sororities.

Sue Pollock To Represent Eastern In Glamour Magazine Contest

Miss Sue Pollock, a freshman from Richmond, has been chosen as Eastern's Best-dressed College Co-ed. She will be Eastern's entry to the Glamour Magazine Contest to find the Ten Best-dressed College Girls in America.

The two semi-finalists chosen were Miss Roberta Sibrava, a sophomore from Newburgh, New York, and Miss Diane Goodpaster, a senior from Lexington. Each of the girls met with the judges for an interview, and each was photographed in a campus outfit for the final judging. From these three girls, Sue Pollock was chosen to represent Eastern.

Sue was selected for her fashion knowledge, her choice of clothes, and her neat and well-groomed appearance. She strives for the classic look in her appearance, but this look is not easily obtained without a workable wardrobe plan and fashion skill.

During the interview Sue was asked what she looked for in her selection of clothes. She replied, "I prefer the classic lines in my clothes. I do not buy a certain style just because it is popular with everyone else. I try to stay away from clothes that appear as though they will go out of style as fast as they came in."

Sue centers her winter wardrobe around dark green, wine and charcoal grey; while her summer wardrobe centers around yellow, white and clear green. In this way she is able to "mix and match" her clothes for a large variety of outfits.

Not only is Sue always well dressed, but she also seeks perfection in neatness. These are the qualities of the "Best-dressed College Co-ed."

Pictures of her in a campus outfit, an off-campus daytime outfit, and an evening gown will be sent to New York to be judged by a panel of Glamour editors. These editors will select a group of semi-finalists and from these the "Top Ten" will be chosen. The rest of the semi-finalist winners will be given honorable mention. These Honorable Mention winners will also have their pictures in an issue of Glamour.

If Sue is chosen as one of the finalists, she will be flown to New York for an all-expense-paid visit from May 30 to June 11. These finalists will be shown New York at its most glamorous, taken to famous restaurants, the theater and cultural centers. They will also receive numerous gifts from friends of Glamour. She will also be pictured in the August issue of the magazine.

An English major, Sue is also a member of KYMA and the Wesley Foundation. This past semester she attained a 3.1 overall standing. Sue enjoys knitting sweaters, reading, and listening to records. Her future plans include getting a Masters in English, and then teaching on the college level.

Reading Classes

Begin Monday

Speed reading classes for college students will begin on Monday, March 7 at 4 p.m. According to Dixon A. Barr, Dean of the School of Education, the first sequence of classes will meet three days a week, on Monday, Wednesday, and Fridays for seven weeks in room 406 of the Bert Combs Building.

Mrs. Ann Algiers, instructor for the course, stated that the sequence would include the development of speed, comprehension, vocabulary and study skills. She further indicated that it is not unusual for a student to double or triple his speed of comprehension in a relatively short period of time.

Enrollment for this first sequence will be limited to those students who have already indicated a desire for the course by their advanced registration at the Reading Clinic. These students need only to pick up a payment form at the Reading Clinic and pay a $5 materials fee charge at the comptroller's office.

Other students who are interested in the second sequence of classes, which will begin on April 19, may enroll by contacting the Reading Clinic. This second sequence is also scheduled for seven weeks but the classes will meet from 6-7:30 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.
