Vehicle break-ins continue on campus

By Joe Castle
 Assistant news editor

Brian Marshall didn't have a very good night last Wednesday. According to police reports, Marshall was driving around Lancaster Lot around 1 a.m. and "acting suspicious." Marshall was parking his car, looking into other cars and moving from place to place until he made the mistake of looking into a campus police car—with Cadet Officer Stephen Gibbons inside.

According to the police report of the incident, Marshall gave Cox permission to search his vehicle, and the officer discovered several items "matching reported stolen items from vehicles on campus and tools possibly used to break into vehicles."

The search also revealed broken glass particles "in the floorboards and around the tools with no damage observed on Marshall's vehicle."

Cox also discovered a small flashlight and a .22-caliber derringer in Marshall's jacket.

Marshall was arrested and charged with carrying a concealed deadly weapon. He spent the rest of the night in the Brewer Building and the Madison County Detention Center.

For Marshall, the night ended unfavorably.

Car break-ins and vandalism are a

Gov.'s mark anticipated on board bill

By Clint Riley
 Editor

A bill supporting Gov. Brereton Jones' attempt to help rid Kentucky's publicly-funded university boards of politics by taking the governor's sole board selection power away is expected to get his signature today or Friday. The new law would purge the current board members July 1.

Despite Jones' call for change, he said he plans to fill 20 vacancies on those boards under the old law before the July purge and creation of a screening process for board members.

Under the current law, Jones could opt to leave the 20 board members whose terms expire before July 1 in their seats instead of replacing them. Eastern board chairman Jim Gilbert and board members Walter May and Marilyn Hacker are among the 20 board members who could be replaced or reappointed by Jones before July 1.

After July 1, however, Jones and governors who follow him will have to appoint each board member from a list of three nominees approved by a seven-member selection committee appointed by the governor. In addition, at least half of the current board members must be reappointed by Jones once the new law is applied.

The bill's legislative sponsor, Rep. Ernesto Scorsone, D-Lexington, said after his legislation cleared the House Friday for the second time he is not

Four faculty campaign for regent seat

By Joe Castle
 Assistant news editor

The campaign to find a successor for faculty regent Karl Kuhn began Tuesday when four candidates for the position presented their platforms at a forum held in the Faculty Dining Room in the Powell Building.

Kuhn, whose term ends March 31, will be replaced by either Richard Freed, John Jenkins, Marijo LeVan or Ward Wright.

The Faculty Regent position will not be affected by a new law that would purge university board members appointed by the governor.

Freed, an English professor since 1979, said he is a "student-focused" instructor.

"My one concern is what is best for the students at Eastern," he said. "I'm never afraid to put forth something."

Political clubs rounding up students for coming elections

By George Roberts
 Staff writer

As state and national politics begin to heat up, so, too, is the ice melting around two partisan campus groups.

The Young Democrats and the College Republicans are plotting their strategy and planning their election year activities with their eyes on November.

Carol Jordan, assistant professor of business, is currently assisting and advising the Young Democrats in their efforts to emerge from nearly three years of university hibernation.

Jordan, who also served as adviser when the group was last active, said the Young Democrats would be active in Lexington Mayor Scotty Baesler's campaign for Congress, in addition to other state and national issues.

One of the main reasons her group is so supportive of Baesler, Jordan said, is his concern for women's reproductive rights.

"Reproductive rights, including the right to an abortion, are extremely important to us, and Mayor Baesler thinks something needs to be done about it at the congressional level to ensure them," she said.

The Young Democrats currently have 15 members among their ranks.

On the other side of the political aisle, the College Republicans are focusing primarily on economic issues, adviser Steve Parsons said.

"Most Republicans, especially students in our group, are looking for long term solutions to our economic troubles, whether they blame them on

A bill that would require state colleges and universities to report an annual self-evaluation of goals and standards was passed by the state Senate yesterday.

Sen. Ed Ford, D-Cynthiana, introduced the bill that asks colleges and universities to provide information in 14 areas including level of quality, enrollment and graduation rates by race, gender and disability, pass rates on professional examinations and remedial course enrollment.

"What it does is outline university goals," Ford said. "I think people will be pleased to find out that higher edu-education is doing a good job."

The schools will gather the information from samples of graduates, employees, parents of students and university records. The gathered data will be reported to the council on higher education, then shared with the governor and legislators.

Col. Marlowe: Mascot at work

By Tom Marshall
 Managing editor

Just over two years ago, Matt Marlowe was slammed to the floor in a basketball game against rival Morehead State University at McBrayer Arena.

It was a pride-buster for the 5-foot-8 inch, 145-pound then-sophomore, but now, as a senior, he's getting a little respect on the court.

He's currently ranked second in the nation, but the national title and a spot in professional sports are within his reach.

As a mascot, that is.

"There's always that chance you make it to the major leagues," Marlowe said.

Universal Cheerleading Association judged him second among the top four mascots from cheerleading squads throughout the country based on videotaped performances sent in by the contestants.

Although Marlowe ranked second with his highlight film, the title is still open and will be decided after live performances by the four finalists at the College Cheerleading National Championships April 9-13 in San Antonio.

"Anybody can win," Marlowe said. "It's still up for grabs to win the whole thing."

Mascots from the University of Alabama-Birmingham, Virginia Tech and the University of Dayton also qualified for the showdown in Texas, which will be shown on a delayed telecast by ESPN.

For Marlowe, 21, making the cut was a welcome surprise. One he didn't expect.

"Actually, I was just crossing my fingers to make it to a ranking in the top 10," Marlowe said. "I couldn't believe it."

Cheerleader Chuck Marksbury tried to put Marlowe's accomplishment into perspective.

"I think it's how he relates to people," Marksbury said. "He's one of the crowd."

Marlowe has his eyes focused on a professional mascot career and has former Eastern football player Danny Copeland's agent making some inquiries for him.

He's optimistic of gaining a job as a mascot in minor league baseball, but he still plans to graduate with his degree in organizational communications next December.

A pro career, however, is his true desire, he said.

"That's my No. 1 career goal right now," Marlowe said. Early on, the job was not so easy for the soft-spoken Marlowe, who recalled his first basketball game.

The Morehead basketball team and its eagle mascot came to Richmond. Marlowe recognized the eagle as a former wrestler he had competed with in high school. The pair joked around and began to playfully wrestle near midcourt, he said.

"This guy was wrestling for the Olympics or something because he slammed me on the floor at home," Marlowe said.

As a result of the eagle's abrasive moves, Marlowe's

Give up some change

Staff salaries over $50,000 should be cut

When Gov. Brereton Jones announced his budget proposal to the state legislature Feb. 6 he made some bold moves and some not-so-pretty cutbacks.

Among those cutbacks he proposed was a 5 percent slash of funding for state universities. Community colleges fared better, netting identical funding in 1993 and a 3 percent slip in funding in 1994.

The governor did make big commitments to education reform, parks and recreation and health care. For this, we offer a tip of the hat.

But Jones further proposed a 2 percent cut for salaries of state employees who make more than $50,000 beginning July 1. Our university, among others, will also have to face a second 5 percent cut within only months of the first.

He also invited participation in this salary cut by other officials, such as university administrators, not directly covered by the state personnel system.

For university president Hanly Funderburk that would mean a cut of more than $2,400 from his paycheck, which will amount to $122,300 for 1991-92. For the executive assistant to the president, Charles Whitlock, it could add up to a loss of more than $1,300 of his 1991-92 salary of $67,032.

John Rowlett, vice president for academic affairs and research will make $97,599 in 1991-92. He could expect to lose a chunk of cash in the vicinity of $1,900.

Administrators making more than $50,000 can make a difference in the pending lack of funds by accepting the cuts in their salaries, but will they allow their salaries to be cut to further their educational goals?

Higher education, it seems, is not such a high priority, or is it? It's as if Jones is asking them to put their money where their mouths are.

Among the items university deans mentioned for potential cutting are development funds, travel, renovation, operating expenses and sabbaticals—and a reduction in the number of part-time instructors at the university.

Deans also said copying may be cut to a minimum, meaning more copied material will be charged to students at the bookstore.

AT A GLANCE

The Issue
The budget crisis for universities and a voluntary 2 percent pay cut for university employees making over $50,000.

Our opinion
Those university staff making over $50,000 should accept a pay cut.

It would seem that with salaries in excess of $50,000 the administrators would be willing to spare the money for these professors to make a few copies.

In addition, we ask that all university employees making above $50,000 accept the cut for education's sake. We ask that they show us, not just tell us.

Legislators also have a say in this proposal and we encourage them to demand more money for higher education this session. Asking the universities to endure a 10 percent loss in funding within months is too much for any organization to take.

There are three branches of government and the legislative sits alongside the executive in power with the ability to check and balance the other two branches.

It's time for the legislature to check the governor's proposed cut in higher education spending—and maybe loosen the belt a little.

It is all Greek to Greeks

Insurance companies are ending "New System"

A year ago this week we were in the process of examining the evolution of the Greek system and where it was heading.

One year later, indicators are pointing the Greek system in a direction that may mean the demise of the system as it is now structured.

Sharply increasing liability insurance rates for fraternities and sororities are the backbone of the Greek system's current troubles.

With each passing year, insurance companies are demanding fraternities and sororities put a shorter leash on the social activities of their members, while continuing to increase rates.

The Greek system at Eastern and other universities answer to the insurance companies' beckoning with little more than a whimper.

Because of the Fraternity Insurance Purchasing Group (FIPG), a plan that over 75 percent of the nation's Greek organizations follow, some Greeks argue they are having some basic freedoms taken away because they wear letters.

Nationwide, Greek leaders say it is nonsense and preach of a "New System" that will replace the "Animal House" partying image with a much more clean-cut look that emphasizes philanthropic projects and cultural diversity.

Greek leaders, however, are sugar-coating what the insurance companies are doing, either in an attempt to keep their masses content or because they do not understand what is happening themselves.

Miles away from Kentucky, there are several lobbying groups who are working to rid our nation's campuses of Greek organizations because they consider them a threat, even under the "New System." They seem to be succeeding by continuing to push up the price of liability insurance.

One of those groups is Security on Campus. This lobbying group not only has the ears of many legislators, but also those of some powerful insurance company executives.

The group's founder, Howard Clery, predicts the Greek system will be eradicated in the next five years as a result of pressure his group and others are putting on insurance companies.

Lobbying groups are forcing Greek organizations to pass tighter standards and price increases on to their chapters, and the chapters on to their membership.

Across the country, a few Greeks have become so discontent with the rules passed down to them that they have taken their parties underground to avoid being sanctioned.

Others may soon follow if the rules continue to get stricter.

Some Greek chapters may choose to go underground to avoid not only the tough rules but the high cost of insurance. Unfortunately, once in hiding, some chapters may just forget the charitable work and cultural diversity of the "New System" that were held out to the rest of society as a purpose for their existence.

This move to a more covert mode could be a major draw for potential members who are unwilling each semester to pay hundreds of dollars to have their individual freedoms taken away by the "New System."

If Greek leaders continue to ignore what is happening to them and fail to stand up to the insurance companies soon, the "New System" will fail just as Communism did.

AT A GLANCE

The Issue
The failure of the current Greek system because of rising insurance rates.

Our Opinion
Greek leaders must address the insurance issue seriously or the "New System" will fail like Communism did.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Columnist off-base about gays in service

We are Gays and Lesbians United for Education, a group at the University of Kentucky. Although our group primarily is organized to serve UK students, staff and faculty, we also have quite a few visiting members from ECU and other neighboring schools. Our ECU members recently brought to our attention an editorial by Clint Riley in the Jan. 16, 1992, and asked us to respond as a group in the absence of a similar organization at ECU. (We might add that ECU is the only major university in Kentucky without a lesbian-gay-bisexuals and gay males organization.)

Mr. Riley discusses the ban on homosexuals in the military and the increasing controversy on college campuses over this discrimination and its effects on campus ROTC programs. Although Mr. Riley brings out several good points as to the Department of Defense's (DOD) position on this issue, he fails to examine their position in full. Indeed, the DOD has long rationalized its position on the homophile ban by viewing people who enter into same sex relationships as security risks and impairments to the military's mission. A recent Pentagon report stated that gay military personnel out-performed their heterosexual counterparts. The personnel studied were lesbians who were later forced out of the military. At first, the DOD attempted to suppress this study until forced to publicly release it at the behest of U.S. Sen. Barney Frank, who is gay.

Moreover, the DOD report concludes that lesbian people are not a security risk as they do not possess some secret capable of being used against them in a homophobic society. Thus, in the view of performance and security, a person's sexual orientation whether hetero, bi or homo should not be an issue in the defense of our country.

Apparently, the Pentagon thinks so, too, in times of war. During the Persian Gulf War, known lesbian military personnel were given active duty while also informed that they would be discharged once the war was over. This is especially true for lesbians.

Clearly, the DOD's policy has no proven rational basis and is therefore based on a fear channeled into legal discrimination. On many campuses throughout our nation, concerned individuals of all sexual orientations are focusing on ROTC programs as the most blatant form of homophobic discrimination on campuses. The real target is not the ROTC, but the DOD's policy. Unlike Mr. Riley's conclusion, many Americans feel that fear of losing a campus ROTC is not sufficient cause to tacitly support discrimination. Earlier in this century, would Mr. Riley have decided that it was OK to ban African-Americans from certain organizations because of the possible economic backlash? By Mr. Riley's analysis, slavery would still exist due to the dire economic affects of abolition on the Southern economy.

Rehiring of pres. without reasoning

Scottish poet Robert Burns once wrote, "The best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft agley." The statement seems to describe well what has happened to the good intentions of the legislature when it enacted laws which mandated the forming of the governing boards of Kentucky's institutions of higher education. It is worthy to note here that recent actions by you, the Board of Regents, are manifestations of the purpose of Rep. Scorsone's bill which would alter the selection process of those governing boards.

It should come as no surprise that critical thinking is the ultimate goal of any educational system and that critical thinking leads to sound judgements based on rational standards instead of the junk-heap of unwarranted conclusions which you have recently displayed.

At your last meeting you extended President Funderburk's contract. The published reasoning was something like, "It seems that he is doing a good job." This raises the question, what is a good job?

Making a judgement implies measuring against a standard. Your decision to extend President Funderburk's contract was without standard - it was supercilious.

While, in your opinion, President Funderburk may "seem to be doing a good job," has his administration furthered the processes or goals of better education in Kentucky? Many say no. It is as if he has only fostered the idea of administration as an end in itself instead of a means to support the educational process. During President Funderburk's tenure as president of Eastern the rolls of administrative personnel have swollen while the teaching core has barely kept up with the increased student enrollment. There is now on the administrative payroll a president, vice president, dean or chairperson for every 120 to 130 students, or one for every five to six faculty. On the other hand, classes of 60 to 70 are not out of the norm.

As Wendell Berry said, "Education can only occur between and individual teacher and an individual student. If education in Kentucky is poor, that can only mean that a sizable number of individual teachers are not teaching well and a sizable number of students are not learning well."

Why is that?
One reason is obvious. You, the current Board of Regents and those regents before you have been so grossly unqualified that you have failed to oversee a president who has surrounded himself with such of cadre of "yes" persons that the administration has become top-heavy and Eastern Kentucky University, as an educational institution, is crumbling under the weight of its own support.

Lasting friendships tough, but true love never easy

One day, my friend, we shall walk hand in hand and face adversity together.

Will you stand by me through it all?

I will stand by you. Will you overlook my hand-caps?

I will overlook yours. Will you forgive me when if I sin?

I will forgive you. And will you accept me as I am? I will accept you.

Struggles to survive in this desolate world have left most forgetting the value of friendship.

It was Francis Bacon, the English philosopher, essayist and statesman, who said, "The worst solitude is to be destitute of sincere friendship."

I have not forgot the value of friendship nor am I without it.

To me, friendship is an understanding between two individuals who rely on one another for support and companionship.

Friends must be unbiased, yet opinionated and flexible, yet critical.

It is true, friendship requires a lot of work.

Amy Etmans

My turn

No one said it was easy. No one said it would be hard either.

To be without companionship would mean one would sacrifice friendship for depression, hate for love.

The apathy of secluded individuals overwhelms me.

How can they go through life and not know the joy of having someone to talk to, someone who loves you for being you.

My view on friendship is best summed up by Ralph Waldo Emerson, a philosopher, essayist and poet, who said, "The only reward of virtue is virtue; the only way to have a friend is to be one."

Long-lasting friendships that survive the tests of time are the most genuine.

I have kept in contact with my childhood friends and still consider them my best friends.

We have been through everything together, good and bad.

We are all so different, yet the same.

I don't take them for granted, yet they are always there.

And even though we don't talk every day, I know that 20 years from now, our relationship will be as strong as ever.

My advice is to not let prejudices cloud your judgement. They only hinder society's advancement.

I am not perfect, nor do I profess to be so. But conforming to other person's beliefs even if you don't agree with them is wrong.

Peer pressure conformity is wrong. Never compromise yourself for the benefit of someone else.

True friends never ask that of you. They should never expect you to change your opinions or disposition.

There are still many people I have yet to meet. There are several adventures yet to be taken.

There is a whole world out there to discover and a whole world of new relationships to encounter.

I cannot wait to begin.

Family Dog owner appeals license suspension

Progress staff report

The Family Dog/Top Dog bar will have its malt and liquor license suspended by the state Alcohol Beverage Control board for 10 days if an appeal by the bar's owner fails. Marshall Robinson III, owner of the bar, appealed the suspension, scheduled for next week, and a new trial date has not been set. Peter Flaherty, Alcohol Beverage Control administrator, found the bar guilty of violating state and local regulations Oct. 3 when an employee served alcohol to a minor who was believed to be over 21. According to the report, the bartender testified that on prior occasions the minor had displayed a black stamp, which is given to patrons over 21. Flaherty's report also said that on Oct. 3 the minor had "partially removed" the red stamp received at the door by minors entering the bar. The bartender further testified the busy atmosphere at the bar contributed to not seeing the minor's proof of age. Robinson and his wife, Jean, said the bartender was fired when the violation occurred but was later rehired after the bartender explained the incident, the report said. Robinson was summoned to appear before Flaherty in January. The Oct. 3 incident is the bar's third violation within the last year, which gives Robinson no option of paying a fine in place of the suspension.

SENATE: School bill passes 33-2

"This is to give us a better idea of exactly what is happening in our colleges," Ford said. "This in no way is a means to compare one university to another. It's an opportunity for them to tell us what we're getting for our funding dollars."

The bill will help outline statewide and individual goals for higher education. If passed, the goals will be concrete in December 1994.

Most of the information the bill asks is already being reported by colleges and universities, Ford said, and if the bill is passed, all institutions would report the same information in the same format.

The university already publishes much of the data requested in the bill, said Jim Clark, director of planning and budget. Most of the data comes from the university's enrollment reports.

The council has a data system that gives it access to university graduation rates and similar data supplied by colleges and universities. The council can work with school administrators to provide any other facts required under the bill, said Gary Cox, executive director of the State Council on Higher Education.

Once the information is gathered, it will be used by the council as a means of accounting for progress at colleges and universities.

"The information will tell campuses how they're doing from a taxpayer's point of view," Cox said. "I believe we (higher education) have to be willing to share information about what we're doing with the public if we want to get more funding. This is a step in that direction."

Former Gov. to address economics, education

Progress staff report

Former Gov. Martha Layne Collins will visit the university to introduce Executive-In-Residence, a new program in the business college.

Collins will speak on economic development and education reform next Tuesday in Room 100 of the Burrier Building from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. Her presentation will be followed by a question and answer session.

Collins was chosen to kickoff the program because of her success in politics and interest in getting business into Kentucky while she was governor, said Dr. Phyllis Gump, assistant professor in the business college.

"We were trying to find someone who is an interesting speaker and made contributions... and could show them to students and faculty," said James Fisher, external affairs coordinator of the business college.

The Executive-In-Residence program will begin an effort by the business college to bring business notables from the region to the university to speak about popular business topics like international trade, business ethics and business technology.

CAR: Break-ins continue to plague public safety; campus lots

constant source of problems for students with cars on campus, and vehicle thefts on campus have been on the rise in recent years.

According to police reports, between Jan. 23 and Feb. 12 of this year, 18 cars were vandalized or broken into on campus.

Sgt. Dan Ferguson of the Division of Public Safety said there were only three vehicles stolen on campus in 1990, but the figure jumped to 11 vehicles in 1991.

Seven of the automobiles stolen last year were four-wheel drive sport/utility vehicles, Ferguson said.

"We have a lot of active chop shops in the area; one particular one is in Laurel County," he said. "Arrests have been made, but we believe it's still operating or other people have taken up where they left off."

Ferguson said although he hasn't noticed an increase in the number of break-ins recently, the crime is still there.

Thieves will take anything, Ferguson said.

"All kinds of things get stolen," he said, "but stereo equipment is the main target."

Brandon Rader, an 18-year-old freshman from Van Lear, said he bought a pull-out receiver for his truck before he even came to the university because his friends and relatives told him about the car break-ins and thefts on campus.

"I just wanted to keep from losing the money I was going to invest, so I couldn't see buying a regular deck," Rader said. "I always take my stereo and tapes out of my truck when I park. It's just common sense."

Although stereos are the most frequently stolen items, Ferguson said thieves will take anything easily removed from the car.

If your car is broken into or stolen, report it as soon as possible, Ferguson said, because within a few days stolen merchandise can already be untraceable.

To help reduce campus crime, public safety is going to begin publishing a monthly newsletter called Campus Watch.

The newsletter will feature information about protection from car theft and vandalism as well as other campus crimes and problems like rape and alcohol abuse.

MASCOT: Marlowe takes second place in competition

face was cut.

"It hurt my pride a lot," he said. Although Marlowe's job may appear to be all fun and games, in reality, he must maintain his physical condition for performances.

As "The Colonel" mascot, he said he loses between seven to 10 pounds a game. His work comes in keeping the 145 pounds on his frame.

"I drink a lot of weight gainer," he said.

He wears a turtleneck and sweatpants under the mascot suit to soak up perspiration.

"I can wring the sweat out of it after the game," Marlowe said.

During a typical game, Marlowe can be seen talking with children, doing pyramids with cheerleaders, mocking fans and aggravating opponents. Fans often spot him near midcourt tossing up over-the-back shots during breaks in the action.

"Usually it falls once during a game," he said. "That seems to be a big crowd pleaser."

When he was originally asked in December 1989 to audition for the mascot position, Marlowe balked at the idea. Once he changed his mind, tried out and secured the position, he had to deal with his slightly skeptical father back home in Danville.

"My dad is really old-fashioned," Marlowe said. "I had to convince him I wasn't a cheerleader at first."

He met with his share of jokes from friends and family, but that's behind him now.

Being on the road can offer a few problems for the man in a maroon suit with a white beard. Fans can make life that much tougher.

"There's been a lot of times where people have thrown stuff from the stands at him," Marksberry said. "He has to be real careful."

While on the road, Marlowe said he tries to watch his step—literally.

"You have to be careful not to stumble into the wrong crowd, especially an opposing team's crowd," Marlowe said.

Marlowe's job is to be an attention getter, and he relishes the role.

"I like the job," Marlowe said. "I like being the center of attention. If your doing a job you like, that's half the battle."

Being the focus of people's eyes is something Marlowe has always craved and he make no qualms about it.

"I was always the class clown trying to make people laugh," he said.

He brings his sense of humor to his personal life, too.

"I've never really seen him serious, to be honest," Marksberry said.

Although a professional mascot job may be in Marlowe's future, for now he is intent on focusing on his current status.

"Hopefully, I'll be able to say I'm tops in the nation," Marlowe said.

FORUM: Nominees for faculty regent speak

Freed said the most important challenge facing the Board of Regents is improving the quality of education at Eastern.

Jenkins, who has been in the industrial education and technology department since 1970, said he only wants to see the faculty represented.

"There may be a need for a change of administrators in the next few years," Jenkins said, "and these administrators are high enough that the Board of Regents will need to get involved."

LeVan, a professor in the mathematics, statistics and computer science department since 1969, said the biggest problem the board will have to deal with is the shrinking budget.

"Obviously, money is going to be the primary problem in the next few years," LeVan said.

Wright, a nine-year veteran of the business administration department, said the faculty regent should be the most influential member of the board.

"I'm totally in favor of open enrollment," Wright, a 63-year-old Richmond resident, said.

The faculty regent is the university staff's representative on the 10-member Board of Regents.

BILL: Board purge would take effect July 1

bothered that Jones will use the system he urged legislators to remove.

Scorsone said a big enough spotlight has been shined on Jones and the university board appointment issue to prevent the governor from even attempting to appoint people based on their political alliance to him.

"His administration would look poorly if he put anything less than very quality people in those board positions," Scorsone said.

But some legislators see a bigger problem with the bill itself.

The final version of House Bill 149 received numerous additions by the Senate before it passed the General Assembly's final vote in the House 63-32 Friday. Among the changes by the Senate was a provision in the bill that all university boards be made up of a membership which represents Kentucky's 2 1/2 to 1 ratio of Democrats to Republicans.

"Political affiliation should have nothing to do with sitting on a board of higher education," Eastern's Gilbert said. "It should have to do with merit."

Scorsone said the argument over the political makeup of the board does not take away from the bill's overall impact. He said the 2 1/2 to 1 provision was included in the bill as a compromise.

"I don't care for it at all," he said. "Realistically, if we tried to delete it, the Republicans would scream bloody murder we were leaving them out."

Gilbert said even though the bill may have flaws, university boards are better off under the new system.

When Gilbert joined Eastern's board in November 1988 he said he was given a stack of papers to read and a tour of campus as preparation.

Scorsone's bill requires new board members receive an orientation program that includes information on the university's mission, budget, plans, policies, strengths and weaknesses.

Gilbert said this gives much-needed addition to the governing process of the state's universities.

Eastern President Hanly Funderburk said he is pleased with the legislature's final result but, like Gilbert and Scorsone, is waiting for results from the new law.

"The structure we have is a model for other states," Scorsone said. "The true test will be in how it is implemented."

VOTE: Groups plan membership drive efforts

our Republican president our Democratic Congress," Parsons, area coordinator for Palmer and Commonwealth halls, said.

The College Republicans group on campus, which is affiliated with the national College Republicans, will also be conducting a voter registration drive in Madison County, in an effort to achieve a Republican edge on campus, Parsons said.

In state politics, Parsons said his group was shying away from races and issues, due largely to Larry Hopkins' ill-fated gubernatorial run as a Republican candidate.

Both Jordan and Parsons said their respective groups will campaign for their party's nominee for president. Though Jordan expressed no particular preference for a Democratic candidate, Parsons said he hoped President Bush will be nominated for re-election.

The College Republicans currently have 21 members.

Jackson rape trial to begin Monday

Progress staff report

University sophomore Todd Jamel Jackson pleaded not guilty to an amended charge of first-degree sexual abuse Feb. 6 in Madison Circuit Court. A Madison grand jury lessened the charge Jan. 22 from first-degree rape to sexual abuse.

Jackson, 20, was charged with the rape Oct. 23 after his 18-year-old former girlfriend told campus police he had raped her in Gifford Theater in the Campbell Building.

If convicted of the sexual abuse charge, Jackson could face one to five years in prison instead of 10 to 20 years for the original charge of first-degree rape.

Jackson's trial is scheduled to begin Monday in Madison Circuit Court.

Out of the frying pan, into the # FIRE

Progress illustration by C.A. METZ

Because of the recessed job market, graduating students often find themselves dishing it up at restaurants instead of finding a job in their chosen field of study.

Job crunch forces grads to spice up resumes

By Mark White
Staff writer

College graduates face the "tightest (job) market they've faced since the early '80s," said Art Harvey, university director of Career Development and Placement.

The recessed job market has been reflected in the job recruiters that have visited Eastern's campus.

Visitation by job recruiters last semester was down 15 percent from the previous semester, and some other places in the country were down 40 percent, Harvey said.

"We are continually hearing about companies that are either down-sizing or in some cases laying off. Some of these jobs are not just being laid off, they are being phased out. Unfortunately, a lot of the jobs that have come into play are service oriented jobs, and in some cases are not paying very well," he said.

Jolee Christman, a 20-year-old marketing major from Union, said, "I think they are taking away more jobs than they need to. For example, they are closing down corporations and moving them out of the country. Producing things in a different area because their wages are lower. They are closing them down here in the U.S."

Harvey suggests that students start getting prepared for the job search at least a year before graduation.

Focusing

Students can better their chances of finding a job while in college by focusing on their areas of interest, strengthening their interviewing skills, attending seminars on the job start process and regional job fairs, putting together samples of their work, and taking advantage of campus interviews that come up.

Lisa Helton, a 22-year-old social work major from Barboursville, said, "You basically need to specialize. I think you need to go into a major that is not general any more. So many people major in broad subjects they overrun the job market. I think the way to go is to specialize in on a specific area."

Harvey suggests students can often enhance their chances by picking up a foreign language, a computer course, and

Tips for job hunting

- Remember that the interviewer is looking for an excuse to reject your application. Make sure that you have provided all of the requested information.
- Don't be wishy-washy. If you want the job, make sure that they don't forget your name or face. Make follow-up calls, but don't become a nuisance.
- Be prepared to explain why you are the best person for the job. Don't expect the resume to do the work for you. The interview is probably more important.
- Consider whether or not you would be willing to relocate. If there is a job in your field, there is a good chance that you may need to move to it.

by taking a speech class.

"I have no doubt that the economy will come back around. Historically it has been cyclical and come out," Harvey said.

Many students blame the job market outlook on the recession.

"Bush can do something to create more jobs. All these layoffs are useless. Our president can do something about it to boost the economy," said Harry Dent, a 19-year-old English major from Frankfort.

"The economy does affect the amount of dollar offered," Harvey said. "When there's lots of candidates, job offers don't go up as high. When there are fewer candidates and more jobs, job offers tend to go up."

Some hope

A job field with a particularly good outlook is health care.

Harvey said that one reason this field is so strong is because of the aging population of American citizens.

Average job offers in the field of health care for bachelor's degree candidates increased over the period of Sept. 1990 to Sept. 1991 by a dollar amount of 6.15 percent, according to a report by College Placement Council.

Linn Medlin, a 19-year-old occupational therapy major from Corbin, sees his chances of finding a job as hopeful.

"I will just fill out applications anywhere I can. They are in demand right now," Medlin said.

"As tight as the job market is right now, it is extremely important that people not only apply for positions, but actually compete for positions," Harvey said. "Applicants should compete rather than apply. Too many people hear about a job and send in a generic resume with a generic letter. It is about as exciting to that personnel director as walking down to the mailbox and getting a piece of occupant mail."

Competition

Harvey said job applicants should take the initiative and find out who in particular to send the letters to, and to tailor that letter toward the person.

"Take your time, and word it, and make sure it is neat. The job you really want somebody else really wants to," Harvey said.

Harvey said employers are usually looking at a potential employee's study skills, time management skills, cultural diversity, experience and leadership potential. They are also seeking people who are participants and not just passive observers, he said.

"The more areas you have an interest in, the better it is going to serve you," Harvey said.

Harvey said that employers are also increasingly looking for employees who can communicate effectively.

Writing skills including the ability to form memos, reports and year-end summaries, as well as oral communication skills, are important.

Flexibility

Harvey said applicants may also consider the need to be geographically flexible in order to increase their chances of finding a job.

"In the immediate future, the job market is going to be hard. They have to spend that much more time getting ready for it," Harvey said. "When you have an increased population in certain parts of the country like Florida, all logic tells you they are going to need more people in services like teaching. Right now we hear that because of reduced revenues, they are going to have to be laying off teachers."

"Need is not the only variable. Resources are also a variable," Harvey said. "We see more and more that employers are having to find more cost effective ways to recruit."

Resumes

A service that CD&P is recommending for students is Resume Expert.

It assists students in writing a resume and puts them on a national database.

The CD&P office registers approximately 1,000 students and 1,200 alumni per year. Harvey said that CD&P is switching to Resume Expert for its job referrals.

Resume Expert is available for $25 through CD&P.

It works by having students enter their information on a disk.

The data is then entered into the database in the CDP office.

"Employers may not come here to interview, but they can have quick access to our candidates via a computer disk. That will allow us to assist employers who have never recruited at ECU," Harvey said.

"We know that it will save students money in the long run, and in many cases the short-run. We know students have paid a lot more than that to have someone prepare a resume," he said. "The job search is a job in itself."

Goodbye classes; hello unemployment?

By Christina Rankin
Staff writer

Many college students fantasize of the day when graduation arrives and they find their dream job.

For college students today, that dream job may be a delusion.

Due to the recession, students and graduates are finding it more difficult to get a job in their field of study.

Bill Zornes, an employee of the Department of Employment Services in Richmond, said employees currently in the work force are staying put because they are hesitant to shuffle jobs in such an unsteady market.

"There are a lot less jobs. There's not as much turnover," he said.

There are some jobs, though, that are actually seeking workers, said Zornes.

"There's a lot more demand, even in factories, for people with computer-related experience. Jobs are becoming very automated and computerized. Good math skills and computer experience are very helpful," he said.

Zornes added that he has noticed that employers are oftentimes more eager to hire an employee who is skilled in several areas.

"A lot of employers look at people and how they can crossover from possibly one field to another very quickly," he said.

But for graduates, the opportunity for employment following graduation is more grim than ever. Zornes said some students are turning to unemployment services for help.

A person may qualify for employment services by coming in and registering through an application. They explain their work history and what type of job they are searching for.

"They really give us an idea of what they want us to contact them about. The employer gives us a job, a job description, what he's going to pay and his requirements. We go through our files and then we call people," Zornes said.

He said they don't offer the applicant a job, but instead "refer them to the employer, and the employer goes into the more detail descriptions."

The Department of Employment Services does not place a requirement on applicants, and there is no fee.

For more information, call the Department of Employment Services on Gibson Lane at 624-2564.

Movie review

Psychological thriller stirs desire, deception

By Melissa Thomas
Staff writer

Put greed, lust, anxiety and murder together and the result is a suspense-thriller called "Final Analysis." This R-rated shocker promises to be one of the best movies of the year.

"Final Analysis" combines deception and romance to produce a delicious mixture of betrayal and self-indulgence.

The film's credentials are impressive, including three big-name stars—Richard Gere, Kim Basinger and Uma Thurman.

Richard Gere, whose credits include the 1990 smash hit "Pretty Woman," stars as Dr. Barr, a psychologist with a taste for a dangerously beautiful woman.

Kim Basinger, renowned for her role as Vicki Vale in the 1989 blockbuster "Batman," stars as Heather Evans, wife of a gangster and sister of Diana, a psychotic.

Uma Thurman, who gained attention through her role in "Dangerous Liaisons," stars as Diana, a half-crazed, sexual psychotic and patient of Dr. Barr.

The plot of "Final Analysis" focuses on a scheme of steamy seduction and deception which ultimately ends in destruction.

The story line is full of dramatic twists and turns, taking viewers on a roller coaster ride through two hours of fast-paced, chilling suspense.

In the opening scene, Dr. Barr is listening attentively as Diana describes the recurring bizarre dream that plagues her.

In an attempt to evaluate Diana better, Barr contacts her sister, Heather. The resulting meeting ends in a night of unbridled passion.

As the affair continues, the plot thickens and situations portrayed in the beginning of the movie are quickly revealed to be untrue.

Barr turns out to be a fighter who is perfectly capable of playing the game of deception. Heather evolves into a villainess capable of striking fear into all who are subjected to her wrath.

And Diana, rather than being a defenseless lamb, is revealed as a hungry lioness who will stop at no lengths to obtain what she desires.

Excitement reigns supreme in this movie. As soon as the events begin to slow down, another shocking discovery is made which serves to revive the tumultuous action of the film.

The conclusion is an unexpected role reversal, with Diana taking the whole scheme over. She not only deceives Barr, but her sister as well.

Phil Joanou directs this Wesley Strick screenplay, which is from a story by Robert Berger and Strick. Joanou's credits include the rock documentary "U2-Rattle and Hum."

The production designer is Dean Tavoularis, who won an Oscar for the second of the three "Godfather" films.

The film editor is Thom Noble, who also won an Oscar for the film "Witness."

Jordan Cronenweth, Oscar nominee for "Peggy Sue Got Married," is the director of the film's photography, the intensity of which is superb. The action shots achieve an almost 3-D effect, making the viewer cringe at times.

The score is composed by George Fenton, a triple Oscar nominee for his work on "Gandhi," "Cry Freedom" and "Dangerous Liaisons."

"Final Analysis" is a scorching psychoanalytic thriller. The conclusion leaves viewers dangling, with no clear-cut ending to hold on to.

If you enjoy movies which leave you running different scenarios through your mind for hours after you've seen it, "Final Analysis" is a definite must.

Rugby: Overseas competition

By Brian D. Bishop and Amy M. Etmans

How would you like to travel to New Zealand this summer?

Four Eastern rugby players will have the opportunity to do so when they go on tour with a team composed of other rugby players from the mid-South.

Dan Acker, Chris Edling, Rob Richardson and Kevin Crump are members of a team assembled by Vanderbilt University's rugby coach Joe Franklin.

The team will venture across the country and then overseas to compete with some of the most competitive rugby teams from around the world.

Acker, a senior occupational therapy major from Richmond, is recovering from injuries sustained during the Feb. 1 game against Vanderbilt.

Acker said a pinched nerve is not going to hinder him from competing with the team.

"I didn't get the death penalty," Acker said. "The temptation to play in New Zealand is just too great."

The team is composed of players from the Southeastern Conference, Southwestern Conference and other smaller schools like Eastern, Acker said.

The team, called Mid-South Union, made its debut this month in a New Orleans tournament. In May they will travel to Nashville for another tournament.

The tour will continue June 2 in Nashville and then on to Los Angeles.

On June 6 the team will fly to Auckland, New Zealand, where they will compete in a tournament and spend some vacation time.

"It's gonna be a fantastic experience because rugby is the No. 1 sport over there," Acker said.

From Auckland, the team has scheduled stops in other parts of New Zealand such as Wanganui, Wellington and Napier.

They will return to the United States on June 19.

Progress photo by C.A. METZ

Four of Eastern's rugby players will travel to New Zealand this summer to compete with international teams.

Eastern's players joined the team after Franklin sent Acker a letter telling him about the team and asking for quality players, Acker said.

"It's a great honor to be selected for this team. It's the chance of a lifetime," said Edling, a senior nursing major from Middletown, Ohio.

"I've been working out really hard for this trip, swimming and running a lot because I want to represent America well," said Crump, a senior earth science major from Richmond.

Acker said this trip is the equivalent of a New Zealand football team coming to the United States to play.

"This team was chosen to be competitive with these guys," Acker said.

"It's an honor to get to go and play rugby where the competition will be twice that it is in the United States. I think I will learn a lot," said Richardson, a senior police administration major from Lima, Ohio.

Controversy has plagued Acker since the Vanderbilt game. Most of the comments made to him have been out of concern for his health. Acker assured his family and friends he will take care of himself.

He will not play on the rugby team for the rest of the semester. Instead, he will help coach the men's and women's teams.

Acker will focus all his energy for the tournaments in New Zealand.

But will he return next fall to play on the team?

"In all probability for the sake of all people concerned, I will not play next fall," Acker said. "Chances are the last time I walk off the rugby field will be in New Zealand."

In terms of liability insurance for intramural sports, Acker said that the team must be sanctioned by the NCAA before the university will pay for it.

"It's a play at your own risk sport," Acker said.

Wayne Jennings, director of the division of intramural programs, said that each member of an intramural sport must sign a liability release stating that they have their own health insurance.

The rugby team practices at 3:30 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday.

Anyone interested in playing rugby can contact rugby club president Todd Ilie at 622-5769.

Students to study Irish literature, lore

Progress staff report

Students wanting an education outside the classroom might be interested in traveling to Ireland this summer.

Dr. Joe Flory, director of the International office and an English professor, will be taking a group of students to Dublin, Ireland, to study Irish literature from May 18 to June 1.

Flory proposed the Irish study program to accommodate students who need to work during the summer.

"I wanted ECU students to have a study abroad program short enough to allow students to work in the summer."

Flory said traveling abroad is "an education beyond books."

The schedule in Dublin will allow students to travel every afternoon following morning classes and chartered buses will take students on two one-day trips.

Dublin is famous for being a literary city. Students will visit the new Writer's Museum that features the works of Ireland's famous writers.

Weekend trips include visiting the ruins of a sixth century monastery and touring castles and famous mansions.

Students will experience a different culture, different food and will look at the world from a different point of view.

Flory invites all interested students to contact the International office at Keith 140, 622-1478 by March 1.

New environmental club wants to educate campus

By Christina Rankin
Staff writer

Students who have an interest in environmental issues are hoping to increase environmental awareness in the university community through the Sierra Club.

Celeste Vachon, a sophomore environmental resources major from Isle of Palms, S.C., and founder of the Sierra Club, started the club this year after being impressed with a newsletter the national Sierra Club sent her.

Vachon wanted to form a branch of the organization at Eastern.

She was dissatisfied with other organizations she had been involved in because of their lack of results.

"You send money to national organizations and you don't hear anything else. With the Sierra Club, you can see the results immediately."

"I was looking for something to get done. They didn't do all the things I wanted to do," she said.

The Sierra Club hopes to expand the recycling program at Eastern to include tin cans, cardboard paper, regular bond paper, newspapers, glass and plastic. Members also want to get people to recycle more aluminum.

They are interested in doing a forest watch at the Daniel Boone National Forest.

Vachon said, "We keep forest service on their toes. We see if they do the things they're supposed to do."

Sierra Club members also want to sponsor a stream watch at Silver Creek, as well as hiking, camping, biking and canoeing trips.

forum to discuss the activities and agenda of the Kentucky Legislature presently in session in Frankfort. Representative Harry Moberly will be the guest speaker. The discussion will be open to the public.

FACES IN THE CROWD

Donnie Mergard

Age: 22

Hometown: Park Hills, Ky.

Classification: Junior

Major: Public relations

Activities: Active sponsor of children with Down's Syndrome and a NASCAR race car driver.

Pet Peeve: Someone who is rude and think they know everything.

Most Admired Person: His father. "He carved a path for me to follow. He makes everything happen for me. I wouldn't be doing anything without him."

Face Facts

Mergard has been racing since October 1990. He became involved with Down's Syndrome children from Charlotte, N.C., in March 1991.

The children have become his honorary crew members.

"I love to put a smile on their faces and give them a chance to do something that they otherwise wouldn't have a chance to do," Mergard said.

Mergard is proud to say that his commitment to the children is "an ongoing thing."

"I want to promote them. I love the children. And I want to give them a chance to come out and get people to donate money for their organization."

Mergard hopes one day to promote better relations between NASCAR and Down's Syndrome children.

He wants the relationship he shares with the Down's Syndrome children to become a nationwide project.

In fact, next year Mergard wants to hold a chili cookout charity fundraiser to get the community out to meet the children and get donations to help their plight.

"Faces in the Crowd" is compiled by Activities editor Amy Etmans to spotlight members of the university community who volunteer their time to help others. If you know someone whose face should appear here, call Amy at 622-1872 or write her at 117 Donovan Annex.

Goals: Mergard's top priority is graduating. He would then like to go to the top in NASCAR racing.

We're looking for seniors who like working with all kinds of hardware.

Careers in data processing, accounting, actuarial, and auditing at State Farm.

At State Farm, we understand the concept of "work." Believe it or not, we also understand the concept of "play."

That's because we don't think you can be really outstanding at the first without having an appreciation for the second. Which is exactly why a career at State Farm in Bloomington could be the ideal place for you.

You'll work for one of the country's most respected companies on the most advanced computer equipment in the industry. You'll be challenged and stimulated. You'll be rewarded with excellent pay and benefits. You'll make your classmates very envious.

What's more, you'll also have time to appreciate the finer things in life. That's because Bloomington isn't just a great place to start a career, it's a great place to live, to enjoy, to start a family (if, indeed, you're ready to start thinking about that). In addition to the community's pleasant neighborhoods, inviting parks, and other recreational facilities, you'll find two universities that offer a host of cultural and social activities to take advantage of.

If you're a senior with a math, accounting, data processing, or computer science background, come talk to us at your college placement office. We're looking for people who are motivated and outgoing. People who enjoy challenges on the job — and away from it. After all, you're not just looking for a great job. You're looking for a great way of life.

Colonels seize two more OVC wins

Jerry Pennington

Instant replay

Women's hoops can be as exciting as men's

If anyone tried to tell me that women's basketball can never be as exciting as men's basketball, I would have to disagree.

The Lady Colonels' Feb. 8 game against the Lady Raiders of Middle Tennessee State University was one of the most exciting basketball games I have ever witnessed, men's or women's.

The action actually started before the game. Eastern and Middle were tied for second in the OVC with two losses each.

The Lady Colonels were also seeking revenge, because when they visited Middle earlier in the season, they were defeated by the Lady Raiders.

In the opening minutes of the game, the Lady Colonels fought their way to an 11-point lead, but Middle quickly bounced back by bombing some three-pointers.

It was obvious just by watching that both teams were giving it their all.

The Lady Colonels had lead the whole game, but Middle kept hacking away at their lead.

With their last bucket in the first half, the Lady Raiders claimed their first lead of the game.

To add to the excitement, a minor controversy broke out at halftime.

Just as the buzzer sounded, the referee blew the whistle indicating a foul on the Lady Colonels. The referee determined that the foul was committed after the buzzer and did not count.

This quickly brought the Middle Tennessee coaches off the bench in a shouting frenzy.

Despite the shouts and protests of the coaches and players, the referee stuck to his original call and the Lady Colonels left the floor at the half down by a point.

The referees of the game, along with an enthusiastic crowd, added more excitement.

The crowd screamed and howled at the officials, not because of unfair calls, but because of lack of calls. The referees were letting too much contact go by without a whistle.

Both fans and coaches were loudly voicing their opinions of the way the game was being officiated.

The second half of the game was even more thrilling than the first.

This time it was Middle Tennessee who lead most of the half, but their lead never exceeded five points.

Eastern managed to tie the game five times in the second half, but never managed to get another lead until only two and a half minutes remained.

Segena Mackeroy made an inside shot to put the Lady Colonels back on top.

Shannah McIntosh and Tiffany Mayfield both added buckets to the Lady Colonel lead, putting them up by five with only a minute and a half left in the game and putting Middle Tennessee out of reach.

Watching the coaches and players jump and shout for joy at the end of the game highlighted the Lady Colonel victory.

They had played and fought so hard to win, and the price of their hard work had paid off.

This was definitely one game in which the fans got their money's worth.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL: Eastern is still in second place in the OVC behind Tennessee Tech. Here are the standings:

1. Tennessee Tech.....10-1
2. Eastern Kentucky.....10-2
3. Middle Tennessee.....8-4
4. Southeast Missouri.....6-6
5. Murray State.....5-8
6. Morehead State.....4-8
7. Tennessee State.....3-8
8. Austin Peay.....1-11

BASEBALL: In their season opener at Clemson, S.C., the Colonels dropped both games of a double-header to the Tigers of Clemson University.

Eastern lost 7-0 in the first game and 22-0 in the second. Joe Vogelgesang was the losing pitcher in the first game, and Johnathan Wiggins was credited with the loss in the second.

The Colonels play their next game at the Mercer University Invitational Tournament in Macon Ga., on Feb. 28. Their first home game is against the University of Louisville on March 11.

VOLLEYBALL: Eastern's volleyball coach Geri Polvino announced the signing of three high school volleyball stars to play for the Lady Colonels next semester.

Emily Leath, a 5-foot-7 setter from Carmel, Ind., will provide depth to the position next year. Leath was an Academic All-State last season and was twice a unanimous choice for All-Conference from Carmel High School.

Laura Shafer, a 5-foot-4 setter from Windsor High School in Windsor, Ill., will also be joining the Lady Colonels next season. Shafer was twice selected as an All-Conference member and once to the Illinois All-State team.

The third of the new members is Serena Cunningham, a junior college transfer from Southwestern Michigan Junior College in Dowagiac, Mich.

The Colonels used three convincing wins this week to boost their record to 15-12 overall and 7-4 in the Ohio Valley Conference.

Eastern 87, Austin Peay 75
In the final home game of the season, Eastern used a 57-point second half to blast past Austin Peay 87-75 on Monday.

Senior Mike Smith became the 21st Eastern player to score over the 1,000 point career mark, on a lay-up with 6:15 remaining in the game. Smith led the Colonels with 19 points and 21 rebounds. That rebounding performance left Smith just 31 rebounds shy of becoming Eastern's all-time rebound leader.

Eastern led wire to wire, with senior Jamie Ross scoring 18 points and pulling down six rebounds. Eastern and Austin Peay both had five players score in double figures.

The Colonels opened up a 10-point lead with 6:23 remaining in the first half on a Smith hook shot from the middle of the lane.

Austin Peay came storming back late in the first half out-scoring the Colonels 14-6 in the last 6:05 to make the halftime score 30-28.

Eastern dominated the second half, using a 7-0 run with five points from Dwayne Crittendon to extend their lead to 12 points, their biggest at that point.

After Austin Peay closed the lead down to two points, Eastern used an 8-0 run from 7:40 to 6:03 to give Eastern a 15-point advantage. The Governors never recovered and resorted to fouling to try to get back into the game.

Eastern converted seven out of its last 10 foul shots to put the game away. A Ross slam with :35 left in the game gave Eastern its biggest lead, 16 points.

John Allen scored 13 points and had seven rebounds for the Colonels. Arlando Johnson scored 11 points and eight assists, and Toi Bell had 10 points for the Colonels.

Eastern 83, Southeast Missouri State 69

Mike Smith set career highs with 23 points and 22 rebounds as Eastern avenged an earlier loss at Southeast Missouri.

Eastern led only 15-14 with 9:56 left in the first half, but then out-scored the Indians 27-7 for the remainder of the half.

An 11-0 run for the Colonels was fueled by two Mike Smith dunks. Another 7-0 run was the result of Eastern free throws, helping the Colonels take a 42-21 halftime lead.

Southeast Missouri closed the gap to 12 points with 2:35 to play but never got closer as Eastern held on for the win.

Smith's rebounding performance pushed him to number two on Eastern's all-time rebounding list with 891.

John Allen scored 12 points and pulled down six rebounds for the Colonels, while Arlando Johnson scored 11 for Eastern with four assists.

Eastern 80, UNC-Greensboro 60
John Allen led the Colonels with 21 points in an 80-60 win at Greensboro last Tuesday night.

Eastern went on a 17-0 run early in the second half to put the game away in the teams largest road victory of the year.

The Colonels led 37-27 at the half, but UNC-Greensboro scored the first seven points of the second half to move within 37-34 with 17:50 remaining. After a timeout the Colonels scored 17 straight points.

Eastern lead 54-34 on a three pointer by Allen with 11:20 remaining. The Colonels' lead got as high as 26-points, but never dropped below 16-points after that point.

Kirk Greathouse added 14 points and Jamie Ross 11 points to go with Allen's 21.

Eastern has compiled a 25-3 record at McBrayer Arena over the past two seasons.

Lady Colonels claim 10th OVC victory

By Jerry Pennington
Sports editor

After a pair of home wins, the Lady Colonels of Eastern Kentucky University are still running a close second in the race for the Ohio Valley Conference title.

The Lady Colonels downed South-east Missouri State University and Austin Peay University to give them a 10-2 OVC record, 18-6 overall, and put them just a half a game behind 10-1 Tennessee Tech University.

Eastern 78, Southeast Missouri 59

The Otahkians of Southeast Missouri wanted to come into McBrayer and put the Lady Colonels further behind Tech with a loss, but Eastern wasn't about to let that happen.

Southeast Missouri stayed with the Lady Colonels until 7:31 was left in the first half when Eastern went on a devastating 17-0 run to give them a 36-17 lead.

The Otahkians fought back with a 6-0 run just before the half, making the score 40-25.

In the second half, the Lady Colonels added to their lead.

A pair of freethrows by junior center-forward Jarce Goodin with 8:34 left gave Eastern its biggest lead, 62-40.

The two teams traded baskets for the rest of the game, which wasn't enough for Southeast Missouri, as they ended up losing by 19.

Goodin lead the Lady Colonels in scoring with 22, followed by senior All-American candidate Angie Cox with 18.

Eastern 81, Austin Peay 63

The Lady Gobs of Austin Peay University scored a jumper about four minutes into the game to give them their only lead of 6-4, but from there on it was Lady Colonels' ball game.

A 10-0 run beginning with a Segena Mackeroy tip in with just under five minutes left in the half set the Lady Colonels on their way to a win.

Eastern took its 13-point halftime lead and continued to stretch it out in the second half.

With 7:43 left in the game, Cox hit a three-pointer to give the Lady Colonels their biggest lead of the game, 65-45.

The Lady Gobs fought back, but Eastern went on to match its 20-point lead two more times, and ended up winning by a margin of 18 points.

The leading scorer of the game was Cox who finished with 21 points and was five for eight from three point range.

On Monday, Feb. 24, the Lady Colonels will travel to Cookeville, Tenn., to get a crack at conference leaders Tennessee Tech.

University golf team opens spring season

By David Richardson
Contributing writer

The Colonels opened their season this past weekend in Aiken, S.C. They finished fifth out of 18 teams, shooting 321 on the first day and 305 on the second day for a total of 626.

Augusta College won the tournament with a score of 595.

Even though the golf team's fall season was cut short due to the budget cutbacks, their outlook on this spring season is still very high.

"I feel that the team was affected more mentally than physically," coach Lew Smither said. "We were so much looking forward to the next two tournaments and then we they just cut us off, but all in all I feel the team has taken it quite well."

Smither said that events like this have an effect on his recruiting as well. "These kids didn't choose Eastern for the education," he said. "They came here to play golf and we didn't give them that option, and events like this cause them to second guess coming to Eastern at all."

"This team is potentially the best Eastern has ever sent out on the course," Smither said. "The ball is now in their court and they have to decide what they want to do with it."

The team shares the aspirations of their coach. "I feel we have the experience to be a competitive team," said team captain Clay Hamrick. "As far as I am concerned we are as good as any team out there."

He also said that he felt that due to the cuts the team would probably take longer to get into the "swing of things."

Chris Lewis, a senior from Irvine, has clear goals for this season's team. "We expect to win the OVC tournament, make the NCAA regionals and hopefully the NCAA finals in June," Lewis said.

Indoor track team sweeps West Virginia Invitational

By Ted Schultz
Contributing writer

Although the university track teams do not have an indoor facility in which to train, they are making the most of their opportunities to run indoors.

Saturday, the Colonels swept the 10-team West Virginia Invitational, as both the men's and women's teams came away victorious.

"I think we're getting a little bit better at indoor track, considering the fact that we don't have an indoor track to train on," Coach Rick Erdmann said. "We've been fortunate enough to have some good weather so we could train outdoors a little bit."

Senior David Hawes was the only winner for the men. He won the 3,000 meters in 8:26.9, less than a second ahead of teammate Tim Menhoer.

Dennis Toole placed second in the 55 hurdles (7.43). Jeff Urquhart finished second in the 500 (1:05.8) and Andrew Page was second in the 400 (50.40). The Colonels' mile relay team took second in 3:18.8.

On the women's side, Nicole Embry won the 200 (25.73) and was second in the 55 (7.05). Amy Flint easily captured the 800 in 2:17.6. Tamiko Powell won the 400 (57.55) and Marjonia Howard took the 55 hurdles (8.66).

"I thought, overall, we competed pretty well," Erdmann said. "Some of the events, we were real pleased with. Some of the women had their best performances of the season."

New baseball captains elected

By Brian Bishop
Staff writer

No sports team is complete unless it has leaders, people to take command and make the team the best it can be.

This year, the Colonels have elected Joe Vogelgesang, Jim Richmond and Jay Johnson to be the 1992 captains for the baseball squad.

Johnson is a senior business administration major from Davenport, Iowa, and plays second base.

Baseball coach Jim Ward described Johnson as a quality player with outstanding leadership abilities.

"He is highly motivated and commands respect," Ward said.

Johnson was elected All OVC and Academic All American both his sophomore and junior years.

Richmond, a junior majoring in corrections, played high school baseball at Oak Hills High School, just outside Cincinnati.

Richmond came to Eastern because of the winning tradition and because

"Being a captain helped me be more focused on being a leader."

-Joe Vogelgesang

he wanted to play Division I baseball.

Richmond is honored to represent the Colonels as captain.

"I think the biggest part of being captain is leadership," Richmond said. "You work hard day in and day out to win respect."

Ward describes Richmond as an excellent player who gives his best every practice.

"He's a great example to the young players," Ward said.

Vogelgesang, a business major from Harrison, Ohio, is the Colonels' most experienced pitcher.

"He is a role model for our young pitching staff," Ward said.

Vogelgesang came to Eastern because of the tradition and the coach. "Coach Ward is awesome," he said.

He said that playing at Eastern has been a great experience for him and there is a future here.

The quality teams that the Colonels play can get him the experience he needs.

Vogelgesang said that his most disappointing time at Eastern was when the OVC lost its automatic bid to the NCAA tournament after the budget cutbacks. But he is ready for the challenge of being a captain.

"Being a captain helped me be more focused on being a leader," Vogelgesang said. "I'm gonna have to be a leader. I like the extra pressure."

"The captains are well respected and provide great leadership," Johnson said.

The team holds its first home game of the season on March 11 against the University of Louisville.

Women's tennis team fares well in tourney

Progress staff report

The competition was tough, but Ann Carlson and Kim Weis of Eastern's women's tennis team emerged as two of the winners of last weekend's Indoor Invitational held at the Greg Adams Tennis Center.

Carlson and Weis defeated Eastern Michigan University in the final round of the No. 1 doubles bracket, 6-2; 4-6; 6-1.

Although none of the other Eastern players finished in the winner's bracket, coach Sandy Martin was pleased with their performance.

"There really weren't any weak teams in the tournament," Martin said. "All in all, it was a good tournament with tough competition."

Another player who performed well for Eastern was Heidi Kallestad.

She lost her first round match, but came back in the second round to beat Tennessee Tech University's No. 1 seed in three sets, 7-5; 5-7; 7-5.

In a consolation game in the final round she lost a tough match against West Virginia University's Carrie King.

"She played well, but just didn't win the most important points," Martin said.

Other teams to compete in the tournament included Toledo University, University of Louisville and Southern Illinois University.

Louisville's Julie Guess won the No. 1 singles, while West Virginia's Nicole Fiber won the No. 2 singles.

No. 3 singles went to Southern Illinois' Leesa Joseph.

Winners of the No. 2 doubles went to West Virginia University and Southern Illinois University won the No. 3 doubles.

Martin said that this semester's team is a talented one.

"We have the talent to finish in the top two in the conference," Martin said. "Overall, I feel really good about this weekend."
