Bar entry age to remain 21

■ Senate, House BOP committees vote to keep 1992 ABC regulation

By Joe Castle and Amy Etmans

A 1992 state Alcoholic Beverage Control regulation that closed several Richmond bars and prompted others to start selling food won't die at the end of the 1994 legislative session.

The rule's new lease on life comes after both the House and Senate Business Organizations and Professions committees decided to reverse a letter of deficiency indicating legislative disapproval of the regulation.

The Senate BOP committee voted yesterday to lift the 2-year old deficiency placed on Kentucky

Alcohol Regulation 5:070, which bans people under 21 from entering businesses that sell alcohol by the drink but don't receive 35 percent of their total sales from food.

"What other reason (other than buying alcohol) would a minor have to be in a place that serves only alcohol?" state ABC chief enforcement officer Carl Harmon said. "What it boils down to is, how can you justify a person under 21 in these places?"

The Senate vote followed a similar move by the House BOP committee Tuesday, which voted to lift the deficiency after the ABC requested its removal.

KAR 5:070, which was written by the ABC after a bill banning minors from bars was defeated in the 1992 General Assembly, was found deficient by an interim legislative committee only weeks after going into effect. Such a deficiency means the regulation will expire upon adjournment of the next legislative session.

"In other words, when they brought the regulation before the committee, they basically said it wasn't in compliance," Senate BOP committee chair Jeff Green, D-Paducah, said.

This time the regulation has received a warmer reception from the BOP committees, which originally limited the rule's life span to less than two years with the letter of deficiency, than it did during the 1992 interim session.

Both legislative BOP committees, the groups which reviewed the regulation in 1992, have been reshuffled in the wake of the FBI's BOPTROT

"Rudy" brings upbeat message to ECU

■ Ruettiger tells Sunday audience to "never give up"

By Janeen Miracle
Staff writer

When Daniel "Rudy" Ruettiger was a young boy, he dreamed of playing football for the University of Notre Dame.

Sunday, 18 years after playing in the last seconds of a football game that brought him the glory of being carried off the field by his teammates, Ruettiger encouraged fans gathered at Alumni Coliseum to "never give up."

Standing before a crowd including church youth groups, Notre Dame fans and sports enthusiasts, Ruettiger talked about the story that inspired the movie "Rudy," which came out last year.

"I was told I could never be what I wanted to be because they labeled me as a dumb kid, a small kid. I showed up at Notre Dame with just hope."

— Daniel "Rudy" Ruettiger, former University of Notre Dame football player

"I was told I could never be what I wanted to be because they labeled me as a dumb kid, a small kid," Ruettiger said. "I showed up at Notre Dame with just hope. So many times we quit. We give up because we say it is too tough, too rough."

But even when his struggle to be a part of the team got the roughest, Ruettiger didn't give up.

As a member of the Fighting Irish's scout team, Ruettiger's 5-foot-

6-inch small frame blocked tackles behind the scenes for the players in practice who actually got game time on the field. Ruettiger longed to run out of the same tunnel as the team that played, but he watched the game from the stands with other Notre Dame fans.

"I should have quit, I had every right to," Ruettiger said. "When they hit me for the first time, I said this game isn't for dreamers, it is for men."

Still, Ruettiger kept dreaming that one day he could dress and run out of the tunnel, too. But when his second and last season with the team was coming to an end and he still had not dressed for a game, Ruettiger again thought about quitting.

Ruettiger said a maintenance man who befriended him when he worked at Notre Dame's football stadium talked him out of it (Ruettiger worked with the caretakers on the football field prior to making the scout team.). Ruettiger said the scene in the movie is accurate word for word and quoted it to the audience.

"He said to me, 'Since when are you a quitter? You are so full of crap. You stood out there with the best team for two years. You are going to graduate with a degree from Notre Dame. You've got nothing to prove to anyone but yourself. If you haven't done that, you won't ever do it.'"

Officer faces brutality charge

■ Student files complaint against public safety officer

By Don Perry
News writer

A police brutality complaint was filed with public safety against a campus police officer by an Eastern student who claims he was assaulted by the officer.

William Hines, 21, Martin Hall, said he was assaulted by public safety officer Mike Fearing Feb. 2 after leaving a birthday party at Brockton.

According to Hines, he and about 25 or 30 other people were at the party and a fight broke out.

"I had nothing to do with the fight,"

Hines said.

Hines said he and a few of his friends were leaving the party just as public safety arrived. He said his friends decided to go back inside but he kept going because he had done nothing wrong.

Hines said the police car was approaching him at a high speed and he began to run from the officer. He said he decided to stop at the hill in front of Telford Hall on his own.

That is when, according to Hines,

Passing the buck

University not taking responsibility for campus' safety

The neverending story of the Bluegrass Army Depot has encountered another plot twist that could have a sizable impact on Eastern's campus community.

The National Research Council, a branch of the National Academy of Sciences, has endorsed the building of an incinerator in Madison County as soon as possible, a decision based on the Council's belief that the chemical weapons at the depot are more dangerous being stored than being burned.

According to the Army's official risk assessment report, these weapons will not be safe for storage after 2002. The NRC's decision was made even with the knowledge that the existing incinerator in Toole, Utah, has had some problems with leaks.

Keep in mind that although a final decision on the disposal of Madison County's chemical weapons won't be made until July, the depot has already had one leak this year and its arsenal is stored just six miles from Eastern's campus.

So why does this university continue to pretend it doesn't exist? This subject has been mulled over and twisted and probed under the microscopes of the Army, the city and various citizens' groups for 10 years.

However, in all this time, Eastern has never taken a stand on the issue. No community discussion meetings have ever been permitted on campus.

While the administration's past policy of neutrality is apathetic, it's not nearly as alarming as its method of dealing with a potential emergency situation.

Those who have been hired to make decisions for Eastern aren't playing with matches when they ignore the issue to the point that they endanger the students. They're playing with an inferno.

Take the calendars the Chemical Stockpile Emergency Preparedness Program (CSEPP) produced last year for example. These calendars, while not a cure for the problem, are at least a start. The calendars contain information about evacuation zones, protection from the gas if unable to evacuate, disaster supply kit suggestions and important phone numbers for emergency information.

These calendars were not distributed to campus residents last year because the university has a policy against distributing postage-free outside mail. This policy has not been changed, so it looks like the 1994 calendars will again be left in the public safety office for students to pick up themselves. Why would they take the time, though, to go to the Brewer Building and pick up a calendar if they don't realize they need them?

There are other ways of distributing these calendars, including enlisting volunteers to take them door to door. Besides the information provided in these calendars, the university possesses other information that it seems to be unwilling to share with students.

The university has worked with CSEPP to develop an evacuation plan for campus separate from the rest of Madison County. This plan may even work, but no one knows for sure because it has never been tested.

The plan has never even been discussed with students. Several students said they have no idea what the warning sirens sound like and wouldn't know what to do if they heard them and recognized them.

If calendars or practice evacuations are so unfeasible, it should at least be possible that the university could distribute copies of the evacuation plan through a university-funded — and therefore legal-to-be-mailed — flier.

University officials apparently want to avoid causing unnecessary alarm about this issue. They don't want to make students worry until there is a need. This is an understandable reaction from administrators.

However, we don't understand how the university could plan to begin educating students on safety procedures after a state of emergency has been called. An actual emergency situation is hardly a conducive atmosphere for calm education.

We don't mean to rehash an issue that is already "scattered, smothered and covered," but in this area it is warranted. We think the university has a bigger obligation to keep its students safe than to make them feel safe.

Bosnia proof of regression

Darwin had his principle right, but the direction wrong. It is truly amazing how far we humans have regressed.

A mortar attack in Sarajevo's central marketplace killed 68 people Saturday and injured more than 200. Despite the battle zone the former Yugoslavian capital has become, Saturday is still a day of frenzied activity in the city's market. The Serbians knew this and decided to launch a mortar shell into the bustling area.

As a result, hundreds of unarmed men, women and children were killed and maimed. And this type of cold-blooded killing has been going on since Yugoslavia broke apart. For example, last year the Serbs had snipers fire into buses filled with children leaving the war zone. Those buses had no military value at all. The Serbs were just carrying out more "ethnic cleansing."

After reading about Saturday's attack and its results, I couldn't help but think about the way we treat each other in the "new world order."

Things aren't getting any better, folks. As this century nears closing, it is clear that it has been the most violent in history. Sure, there were more of us on the planet than ever before, but we also killed many more of each other.

We all know about and the "ethnic cleansing" in Bosnia and Hitler's "solution" as portrayed in Steven Spielberg's epic "Schindler's List," both prime examples of what ignorance and fear can cause millions of people to do to one another.

And that fear can come from a variety of sources. It could be anything from a difference in appearance to a difference in religion. In most cases it doesn't matter where it comes from. Once the fear is there, we feel the need to get rid of whatever it is we're afraid of, even if that fear is groundless.

Joe Castle
The song remains the same

Why did Hitler hate Jews? Was it because of an unhappy childhood? A Jewish teacher who said he was a failure as an artist? Personal shortcomings? Who knows? Who cares?

What matters is that six million people — people, just like you and me — died because one man ignited the hatred of his nation. To put the holocaust in perspective, consider that only four million people live in Kentucky today. Just imagine every single person in the state dead, plus two million Ohio residents to even the numbers out.

Look at Bosnia. The Serbs hate the Muslims, the Muslims hate the Serbs, the Croats hate dodging bullets. Why is there so much more hatred in Bosnia than in the rest of the world?

There isn't. It's just that all the anger in Bosnia is being released.

Fear becomes anger, anger becomes hatred and hatred becomes violence, first on a mental and then on a physical level. And that holds true for individuals as well as nations.

While it's hard to miss what happens on a global scale, what we often don't see — or just ignore — is how much hate exists on a smaller scale.

Think about relations on the average college campus.

We have tensions between blacks and whites, Greeks and independents, Greeks and rival Greeks, males and females, faculty and administrators, instructors and students. And although those tensions don't always erupt in violence, sometimes they do.

When individuals lash out because of those tensions, whether they are on a college campus in Kentucky or in south-central Los Angeles, they are no better than the people who are doing the killing in Bosnia. Because those individual acts of violence are usually what make up larger conflicts, even when those conflicts have extensive histories, like race relations in America.

What's really sad is how much violence originates with groups and is directed at individuals. It's easy to hate from the security and anonymity of a group, especially against individuals, who make easy targets for groups looking to vent senseless rage.

And we aren't immune to such violence at Eastern, either. Within the past two weeks we've had a carjacking, random assaults and numerous cases of vandalism, both in parking lots and in residence halls. That's not the same as a mortar attack or a drive-by shooting, but how would you feel if someone jumped in your car at a stoplight and pulled a knife on you? What if one of your friends was beaten up on the job? How would you feel if you came back to your room to find most of your belongings broken and destroyed?

More importantly, think how you would feel if your little brother or sister was one of those blown apart in that marketplace Saturday.

Earlier this week Bill Clinton endorsed air strikes in Bosnia as long as the United Nations supports them and other nations join in. In other words, outside forces killing to stop inside forces from killing each other. Unfortunately, that seems to be the only way to end the wholesale genocide taking place.

I don't like the idea of America as the world's police force, and military intervention in Bosnia will obviously result in more death, but something needs to be done. And as the world's most powerful nation, America has to be in charge of that something.

Otherwise, we're just taking one more step down the path of de-evolution.

Country kickin' Center Board

Pearl Jam would be nice, but heck, more variety will do

Congratulations, Center Board! Eastern's entertainment committee recently clinched Sawyer Brown and Diamond Rio, both nationally known acts, for March 24. And we can't wait for tickets to go on sale Feb. 17.

Tonight there are six explosive acts performing at 8 p.m. in Brock Auditorium. And these are only a few of the acts Center Board has booked to play Eastern this semester. That's quite an accomplishment, since this is only the second week of February.

Confederate Railroad pulls in for two shows in Brock Auditorium Friday. Jane Powell, known for her five-octave range, will perform on Feb. 17. Cumette & Maher's unplugged concert at Fountain Food Court is Feb. 23.

Already this year we have hosted two comedians, one comedian group — Red Johnny and the Round Guy, who taped a segment for an upcoming half-hour MTV special — and country group Southern Wind. And last year was another banner year with Alabama, Diamond Rio and Toad the Wet Sprocket. The names just keep mounting.

But wait a minute! Look at the acts we've had.

Maybe everyone on campus doesn't listen to country music. Maybe some students even hate it. Maybe some students prefer other kinds of music.

We are not necessarily asking for Pearl Jam or Smashing Pumpkins — although they would be nice — but we are asking for a little more variety to accommodate the more than 16,000 students.

Just because we can get national country acts doesn't mean Center Board should back off now. They did wrangle in Toad, but that is only one "college music" group.

What about the Gin Blossoms? The Lemonheads? The Breeders? Blind Melon? The Cranberries? Any of these groups would fit into either Brock Auditorium or Alumni Coliseum.

Center Board is doing a good job, but we want more than cowboy hats and country music.

Last Boy Scout's life twisted reality

This is a tale of two girls named Debbie, two guys named Jim, my drunk friends, a girl I'm just friends with, a raving lunatic of an adviser and a cat named Midnight.

I'm Brett Dunlap, a.k.a. "The Last Boy Scout," and this is my twisted little reality.

First, I got the nickname "The Last Boy Scout" when I once stopped a guy from getting a girl drunk and taking advantage of her. Back home, I had the reputation of being the ultimate nice guy. I was the guy people would call to drive them home when they had too much to drink. I'm the kind of guy drunk girls can trust not to try to take advantage of them and make sure they get home all right, and the guy their boyfriend would trust if they were too drunk to take them home.

My story started when I decided I had enough of being shy, and I was going to become more social. My friend Debbie, who was the only real female friend I had at the time, helped me come out of my shell so I could tell the other Debbie, who was the first girl I ever had a crush on, how I felt about her. Debbie, the one I had a crush on a long time ago, was getting married to a guy named Jim, and I had only a year before she graduated and left for good. I wanted to try to clear up everything so we could be friends. I finally told her everything and we are starting to become good friends, I just hope Jim doesn't get the wrong idea about what I'm up to and tries to kill me.

Shortly after I made my peace with Debbie, I met another girl and we became good friends. She had a boyfriend, named Jim, and I fully understood our situation. We were friends, we did things together, we could talk about anything, but I knew that was it. There was nothing romantic to our relationship. However, it seems, in Jim's mind, I was trying to steal her away from him and now I'm almost sure he wants to hurt me. According to my friend, there was a time when he couldn't even say my name without gritting his teeth.

Brett Dunlap

A couple of weeks ago, a friend of mine who, just a couple of weeks before lectured to me about drinking responsibility, called me up at 5 a.m. after a wild night of partying and asked if I could drive him and some others home. On the way back, I got pulled over by a police officer who thought I was drunk. I had three people passed out in my car, the stench of alcohol everywhere and I had Ohio license plates. This was not good.

The officer didn't give me a ticket, but I told my friends if I did, I would have made them pay for it. Then I would rip their lungs out if they ever did it to me again.

In my attempt to put my life in order, I finally declared my major last year and got a raving lunatic as an adviser.

"Brett, have you read every single newspaper in existence?" she said. "Do you know every single act of crime which has happened in the Richmond area, everything from murders to jaywalkers? Where are your stories for this week? You didn't ask the right questions, go back and rewrite it. Why isn't this done, why isn't that done, work work work." Now keep in mind she asked me all of this in the course of five minutes.

I've decided not to sleep anymore, it just takes too much time away from my work. Besides, with the number of people out there gunning for me, I should probably stay awake and keep my eyes on the lookout.

I gave up being shy for this mess? My life was so much simpler when I was a social recluse. Sure, I had nothing to do on the weekends, but I didn't have people out to get me.

Where does my cat, Midnight, fit into all of this? Well, actually she doesn't. It just made my first paragraph sound interesting. I'm just glad she's back home puking all over the place and not here. That would be one too many things for me to deal with right now.

All I can say is if too much more happens, I'll be changing my name to Bob Strunk and moving to Salt Lake City to start a new life. There are a couple of girls who are starting to tell me about problems they are having with their boyfriends...

Does anyone have a bus schedule to Utah?

Dunlap is a senior journalism major from Wilmington, Ohio, and is assistant photo editor for the Progress.

Sappy scenes stir weeping romantic

I think I'm getting sappy in my old age. Give me a song or a movie, and I'll find a reason to cry because of it.

I feel like I can cry at the drop of a hat now.

The funny thing is I used to laugh at people who made the smallest whimper at a sad movie, especially family and friends. I would go to a movie with some friends, and at a particularly serious moment, I would hear little sobs coming from beside me. I would turn to see them coming from my friends. I would burst out laughing and start making fun of them. I never saw a reason to get so emotionally attached to a song or movie.

It's a different story now. Now I'm the one who is crying at a sad or mushy scene in a movie or a love song. People are now laughing at me.

I have gone through a succession of films which have left me blood-shot and blotchy-faced from crying, starting with the Michael Keaton/Nicole Keaton five-hanky movie "My Life," in which I sobbed along with the rest of the theater. I think that is where it all began. Then came "Sleepless in Seattle," "Boyz n' the Hood," "Beauty and the Beast," "Backdraft," "Forever Young" and, lastly, "Philadelphia."

Christina Rankin
My turn

There are an endless stream of movies, too numerous to count, where I have been on the verge of tears.

I called my parents one day and remarked on my unfortunate discovery. My mom made the comment about how she, too, didn't get all mushy-eyed until she came to college. It didn't make me feel any better, but at least I was reassured I wasn't alone in my quest to flood the whole United States with my tears.

This Valentine's Day might possibly be difficult for me because of my new-found sappiness and also being without a significant other to share this wonderful day with. Turning on the radio and hearing some heart-felt love songs and dedications, like Journey's "Open Arms" or "Faithfully," could leave me drowning in a pool of my own salty tears.

Switching on the TV set and seeing Oprah Winfrey host her annual Valentine's Day engagement show could leave me in a hyperventilating fit with no return to sanity.

Crying, it seems, has become what I do best. I have even begun to listen to opera and classical music again, for one, because I enjoy it and also because once in a while I need to clean out my tear ducts.

Luckily for me, though, I have yet to start crying at commercials, but I'm still young. Once I do start crying at the "Jean-Luc" International Coffee commercials or the Energizer bunny commercials, I know then that there will be no hope for me.

I will be too far gone for any kind of help.

Rankin is a junior journalism major from Frankfort and is a copy editor for the Progress.

Hearing postponed for student accused of assaulting Myers

Edward W. Peebles, 53, originally scheduled to appear in Madison County District Court Tuesday to face charges resulting from an attack on a university administrator, got a continuance on his preliminary hearing until 1:30 p.m. Feb. 22.

Peebles' first scheduled preliminary hearing was Jan. 18, but was changed by Judge William G. Clouse Jr. to Feb. 8 because Peebles was unable to find counsel to represent him.

Linda Campbell of the Madison County public defender's office will represent Peebles, who faces charges of wanton endangerment, assault and criminal mischief for the Jan. 7 attack on vice president for student affairs Thomas D. Myers.

Library sponsors contest to name computer catalog system

The Eastern libraries are sponsoring a contest to attach a creative name to the new computer catalog system. The name should reflect university heritage and/or the access features of OPAC.

The winner of this contest will be announced after Spring Break. The winner has a choice of either $50 cash or a $50 gift certificate redeemable at the college bookstore.

The judges will be the OPAC Contest Working Group of the Automation Committee, after the final approval by the library administration.

The contest will start Feb. 14 at 7:45 a.m. and end March 11 at 11 p.m. Entries will be stamped for date/time upon receipt. If two identical winning entries are found, the earlier entry will be the winner. You may pick up and submit entry forms at the circulation desk in the Crabbe Library.

Fall housing intention cards due to RAs by tomorrow at noon

Last year's housing intention cards were mistakenly printed and distributed again earlier this week, causing some slight confusion because the process has been changed this year.

Amber Culver, director of Housing, said everything has been taken care of now, and the correct cards, a peach color, have been distributed to RAs.

The cards are due back to RAs by noon tomorrow. The system for spring housing has been simplified. Now a student must simply see his or her resident assistant at a floor meeting or individually to obtain a card and then give it back to the RA.

Previously, a trip to the housing office was necessary for a room change and the change would have to wait until the fall semester.

However, April 4-28 is a room change period for the fall semester. Students cannot actually move until next semester, but the arrangements can be made this semester.

Kentucky lenient on juveniles accused of crimes

A study released Tuesday by Kentucky Youth Advocates indicates that while the number of Kentucky youth charged with robberies doubled last year and the number charged with assault tripled, Kentucky is fairly lenient on juveniles accused of crimes.

Last year, 635 juveniles were accused of crimes serious enough for the accused offenders to be tried as adults and sent to prison. Only 14 of these were actually sentenced to serve prison terms as adults.

The Kentucky General Assembly will consider three separate bills this year that deal with toughening sentences for juvenile offenders.

Clinton says his budget will achieve a deficit reduction record

President Clinton said his new budget will achieve a deficit reduction record unequalled since Harry Truman's stint in the White House.

The president's budget proposal is soft on poor children and the homeless, but tough on smokers and tougher on defense workers.

His $1.52 trillion proposal allows enough money for the Head Start program to gain 90,000 new students next year and appropriates more money for nutrition programs for pregnant women and children.

However, the plan calls for less weapons to be manufactured and will consequently cut jobs of defense factory workers.

Also, enough tax has been added to the price of cigarettes that a two-pack-a-day smoker will pay an additional $1.50 a day and around $547.50 more per year.

New Navy judge drops three of four remaining Tailhook cases

Adm. Frank Kelso II, the Chief of Naval Operations has received the brunt of the blame for the Navy Tailhook scandal as the court martial is being wrapped up in Naval Court.

Navy Capt. William Vest, the new acting judge, dropped the cases against three out of the four remaining servicemen implicated in the scandal saying that Adm. Kelso misrepresented his knowledge of what occurred at the convention in 1991.

Amnesty International joins fight for rights of homosexuals in U.S.

Amnesty International has announced a six-month campaign to fight for the rights of homosexuals in the United States.

The London-based human rights organization made the announcement in conjunction with the release of a 24-nation survey on the treatment of homosexuals. Amnesty placed the repression of homosexuals on their human rights agenda.

The organization decided to take up homosexual rights in 1991. Investigations show homosexuals are vulnerable to the same circumstances governments use to lock up political prisoners.

The U.S. campaign will include the petitioning of state governments to revoke laws that single out homosexuals.

U.S. develops plan to relieve Sarajevo with NATO's help

The United States is working with the United Nations toward ending the war in Sarajevo.

Clinton's top foreign policy advisers have prepared a U.S. proposal to the North American Treaty Organization that calls for issuing an ultimatum to all the military forces in the Sarajevo area.

The ultimatum would demand that the warring sides give up all their heavy weapons, including the Serb artillery that has killed hundreds of civilians in past months.

The proposal, which Clinton is expected to sign, calls for using air strikes and other military force to enforce the ultimatum. Clinton said the other NATO countries will have to first agree to the proposal before the U.S. will fire on Sarajevo.

REGULATION: ABC rule to remain in effect after General Assembly

scandal investigation.
Sen. David LeMaster, the Paintsville Democrat who resigned following his conviction last semester of lying to the FBI and sentenced to 12 months in prison, was chairman of the senate BOP committee when KAR 5:070 was introduced in 1992. Rep. Jerry Bronger, former chair of the House BOP committee, was also implicated in the BOPROT investigation.

Harmon said arrest records for the past two years show the regulation has had a definite impact on underage drinking in Kentucky.

Statewide in 1991-92, there were 72 minors arrested for underage drinking. In 1992-93, the year after Regulation 5:070 went into effect, that number dropped to 38, Harmon said.

"No question about it, some people feared that they would get caught," Harmon said.

The people Harmon thinks those underage drinkers are afraid of are the ABC's 24 state enforcement officers who pose undercover in bars to bust regulation violators and the bar owners who serve them.

House BOP committee chair Rep. Jim Yates, D-Louisville, said he thinks some type of regulation and enforcement is needed because there is a problem in Kentucky.

"From what I have read (underage drinking) is a problem," Yates said. "Crimes are committed because they are on drugs and alcohol."

Green said that although the regulation effectively carries the force of the law, he thinks the ABC should eventually take underage drinking enforcement to the full legislature.

"At some point in time I'm probably going to recommend to the ABC folks that, if they feel as strongly about this as they say they do, that they pursue legislation to make it a law," Green said. "I just feel like something like this needs to be a statute."

Although the removal of the deficiency means the ABC will be able to enforce the regulation indefinitely, Green said he doesn't think the agency will go overboard with it.

"I don't think they'll do anything more than what their job requires," Green said. "I don't think they need to resort to Gestapo tactics . . . but we don't need kids in bars and taverns."

BRUTALITY: Student charges campus officer used excessive force

Fearing pulled his gun on him and directed him to lie down on the concrete and told him to spread his arms and legs in a "vicious voice."

Hines said when he did as the officer directed, Fearing then stood over him with one foot pressed against the left side of his face and continued to point his gun at him.

"He was stepping on my jaw so hard my teeth were hurting," Hines said. "It was like he was putting out a cigarette butt on my face."

Hines has a mark on the side of his face he said was caused by Fearing's shoe.

Hines said Fearing pulled his arms back and cuffed him before he lifted him from the ground by the hand-cuff chains.

"I was scared. I didn't know what was going to happen next," Hines said.

Hines said he was taken downtown to the police garage where he was removed from the car.

Hines was kept in the Madison County Detention Center over night and charged with disorderly conduct.

After being released from jail, Hines went to the campus infirmary where he was treated for the injury to his face.

After encouragement from his friends, Hines said he went to public safety to report what had happened to him.

Lt. Ricky Cox, public safety, said he did not know anything about a complaint being filed against one of the officers.

"That is news to me," Cox said. Hines said he talked with Wynn

Walker, assistant director of public safety, and Walker advised him of how to file a complaint against an arresting officer.

Walker then took pictures of Hines' face and wrists, where the cuffs were placed, and let him issue a written complaint.

"Mr. Walker was very cooperative with me," Hines said.

Walker said Wednesday that the department would not release a statement on the charge against Fearing until an internal investigation was completed.

separately to elect a candidate for each party.

Mary Jane Ginter, chairman of the Madison County Democrats, said the 15-member Democrat executive committee will meet Monday afternoon at the Miller House on First and Irvine streets.

This meeting will result in an official candidate, but she said Richmond attorney John Lackey will probably be asked to run.

"Johnny Lackey is the only person who seemed interested in the position, so he's our most likely candidate," Ginter said.

Lackey was the only democrat in this district who filed with Secretary of State Bob Babbage's office for the fall election.

Babbage said candidates must file separately for this special election. The deadline is Feb. 15.

Two republican candidates from the 34th District met the filing deadline for the regular fall election.

Sheila McBride, vice chairperson of the Madison County Republicans, said a choice will be made between the two candidates Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Madison County courthouse.

McBride said the two candidates, local businessman Barry Metcalf and Randall Curry, a tobacco and beef farmer, have already been in contact with members of the executive committee in efforts to campaign for their votes.

Votes for both parties will be made through secret ballots.

Babbage said turnout is usually low for special elections held in Kentucky.

He said maybe a third of the number of general election voters can be expected to turn out for this, but urged that people in this district do make an effort for this one.

RUDY: Movie subject speaks in Alumni Coliseum

Ruettiger decided not to quit, and when he was carried off the field in 1976 by his fellow players after tackling a Georgia Tech player twice his size, he said he was glad he hadn't.

And he didn't quit later in life when he decided he wanted to sell his story to Hollywood.

Ruettiger said he was inspired by movies like "Rocky" and "Hoosiers" and wanted to produce his story because he thought his experiences conveyed a positive message.

"People told me I could never go to Hollywood and sell a movie," Ruettiger said. "I said I have a story. I am sick and tired of the junk they are putting on the screen."

He persisted, and in October of 1993, the movie "Rudy" was put out by Tri-Star pictures.

Ruettiger said he was pleased with the accuracy and the message of the movie.

Brian Boggs, a senior adult fitness major from Raceland, said Ruettiger's message Sunday inspired him.

Boggs said he related to what

Ruettiger said because when he came to college, people told him he wouldn't make it.

"He just inspired me to work that much harder while I am here," Boggs said.

"He brought out that just because you are not the best at something or a superstar, it doesn't mean you won't succeed," Boggs said.

Ruettiger, who got his degree in sociology at Notre Dame in 1976, is now a motivational speaker for Nationwide Speakers Bureau and said he is writing a book. He lives in Juliet, Ill.

Pizza delivery person assaulted at Keene

By Don Perry
News writer

A Papa John's Pizza employee was allegedly attacked after delivering a pizza to one of Eastern's residence halls.

Kevin Eisner said he was leaving Keene Hall Jan. 31 after making a delivery when he was approached by three men, one of whom he said assaulted him.

"I was walking out to my car and he just hit me in the side of the head then ran," Eisner said.

According to Eisner, two of the men ran to the side of the building while the third entered the south side doorway.

Eisner then went inside and called public safety to report the incident.

Eisner said the same three men had confronted him earlier that night when he delivered a pizza to McGregor Hall.

"They were getting in my way when I was trying to leave," Eisner said.

"They were making references like 'you've got a lot of money there' and stuff like that," Eisner said.

Keene Hall night supervisor Bob Richmond told public safety officer Mike Fearing he saw three men who fit the description of the ones who allegedly assaulted Eisner enter the building.

Fearing said he recognized the description of the men as three individuals he had confronted earlier in the Keene Hall parking lot, when he issued a warning to one of the individuals for urinating behind a parked vehicle.

Fearing went to Room 720 of Keene Hall where Eisner identified the residents, Randall Marshall, Edwin Ernest and Mondrego Robinson, as the ones who had confronted him outside the hall.

Eisner said Marshall was the one who had hit him. Marshall was arrested and charged with assault.

Eisner filed charges against Marshall Feb. 3.

"It wasn't that he was a good shot or anything," Eisner said. "It was just the principle that I was working trying to make a buck and this happened."

SCHINDLER'S LIST

■ Spielberg delivers a masterpiece

By Chad Williamson
Arts editor

Whenever you save one life, you save the world.
-The Talmud

Had he been able to be easily explained, Oskar Schindler would surely have been called a hero.

Schindler was an alcoholic and a gambler, a war profiteer, an adulterer and the owner of a slave labor factory.

Yet Schindler risked his own life to save the lives of more than 1,100 Jews during the Holocaust of World War II.

Can a man like this be called a hero?

Steven Spielberg, director of "Schindler's List," never attempts to answer the question because he knows there is no easy answer. He never tries to explain why Schindler, at the height of his wealth, decided to sacrifice his fortune for these lives. He doesn't because he seems aware that no one will ever know the answer.

Schindler is first shown at the aftermath of the German invasion of Poland. Through a combination of charm and bribery, Schindler takes over an enamelware factory in occupied Krakow. He employs Jews, who work cheaper than Polish workers and have begun to feel the hardship the Germans plan for them. Registration of all Jews is mandatory and any who disobey are shot on sight. The thousands are then herded into a closed ghetto of only 16 square blocks.

Schindler, portrayed by Liam Neeson, hires Itzhak Stern, a clever Jewish accountant with connections into the Jewish business world. Stern, played by Ben Kingsley, begins by employing Jews out of the ghetto, knowing that the work also means life for many.

A man at first focused only getting away with a steamer trunk of money.

Schindler begins to alter his view after the "liquidation" of Krakow by the Nazis.

Unforgettable is a simple death scene where soldiers take a one-armed man they decide is useless, so they shoot him in the head. It is basic and terrifying; not like the deaths in "Lethal Weapon" or "Die Hard," but just a man collapsing into the snow and his blood staining the pure white of winter.

It is Spielberg's power to make this one death horrifying, and each death that follows equally as terrible, where the power of the movie lies. Gone are the slick and glossy touches of "E.T." and "Jurassic Park" for a black-and-white, documentary style free of flashy special effects or emotional tugs and pulls.

Spielberg decides instead to present us with this story and to tell it with more intensity and drama, more raw emotion than any film ever before made.

Neeson as Schindler gives the performance that will earn him the title he has long deserved as one of the finest actors in Hollywood. As Schindler, Neeson gives a brilliant performance as a man who was, for all his bravery, an enigma until the very end.

The breakout performance is by Ralph Fiennes as Amon Goeth, the commander of the concentration camp at Krakow. His vision of Goeth as flawed evil, a man who shoots at the Jews from his villa balcony before making his morning coffee, then falls in love with the Jewish girl he takes as his maid, is chilling. He is not pure evil, but instead sadly human, and that makes him all the more horrible.

Never before has 185 minutes ended so quickly. "Schindler's List" is unlike any movie ever made, and unlike any movie that will ever follow. Spielberg has created his stunning masterpiece of poetry and passion and power and pain. Flawless in each scene and performance, it will easily rank as the finest movie ever made.

Toni Hacker plays bass for the Fosters at Phone 3 Lounge.

'Funky country' part of family for the Fosters

By Doug Rapp
Contributing writer

They've gone from being sad men to whispering crickets and now they've become a family.

A family by the name of the Fosters.

The Fosters are a six-piece band comprised of Eastern students Keith Anderson, Lance Yeager, Mark Reyes, Hardy Whitaker, Greg Tackett and UK student Toni Hacker.

The Fosters began two years ago when Whitaker, a sophomore English major, and Anderson, a junior pre-engineering major, formed the Sad Men.

Soon after the pair met Reyes, he was asked to join and the newly formed trio adopted the name the Whisper Crickets.

Eventually, Whitaker moved to Louisville and Anderson and Reyes, a junior art major, continued as the Whisper Crickets and won the WXII-sponsored Acoustic Jam-Off held last semester.

When Whitaker returned from Louisville to rejoin the duo, the members were ready to become a full-fledged band when Hacker, a junior art major, joined the band as a bassist.

Soon after, Yeager, a senior English major, was recruited to play drums and Anderson's longtime friend Tackett, an undeclared freshman, was enlisted to play bongos to broaden the band's acoustic sound.

Anderson describes their music as a simple, folksy sound yet Hacker and Yeager offered more whimsical descriptions, such as "funky country."

The Fosters create a full sound with their three-guitar lineup. Whitaker plays a 12-string acoustic, Anderson plays acoustic rhythm and Reyes plays lead on electric guitar.

Playing at Phone Three Lounge on First Street Tuesday was the band's "first big gig," according to Anderson.

Another upcoming gig for the Fosters will come April 22 when they will play in the Ravine as part of the Earth Day festivities.

"I'd like to see more people coming out to see original bands. If you come see us, you'll have fun," Anderson said.

The Fosters will return to Phone Three Lounge Tuesday at 9 p.m.

Wilson tells Oprah how abuse happens

By Emily Leath
Staff writer

Classic music is on the CD player in her stylish Stratton office. Six full bookshelves hold titles such as "Mothers On Trial," "Accounting for Aggression" and "Pornography & Silence."

Contemporary art and landscape photographs look down from the walls onto her desk.

And there, full of fresh hot coffee, is Dr. Anna Wilson's "Oprah" mug.

Wilson, a professor in Eastern's department of correctional services, appeared as a panelist on the national TV talk show Jan. 20.

She is a recognized authority on women, crime and domestic violence.

The episode, "Women Who Robbed Banks for Their Men," featured four such women from prison via satellite. Wilson was asked why women often follow men into crime.

"These women are from different socio-economic classes and backgrounds and had different reasons for doing what they did," Wilson said. "But these were all women who could not make up their own mind, who went along with what the guy said."

Noting perks, such as free travel, accommodations and limousine service, Wilson said being on "Oprah" was a good experience.

"She's probably the most pleasant of the talk show hosts. You can tell the people who work for her really think she's a neat person."

She said she knew what she would be asked but, "I never really knew when she was going to come talk to me. When she finally did, I couldn't help thinking, 'Oh I'm not going to make any sense.' But everything came out fine!"

Wilson's knowledge and involvement in the field not only got her selected for the show but qualifies her to serve as an expert witness in court cases.

While teaching at Washington State University and working as a therapist, she was asked to do a case evaluation for an attorney.

Currently, she is the only recognized authority in Kentucky for such cases.

"One reason I think I have credibility with the courts is that I don't care if a woman says she's battered," Wilson said. "I'm going to do an evaluation and really look for psychological and physical evidence. The courts know that and respect it."

Wilson deserves the respect, considering she was one of the leaders of the movement to investigate domestic violence which began in the late 1970s.

While at Washington State University, she taught the first family violence class.

She also wrote some of the first articles on domestic violence.

For the future, Wilson plans to shift her emphasis to focus more on race, gender and social class relationships.

"You get to thinking everyone is abused and every parent beats their kids. Seeing it every day is real depressing."

The Red Cross, out for Eastern's blood

By Mary Ann Lawrence Activities editor

What if someone you love was injured in an automobile accident and needed a blood transfusion to live?

"Most people would donate their own blood for a family member in a time of need, but by then it will be too late," said Jackie Schank, service representative for the Louisville Area Chapter of the Red Cross.

The Red Cross hopes to get 510 units of blood out of Eastern students in a two-day effort to raise students' consciousness about donating blood.

The event will be held from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 15-16, in the Keen Johnson Ballroom. WKQQ 98.1 will be broadcasting live and there will be food, T-shirts and prizes given away.

"One whole blood donation can serve up to four people," Schank said. "Blood has to be available to us at any time whether or not we donate," said Carla Arnold, a public relations major at Eastern and volunteer public relations chair for this year's blood drive.

The Louisville Red Cross Blood Region supplies blood to 61 hospitals in 64 counties. Last year, 418 units of blood were donated in Eastern's blood drive.

According to the Red Cross, 6 percent of the population give blood on a regular basis; 16 percent donate once a year; but 78 percent never donate. Arnold believes many people do not donate because they are afraid of being infected with the HIV virus.

"Giving blood is safe," Arnold said. "A sterile needle is used for each donor and then immediately discarded."

"The fear of getting AIDS has killed the blood supply," Schank said. "There is no way — no way — that you can get AIDS from giving blood."

Many people do not donate simply because they never have and they don't know if they can.

"We just don't educate enough when it comes to blood donations," Schank said. "People fear the unknown and you can't overcome that."

"All blood used in our hospitals is voluntarily donated by people like you," Arnold said. "There is no other source, and it is a gift of life that only you can give."

Donors may give if they have not given blood in eight weeks, are in good health, weigh at least 110 pounds and are at least 17 years of age.

Any questions about whether or not you can give blood can be answered by calling 1-800-732-8772.

Work is well underway for the Alumni Annual Fund phone-a-thon.

The phone-a-thon is an annual fund raiser coordinated by the alumni house.

For the last 10 years, groups from all across campus have donated their time and services for one night out of the five-week event.

The groups show up at 6 p.m. and eat a chili supper provided by the Alumni Association. At 6:30, Doug Cornett, coordinator of the Alumni Fund, gives a brief training session to familiarize the participants with the proper phone procedures. The actual phoning begins around 7 p.m. and continues until 9:25.

At the end of the night, totals are tallied and recorded. The groups compete to raise the most donations. The winning group receives a plaque to be hung in the Powell Building in addition to a letter from the university president and a picture sent to the individual group's national headquarters.

Phone-A-Thon Schedule

- Tonight: Music Department
Sunday, Feb. 13: Kappa Alpha Theta
Monday, Feb. 14: Alpha Delta Pi
Tuesday, Feb. 15: Alpha Delta Pi
Wednesday, Feb. 16: Lambda Sigma

"We couldn't do it without the help of the students," said Cornett. "All the groups do really well. The biggest thing is having people show up."

Last year, the phone-a-thon raised $149,000. This year's goal is $145,000. So far, the groups have raised over $24,000 in only six days.

Alumni contributors receive a membership in the Alumni Association for one year and a card that entitles them to use Eastern's facilities.

The money raised by the phone-a-thon goes all over the university, such as the Alumni Scholarship, homecoming, Eastern Today, a newsletter that goes out to the alumni, and sometimes, the individual contributors designate that their donation go to the department that they graduated from.

So far, the Student Alumni Ambassadors have raised the most money, $4,605. Pi Kappa Alpha is immediately behind with $4,600 and Sigma Chi rounds out the top three with $4,182.

The softball team has raised an impressive $3,815 and the Mortar Board has tallied $3,705. Beta Theta Pi finishes off the groups who have participated as of press time with $3,345.

Lady Colonels climb to top of OVC

Equity will be death of football

It has become brutally obvious to me in the past six months that a great American tradition is about to cease.

A great pastime, which most of the entire male population holds dear to its heart, spanning over a century and containing the names of some the greatest sports legends of all time, looks as though it is coming to an end.

Knut Rockne, George Halas, Johnny Unitas, Jim Brown and Vince Lombardi are the first of thousands of legendary players and coaches who pop into my mind.

Their kind will be only a thing of the past, sadly, sooner than I or any other football fan would like to think about or ever expected.

Thank you, gender equity, you cruel and ugly monster, for threatening to ruin a great American tradition.

First of all, football is a sport all its own.

It is played professionally in two countries, the United States and Canada, but originated here.

It is played only by men: on the collegiate and pro level. There is no women's sport equivalent, and no women's college football period.

It is 11 skilled men on offense against 11 skilled men on defense. It is so brutal and rough that there are injuries more often than in any other sport.

It takes lots and lots of players to make up a team. There are three distinct teams on a football squad: offense, defense and special teams.

Of course, there are the 22 starting players on offense and defense, and their backups, which makes 44 players already.

With the injury rate of the sport being so high, it is necessary that there be a third string also.

So college football takes up 65 scholarships minimum, which is what is allowed at the I-AA level.

The funding and the scholarships for women's sports programs at most any college is equivalent to the men's, except for football. The reason is that there is no sport that can offset the number of players on a football team.

So when gender equity comes along demanding that the funding be equal for men's and women's sports.

Who gets left out?

Well, first a couple of scholarships are shaved from each men's program and, of course, that won't be enough. Then, in a few years college football gets gutted to make the two sports programs equal.

And thus comes the death of the sport. And without the football programs across the nation supporting their athletic programs, the entire college sports system will slow and come to an end, as we know them.

Because the football team is a separate entity with no women's equivalent, it may come to an end. Soon.

College football as we know it will die first in Division III, then II, I-AA, and finally overtake Division I like the bubonic plague did Europe.

Morehead State has already proposed non-scholarship football for 1998.

This looks as though it will be the first step toward my prediction.

And who is going to watch these non-scholarship games? I am afraid no one will.

When the Lady Colonels' basketball team swept a pair of road games this past weekend at Murray State and Southeast Missouri State, it captured more than just two wins.

It also moved into a first place tie in the Ohio Valley Conference standings with Middle Tennessee State and Tennessee State at 8-2.

"These were two really, really big wins," Lady Colonel coach Larry Joe Inman said. "To come away with those two wins was great."

The Lady Colonels forged to the top of the OVC on Monday with an 83-67 victory over Southeast Missouri State, who was "probably the hottest team in the league," Inman said.

Eastern was able to pick up the victory by playing well on both ends of the court.

"We played very well offensively as well as defensively. We had a good inside game and outside game," Inman said.

"We played probably the best team defense we've played all year," he said.

The Lady Colonels also had their "most balanced scoring game all year."

Junior guard Kim Mays led the balanced attack with 16 points and also dished out seven assists.

A pair of Lady Colonels, junior guard Maisha Thomas and freshman center Kim Cunningham, followed Mays with 14 each while senior center Shannah McIntosh and freshman forward Jerilyn Cushing netted 13 a piece.

The double figure scoring was rounded out by Stephanie Davis, who tossed in 11 for the victors.

Although team defense and balanced scoring played an important role in the victory, the Lady Colonels also "executed great" and "rebounded real well," Inman said.

"We played with a lot of poise," assistant coach Edward Stepp said.

Eastern jumped out to a 42-27 lead at halftime en route to its 82-58 win over Murray on Saturday.

Mays led the Lady Colonels in scoring with her game high 23 and was followed by Cunningham's 21. Freshman forward Lisa Fussell added nine.

Thomas pulled down 10 rebounds against both the Racers and SEMO.

Now Eastern will prepare for a pair of home games this weekend, playing host to Austin Peay on Saturday and co-conference leader Tennessee State on Sunday.

With the OVC tournament set to begin in three weeks, every game will be very big for Eastern.

"Every game we play now is for the OVC Championship," Inman said. "Every game is of the utmost importance."

Eastern splits pair of OVC road games

By Lanny Brannock

Southeast Missouri State must have felt like its hands were tied Monday night when the Eastern Kentucky Colonels rolled into Show-Me Center in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Eastern (11-10, 7-4 OVC) limited the Indians (8-12, 3-8 OVC) to 42.3 shooting from the field and 9.5 percent from behind the three-point line in an 84-75 victory.

And it seemed that the Indians were in a giving mood, allowing the Colonels 32 chances from the free throw line. The Colonels made 28 of the charity tosses while the Indians had to stand and watch the shots rain in, frowning at their good deeds.

Eastern coach Mike Calhoun, however, was not impressed with his team's performance from the line.

"That should happen. Good shooters will have good results," Calhoun said.

One of Eastern's best shooters had the night of his career.

Sophomore point guard Brad Divine poured in 20 points on 4-6 shooting from three-point land, and 8-8 from the free throw line, and played the entire game.

"I just feel real good right now. They know if I'm hitting they may give me another glance or two, but we are just looking for each other," Divine said.

Junior guard Arlando Johnson led all scorers with 21 points, going 11-12 from the line.

Calhoun said that the game plan was to win the four-minute intervals between the television time-outs.

"We came out strong that way and won most of the four-minute periods," Divine said.

The Colonels' biggest problem on the road was their rebounding. In two games against SEMO and OVC leader Murray State, Eastern was out-rebounded 108-62.

"We were enormously out-rebounded. We changed our defense and switched up some things. They (Murray) shot 39 percent, so you give up some things to get some things," Calhoun said.

Saturday, the Colonels were within two possessions of upsetting OVC leader Murray State at Racer Arena in front of a sell-out crowd of 5,500.

Sophomore guard Brad Divine goes up for a shot against Morehead State last week. Divine had a career high 20 points Monday in the Colonels win over SEMO.

Johnson's attempt to tie the game in the final minute of the game failed and Murray put the win away with a shot with two ticks left on the clock.

The Racers pulled down 27 offensive boards during the contest, while the Colonels mustered 33 total.

Track team competes at Indiana

By Matt McCarty
Assistant sports editor

Forty-eight teams and 1,200 athletes turned out last weekend in Bloomington, Ind., where Eastern competed at the Indiana Invitational.

Eastern track and field coach Rick Erdmann felt both the men and women ran well.

"Our men ran very competitive and our women overall ran very well," Erdmann said.

Eastern's men's 4x880 relay team won with a time of 7:49.21. The men's 4x400 relay team was victorious with a time of 3:16.89.

The men also had a good showing in the 400-meter dash, as Arnold Payne won the event with a time of 48.34 and Leon Pullen finished third in a time of 49.30.

Eastern's final first place finish came in the women's 800-meter run with Michelle Price taking top honors with a time of 2:17.

The men's distance medley relay team captured second place with a time of 10:06.66 while the women took third place with a time of 12:04.81 in this event.

In the men's invitational mile, Tim Menoher finished fourth with a time of 4:11.74.

Stephanie Chaney ran the women's invitational mile in a time of 5:02.94 to finish fourth while teammate Sunshine Wilson finished seventh with a time of 5:04.6.

Candi Estes ran the 200-meter dash in a time of 25.01 to finish fourth, and Robin Lawhorn finished 10th in the seeded 3,000-meter run with a time of 10:34.5.

Ken O'Shea ran a time of 15:09.1 to finish sixth in the seeded 5,000-meter run, and John Nguno finished ninth in a time of 15:19.6.

In the men's 55-meter hurdles, Dennis Toole finished seventh with a time of 7.57 while Tiffany Mayfield placed seventh in the high jump with a mark of 1.65.

Eastern serves up two wins

Lady Colonels top Morehead 9-0

By Janeen Miracle
Staff writer

Two out of three "ain't" bad to the women's tennis team, which took victories over Morehead and Akron in the three matches it opened its season with this weekend.

The Lady Colonels defeated Akron 7-2, and Morehead 9-0 but lost when Ball State defeated them in the last match 6-3.

"We really had our chances to win against Ball State," said Tom Higgins, the women's tennis coach. "But I had to take out our No. 3 player, Amy Scott."

Three other players were sitting out of the matches due to injuries.

"Considering that we were pretty deep into our reserves, we played well," Higgins said.

Scott said she had been having pain in the lower part of her right leg.

Because she and the coach were afraid she would risk injuring herself badly, she didn't play in any of the singles contests against Ball State Saturday.

"On Saturday, when I was playing singles it started hurting quite a bit because you have to cover so much more court when you play singles," Scott said.

"I kept thinking about how I didn't want to jeopardize myself because we have a whole season left, so he pulled me out."

On Friday's match against Morehead, Eastern won all of its singles and doubles contests in the match.

No. 1 seed Ann Carlson defeated Gabby Selekta 6-0, 6-0, and Amy Scott, who plays No. 2 and No. 3, won against Andrea Duguid 6-2, 6-3.

In doubles, No. 1 seeds Scott and Liz Gosnell defeated Selekta and Duguid 6-1, 6-0, and No. 2 seeds Carlson and Joanne Gossens defeated Amy Gussett and Michele Ford 6-2, 6-2.

In the match against Akron, Eastern won four of its singles contests and all of its doubles contests.

No. 2 seed Kim Weis defeated Colleen Hollowell 6-3, 6-3 while Jenni McGinnis, the No. 5 seed, defeated Natalie Fate 6-0, 6-0. Gosnell defeated Tina Shermack 6-0, 6-0.

In the doubles contests, Carlson and Weis defeated Janet Slaynasky and Colleen Hollowell 6-4, 6-3 and Scott and Gosnell defeated Deidre Engle and Leslie Wargo 6-4, 6-2.

Eastern won two of its singles contests against Ball State and one doubles contest.

Weis, who usually is the No. 2 seed, played in the No. 1 spot for the Ball State match, winning all of her singles and doubles matches. Weis defeated Lisa Drewitt 6-2, 6-0 and No. 2 seed Carlson defeated Lori Hill 6-2, 6-2.

Carlson and Weis defeated Drewitt and Hill 6-2, 5-7, 6-3 in their doubles match.

"I was really psyched up," Weis said. "We had a great doubles match."

Higgins said the biggest thing the team players need to work on is their serves. Overall Higgins said there was a good effort from the team members.

Scott said she thought the team was aggressive and that Eastern kept the ball in deep and in play more than the teams they defeated.

"I think we have a lot of potential," Scott said. "I think we have a great chance to have an excellent year. I hope we can keep all of our injuries out of the picture."

Weis said the team had a lot of depth and that the lineup of players was strong from top to bottom.

"We need to keep our same intensity level and go out there and give it 100 percent," Weis said.

"We have our sights set on winning the OVC and having a lot of fun along the way."

Nothing foreign about tennis for Nichols

By Stacy Battles
Staff writer

An athlete's adjustment to his/her first year of collegiate sports can be tough, but being new to the country can make it even more difficult.

Freshman tennis team member, Olivia Nichols, 18, began playing tennis in her hometown of Salisbury, England, when she was 12 years old.

Nichols continued to pursue her favorite sport in high school and was part of a national championship team.

Nichols chose Eastern because she preferred a rural atmosphere where she could get adjusted to college life easier.

"I really love to play tennis; I'm not here just because of the scholarships," Nichols said. "I wanted to come to America."

Upon her arrival last August, Nichols was suffering from an arm injury which hindered her playing ability.

She has recovered and is playing at the third and fourth seed positions.

Nichols describes her experience so far as "really good, I love it here!"

Nichols credits her sense of ambition to her father.

"He's always taught me to do my best and has supported me in whatever I've wanted to do," Nichols said.

Teammate Kim Weis, a junior occupational therapy major, describes Nichols' court play as "very focused and consistent."

"She's added a lot of depth to our team," Weis said. "She's got a great personality and she's completely a part of the team."

Teammate Nicola Oakley, an undeclared freshman, agrees with Weis.

"She's not loud on the court, but you always know she's there," Oakley said. "She strengthens the top spots. She's really good fun to be with."

If professional tennis is not an option, Nichols will be content with pursuing a career in advertising or sports information.

Nichols' interests off the court include making crafts, cooking, running, outdoor activities and spending time with her friends.

"My main goal in tennis is to reach my full potential, and I hope that Eastern can help me do that," Nichols said.
