The Alumnus Editorial Board is pleased to initiate a new feature with this issue. This is the first in a regular series of columns in which President J.C. Powell will communicate directly with the University's alumni on matters that affect our Alma Mater.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

I am very pleased to be invited to initiate in this issue of the Eastern Alumnus a column through which I will pass on to Eastern graduates information on matters of significance to their Alma Mater. While alumni support has always been important to us, we are now in an era in which the support and interest of loyal alumni, knowledgeable in the activities and needs of Eastern, is crucial to our ability to achieve the level of quality to which we all aspire.

As you read this, it is likely that the 1984 Kentucky General Assembly is in session. Contrary to the situation that existed during the 1982 session, this time the public universities of the Commonwealth and the Council on Higher Education are on common ground. During the past two years, the institutions and the Council have developed a formula and a formula-use policy that address both adequacy of funding and equity in allocating funds — issues on which consensus was not reached in 1982.

While each of the University presidents has some reservations about certain aspects of the funding formula, we are agreed that, overall, the formula, together with the use policy, is a position we all support. This is important as we approach state budget development and the appropriations process, particularly since the state's revenue picture is bleak. It is important that we present the needs of higher education with unity and a common purpose among institutions.

The Council on Higher Education has recommended that the formula be fully funded over the 1984-86 biennium. Such funding is needed if Kentucky is to make the investment necessary for the economic development of the state. I solicit your support, along with that of the alumni of other public universities, of the funding recommendations of the Council on Higher Education.

With your help, we can improve the educational level of Kentucky's citizens and keep opportunities open for the young men and women of Kentucky to achieve their potential.

Two developments in the past several months at Eastern should interest you. These were a reorganization of certain administrative functions of the University and the implementation of an integrated planning and budgeting system.

The reorganization accomplished several goals. It grouped together similar, or related, functions into the same general organizational unit; it consolidated many student academic support services into an Office of Academic Support and Undergraduate Studies; it enhanced long-range planning through creation of an Associate Vice President for Academic Planning and Development; and it created an Office of Development to coordinate fund raising, friend raising, and image building for the University.

The reorganization recognizes that the times are certainly different for universities than they were several years ago. During the era of growth and diversification, Eastern, like other institutions, went through a period of internal specialization when emerging needs were normally met by establishing a new office or new position. Today's more limited resources and stable enrollments dictate more generalization and consolidation of related functions. Only in this way will we be able to manage our resources and serve our students in the most effective manner.

While resources and numbers of students are relatively stable in overall institutional terms, the situation is different within the University. Student needs, student interests, and societal needs are combining to result in significant shifts of enrollment within the University. The considerations that grow out of this situation require thoughtful, coordinated planning.

As you read this, the Institutional Planning Committee and the Institutional Planning Analysis Committee will be reviewing the material which will be incorporated into a five-year plan for Eastern. These institution-wide committees, which include administrators, faculty, staff, students, and alumni, have already been involved in the establishment and review of institutional missions and goals and have reviewed the unit and planning goals of the University's operating units.

All of us involved in the planning process are committed to its being a meaningful, productive exercise. Eastern's graduates have been well represented in the work of the Planning Analysis Committee by Association officers Bill Walters and Mary Beth Hall.

In closing, I again want to express my pleasure in having this new opportunity to communicate with you. I look forward to keeping you informed of my view on future issues that affect you and your Alma Mater.

Editor's Notes

Alumni Day '84 will see a new class reuniting on campus. Joining the 25-, 30-, 50-, and 60-year classes will be the 15-year graduates for the annual spring reunion doin's back at Eastern. The 30-year gang replaces the 15-year group, which will begin holding its reunions in the fall during Homecoming Weekend.

So all you grads from the classes of 1924, 1934, 1944, 1954, and 1959 could begin making your plans now for a weekend of May 12 for Alumni Day '84. Contact your classmates, peruse our Milestones, and mark your calendar cause it promises to be an enjoyable occasion.

In addition to reunions of the 5-, 10-, and 15-year classes, the Alumni Association and some other traditional groups will return at Homecoming scheduled in the fall for October 13 (the Central Florida game), next fall will be a busy and exciting time for alumni. Several special interest groups are already planning campus reunions for weekends throughout the football season.

Among these are the 1954 Tangerine Bowl football team, baccalaureate nursing grads, home economics, The Eastern Process, and others.

The alumni staff stands ready to assist in making arrangements for any group desiring to return to campus during the football or basketball seasons. Simply give Ron or Larry a call at (606) 622-1260 for assistance.

All these plans and events are meaningless without people, of course. Many came back for Homecoming '83, and some special people helped make it a memorable weekend. Dr. Fred Darling, '47, the Grand Marshal of the parade, who is retiring at the end of this year after almost 38 years' service to Eastern, is featured in this issue. Several of the Eels returned to present a new clock to their former coach, Don Combs, '53 MA '65, and the Alumni Band, as usual, made some beautiful music for the parade and the game. You will enjoy Ron's homecoming story in this issue which recaps the special day.

There are also some other special people featured in this issue, Karl Bays, '55, whose company, American Hospital Supply Corporation, established a scholarship fund in his honor on the occasion of his 25th anniversary with the company of which he is chief executive officer and a loan fund in honor of his wife, Billie Bays, '55.

And, the alumni scholars are featured also, 25 young people whose academic potential was rewarded by the award of J.W. Thurman Scholarships, and the football Colonels who made 1983 another "Matter of Pride" for Eastern football fans.

Thanks, Roy Kidd, '54, your staff, and your young student-athletes for another exciting football season. Your OVC championship, 7-3-1 season record, and thrilling play were all pleasant surprises in what was to be a rebuilding year.

Although by the standards we have come to expect of Roy and his teams, the '83 season was sub-par, we wonder how many teams in the land would trade records with him?

Congratulations! We can't wait until next season when your Boys of Autumn are in action again. The Colonels are, indeed, "A Matter of Pride." The '83 season is highlighted in this issue by News Editor Jack Frost.

Accolades are also in store for the men's and women's cross country teams of Coach Rick Erdmann and his assistant, Brian Andrews, '82, for winning conference championships and to Coach Geri Polvino and her Colonel volleyball team for their championship year.

With each passing year, it becomes more difficult to accept the loss of our alumni and good friends. 1983 was especially painful. Our deepest sympathies are extended to the families of an uncommon number of close friends and loyal, devoted alumni.

Words cannot express our loss by the deaths of Charles, '50, and Betty Clark Combs, '51, in July. Charles served as chairman of the Eastern Board of Regents, and he and Betty were unmistakably Eastern people in every respect.

Florence Champion, '39, who was president of the Alumni Association in 1956-57, died last summer in Louisville. The list includes Colonel Robert Morris Creech, '37, a highly decorated World War II veteran; Dr. Mitchell B. Denham, '34, the 1964 Outstanding Alumnus recipient, and Tom Bonny, '40, of Irvine, who was the first male music major at Eastern and well-known throughout Kentucky and the region for his beautiful bass-baritone voice, especially during countless performances of Handel's oratorio, The Messiah.

Along with our condolences to their families and loved ones goes our appreciation for each of these special persons who were an important part of the Eastern Story. Indeed, they were among the founders of Eastern, and they will be sorely missed. □

HOMECOMING '83...

MUSIC! MUSIC! MUSIC!

By Ron G. Wolfe

...A BLEND OF ALUMNI, MUSIC, FOOTBALL, FANS, AND MEMORIES.

Unlike the previous year, there was no singing in the rain, only the annual harmony of old notes and new notes that make for homecoming music when they come to play.

Music! Music! Music!

It was a veritable variety show that began with some rockin' and rollin' in the Combs Natatorium on Friday evening as the Eels got together for their own version of water ballet. Their high note came with the official presentation of a digital readout clock and scoreboard for the pool, a project that alums had been working on for the past two years. The clock was accepted by former swim coach Doc Combs, who is now athletic director at the University.

Meanwhile, Alumni Band members were making their own kind of music in the Foster Music Building as they prepared for the Saturday parade and their part in the halftime routine. It was, for them, the 10th anniversary of the Alumni Band, and a specime to make "A Matter of Pride" their theme song as well as the rallying cry for the Colonels football team.

During the week prior to Friday evening's opening numbers, the jam boxes hummed in the dusty tobacco warehouse as some 20 student organizations built floats that were on key to the music theme. The IET Club and Alpha Gamma Delta turned out another winner in the beauty category with "EKU is Morning for Victory" which featured an oversized moving trombone, while in the originality category, Eta Theta Pi and Chi Omega won with their rendition of "The Colonel's Key to Victory."

But, on Saturday morning as thousands lined the parade route, all were winners in the eyes of appreciative alumni and other friends who returned for the big day.

While organizations labored in the warehouse, hundreds of students in the dorms decorated for the weekend. When the judges finished their rounds on Saturday morning, Martin Hall's "Sweet Sounds of Victory" and McGregor Hall's "Can't Help Lovin' Those Men of Mine" took top honors.

For the Homecoming Queen candidates, rehearsal was also frantic during preparation for the weekend. Nearly 40 pre-candidates took part in the Student Association's presentation in the Ravine before a campus-wide election narrowed the field to fifteen. The finalists then went through extensive practices, met the judges for interviews, and found themselves in the spotlight at the Friday evening concert in Brock Auditorium. Said one theme-conscious judge, "If a pretty girl is like a melody, then we have 15 songs to choose from."

In addition to these special groups, the entire campus had an opportunity to get involved during a Pep Rally on Thursday evening which featured a noisy gathering, the 15 queen finalists, and Coach Kidd.

When all the rehearsing was completed, the show unfolded on Saturday as thousands returned for the day and all the color and pageantry that go along with it.

As some 75 units marched down Lancaster Avenue, led by several hundred runners, the Marching Maroons, and area high school bands, the crowds enjoyed scores of twirling groups, queens in convertibles, clowns with candy, antique cars . . . all the ingredients of any parade, a spectacle that is one of the last of its kind in Kentucky.

Grand Marshal Fred Darling, '42, and his wife Edna led the way as the units waltzed through downtown Richmond. By the time the parade ended, Dave Shaufuss had won the Homecoming Run with a time of 14:32, Teresa Smith was the first woman to cross the finish line, and Bill Smith, '69 MA '71, of Frankfort, and Wanda Colwell, MA'80, won top honors among alumni.

After the parade passed, friends from reunion classes, special interest groups, and others just back for the weekend gathered around the campus. The Department of Geography and Planning held an open house in Roark . . . returning Black alumni were scheduled to get together in the Jagers Room of the Powell Building . . . history and social studies majors met again in the University Building . . .

Although not everyone from every group registered, many came from next door and across the country. Tom and Barb Smith from Erlanger . . . Jim Philpot from Morrow, Ohio . . . Eric Bundy from Louisville . . . all from the 1973 class, with Yvonne Allen Hemphill coming the greatest distance — Anaheim, California — to share the day.

From the class of 1978, Wayne Bobblitt of Lebanon Junction was first to register, while Mary Sell was a bit later, having traveled from Birmingham, Alabama, for her 5th reunion.

Preliminary events for Homecoming '83 included a spirited Friday evening swim meet among Eel alumni (above), and a campus-wide Pep Rally in Alumni Coliseum on Thursday (right) which featured, among others, members of Phi Delta Theta fraternity who began cheering two days early.

It was a day for old friends and new, from fellow runners in the Homecoming Run to classmates to teammates . . . people who needed people were indeed lucky people on this occasion.

After the morning parade, homecomers milled around the campus prior to the lunch and game. Many visited the campus bookstore to buy sweat-shirts, T-shirts, hats, pennants, and other items that they could take home to remember the day.

Others toured the Chapel of Meditation, paused a few moments in the Ravine, and generally absorbed the feeling of being home again . . .

The usual Homecoming Buffet was moved outdoors to the Alumni Coliseum parking lot, but the menu was still vintage Larry Martin, this time with a milgate twist. Just across the entrance to the stadium hungry fans enjoyed the convenience of tailgating and the menu variety that has become a trademark of homecoming cuisine. This year's fare included a Dixieland Band that added musical zest to the occasion.

As the band played outside the stadium and nearly 20,000 fans made their way to Hanger Field, the 15 finalists were inside the Begley Building getting ready for pre-game ceremonies which would answer the question that they'd all been asking for nearly a month. Back to help provide the answer and crown her successor was Suzanne Fawbush, '83, now a student at the Columbia University School of Law in New York.

The multiple choice question — who will be

Homecomings are people events, and Homecoming '83 was no exception. While "Fou" Linder (above left) practiced with the Alumni Band which celebrated its 10-year reunion, other groups like the Eels (bottom left) returned to present a gift for the Combs Natatorium. Alumni and other friends who simply returned for the parade (top right) or other events and students who decorated the various dorms on campus like Telford Hall's winning entry (above right) all helped make Homecoming festivities complete.

queen — was answered as Elizabeth Cummins, a junior alumni scholar from Somerset, was named Homecoming Queen for 1983. Runners-up were Suzanne Arnold, Mason, Ohio, and Kathy Kidd, Coach Roy Kidd's daughter.

Although every event of the weekend was special, it was the game that highlighted the day, and the Colonels showed the Governors from Austin Peay that sharps and flats were as appropriate on the field as they are on any sheet of music. The Colonels proved to be the former, the Gobs the latter, as Kidd and his charges did a number on the guests from Clarksville — 31-14.

In keeping with tradition and the weekend theme, the Colonels sang "Cabin on the Hill" one more time.

But, the players didn't provide the only music in the game. The Marching Maroons kept music in the air at halftime with some help from the Alumni Band.

After the game, the alumni and friends gathered at various points around Richmond and Lexington to reminisce a bit more and have dinner together. Several gathered at the Mulebarn at Arlington for the Alumni Reception hosted by the Greater Cincinnati Area Alumni Chapter, and some moved to the main house for a later dinner.

The Eels reception convened at the Richmond Bluegrass Army Depot Officers' Club while Gordon Nash directed his orchestra once again to the Holiday Inn. Various student groups hosted special get-togethers for their alumni, including Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity which held a special five-year charter night reunion in Lexington.

The finale concluded, the music of the weekend slowly faded. Old notes and bold notes had been heard throughout the day . . . some sung in harmony . . . some in unison . . . but either way, Homecoming '83 was music to their ears. □

By Ron G. Wolfe

"A Matter of Pride" may be the motto for the present EKV football team, but it's just as appropriate for one former football Maroon All-American turned academician, Dr. Fred Darling, chairman of the Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletic Services (HPERA).

For 43 years, he has accumulated honors and awards, both athletic and academic, that reflect a life of commitment to his field and one that he talks about with justifiable pride.

"I've lived a productive life," he said, "but I've been fortunate in many respects, too. I'm especially glad that I could spend my entire career at my Alma Mater.

Darling is proud of his roots which go back to the coal mining areas of southeastern Ohio. "I grew up during the Depression, so it was never essential that I had a lot. I'm still a very frugal person."

But that background, coupled with his penchant for hard work and long hours, brought him success on the gridiron and in the field of physical education.

As a student at Eastern, he became an All-American tackle for coach Rome Rankin. An excellent student, he played on the first of only two undefeated teams in Eastern's history.

When the war came at graduation in 1942, pride in his country caused him to forego a professional contract he had signed with the Detroit Lions for service as a Captain in the U.S. Army Field Artillery.

And when the war was over, he came back to Eastern as a graduate assistant and completed what was to be the second of six academic degrees he holds from three different institutions, five of which he earned while working full-time at Eastern in a variety of positions.

"I've done everything," he recalled, "from keeper of the towel room with Miss Hood, (Gertrude Hood (1928-1972), founder of the women's physical education program and the Women's Athletic Association to director of intramurals, to assistant dean of men and resident assistant in Sullivan Hall to professor of education to chairman of the department."

Along the way, however, Darling established himself as one of the leaders in his field, and there were some important people — one President, two governors and a host of others — who recognized his accomplishments.

He received an award as "One of America's Twelve Outstanding Physical Fitness Leaders" from President Lyndon B. Johnson in a White House ceremony, "Governor's Award of Merit" from Ned Breathitt, and an "Award of Commemoration" from Governor Julia Carroll for his work in researching a State Fitness Consultant Network.

In addition, both Eastern and Indiana University have recognized him for his accomplishments. At EKV, he was inducted into both the Hall of Distinguished Alumni and the Athletic Hall of Fame during the University's Centennial Year celebration in 1974. At IU, he received the School of HPER highest honor — the W.W. Patty Award for his contributions to the profession.

In 1982, he received the Kentucky American Alliance for Health, Physical Education and Recreation's (AAHPER) W.H. Mustaine Award, the state's highest recognition for leadership in health, physical education, recreation and athletics. This past March he continued his list of accolades from the Southern District of the National Alliance of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance (HPERD) which gave him its top Honor Award.

Over the years, his accomplishments were recognized beyond his profession as well ... the Kentucky and U.S. Jaycees ... the Boy Scouts of America ... the NCAA ... all recognized his involvement in his work and its importance to their particular causes.

As an undergraduate at Eastern (below), Fred, third from left, examined some woodworking details while earning a degree in industrial arts. Later, he coached track and football at his Alma Mater. In 1958, he posed for the Milestone photographer with Glenn Presnell (right, kneeling); Don Daly, '55 (left, standing), and Jerry Boyd, '57.

After more than four decades, he looks back upon his success with a philosophical eye. "Success is built around a good sound education," he maintained, "the ability to work long hours when you have to, to be influenced by strong leadership in others ... and good heredity."

Darling is quick to give credit to some leaders who influenced him during his formative years. "There were perhaps four people who influenced me most," he said, "Kermit Blosser, Rome Rankin, Tom Samuels, and Turkey Hughes."

Blosser, currently golf coach at Ohio University in Athens, maintains that Darling's success was predictable early in life. "He was the type of young man you knew was going to do well ... he never knew how to quit."

The legendary Rankin left his mark on Darling professionally, as well as personally. "He was the best man at my wedding," Darling recalled.

Not accidentally, three of the four men who influenced Darling did so at Eastern, and it was his playing for them and coaching with them in football and track that made him an ardent Eastern man.

"I tell my students that they can't get a better background anywhere than at Eastern," he said, "I felt that way when I went on to graduate school at IU, and I still feel that way today."

The quality of this program is, predictably, related to his work on the curriculum. He planned the recreation program currently being offered by the department, and wrote a Federal Project that helped finance it for five years. Also, the Master of Science degree with a Sports Administration option and the undergraduate Athletic Training endorsement were developments that he helped implement.

He is a believer in Eastern, and he's done his best to make it a family matter. Daughters Cindy and Debbie are both Eastern graduates, Cindy with a BA and MA in English and Debbie with a degree in nursing ... "We're working on our grandchildren now," he smiled.

And part of his pride in Eastern lies in his close ties with Eastern graduates, his former students that he talks about with obvious satisfaction ... Don Feltner, vice-president for development at Eastern; Karl Bays, president and chief executive officer for American Hospital Supply Corporation; actor Lee Majors, a close friend and business partner; Joe Yanity, a successful attorney; Roy Kidd, head coach of the EKU Colonels, among others...

And perhaps the closest tie of all, wife Edna (Baker-Babb) who as a majorette for the Marching Maroons met Fred, the captain of the football team, and accepted his proposal on the steps of the Weaver Health Building back in 1942. "We still walk on the campus almost every day, and we still stop to sit on that step," he said.

A successful businessman as well as an honored educator, his long list of credits reflects a life of hard work and obvious success, but Darling says that the ones that mean the most are those from EKU and IU because "they're tied to educational achievements."

In retirement, he hopes to have time to travel and restore antique furniture. "Of course, I'll follow the Colonels and EKU," he said. "I absolutely refuse to move from within walking distance of the campus."

After some 43 years on the campus in a variety of positions from student to dean, Fred Darling has walking rights any day he and Edna see fit. In retirement, his proud legacy in the area of physical education and athletics will continue to be a matter of pride, not only for the man, but for the institution that has become an integral part of his life. □

East European Culture Festival

By Mary Ellen Shuntich
James K. Libbey

The Fourth Annual Culture Festival was celebrated on campus September 26 through October 6 with a myriad of activities. Once again, a stimulating, informative, and thoroughly enjoyable variety of experiences were offered to the university and local communities, presenting all who participated with a glance into the lives and traditions of the peoples of Eastern Europe. The festival focused on East Europe countries Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland, Romania, the Slavic Republics of USSR, and Yugoslavia.

A culture week celebration was the dreamchild of Dr. Joe Flory, currently director of International Education and co-chair of the Culture Festival. Flory, who began teaching in the English department at Eastern in 1979, was assigned to teach a unit on African literature as part of his World Literature course. "That same year," Flory recalled, "a new faculty member from Africa, Dr. Said Samatar, was teaching in the department of Humanities."

"I invited him to talk to my class and I became a student as well. He was so interesting and impressive, and the students' response was great." He realized, he added, how little was really known about the African culture.

"Why not, I thought, have this for all students. Dr. Samatar and I began to brainstorm, and an African Culture Week evolved, he the 'expert' and I the organizer." Dr. Samatar has since moved to Rutgers University in New Jersey.

Above. Carrie Hein, a junior in Communications Disorders, prepares a wax overlay similar to the batik process of coloring, as she demonstrates the art of Ukrainian Easter Egg decorating. Right. The Banevolks Dance Company from Ball State University staged an impressive exhibition of East European folk dances in colorful traditional costumes.

Since that first African Culture Week in the fall of 1980, the event has become an annual occurrence and has steadily grown, involving more faculty and students in the planning and organizing, doubling the program of films and activities and quadrupling the attendance and participation.

The following year, Culture Week featured the East Asian countries of China, Japan, and Korea.

In 1982, Culture Week was expanded into two weeks, with the first week devoted to more than 20 films depicting the South Asian countries of India, Sri Lanka, Pakistan, and Bangladesh.

The second week was filled with speakers, slide presentations, panel discussions, music and dance presentations, exhibits, craft demonstrations, food samplings, and a clothing display. Culture Week became the Culture Festival. "We had to lengthen the event from one to two weeks," explains Flory, "simply to accommodate all the activities and people."

A number of outstanding events during this year's festival precipitated a record-breaking attendance of more than 3,500 persons from the campus and the community, with the festival serving as a major cultural attraction in the region.

A broad selection of documentary and educational films plus four feature-length films attracted more than 1,000 in the Library, in classrooms across campus, and at Model Laboratory School. Cultural attaches with the Socialist Republic of Romania and the German Democratic Republic embassies in Washington, D.C., and the Yugoslav Press and Cultural Center in New York provided special assistance in obtaining films and prints.

The Russian Folk Orchestra from the University of Illinois gave a lively Monday evening concert. The 30-member orchestra, conducted by Paul Garvey, performed on such strange native Russian instruments as the balalikas and domras, mandolin and bass-like instruments of all sizes - from 16 inches to six feet!

The most popular event, drawing an enthusiastic crowd of 500, was an extravaganza of sight and sound staged by the Banevolks Dance Company from Ball State University. The 18-member dance troupe came to Richmond following their second tour of East Europe where they participated in folk dance festivals in a number of countries. The Banevolks performed traditional folk dances in a colorful array of authentic costumes.

Dimitri Feofanov, a Russian pianist on the faculty at the University of Kentucky since August 1982, performed Russian music of the 19th and 20th centuries to a spell-bound audience of music students and interested listeners on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Feofanov's performance at a 1982 international competition was described as "lithe and vibrant . . . exemplary digital ease and evenness . . . a lean and muscular reading, quite expressive . . . brought more applause and more curtain calls than any other performance of the evening." Equally so at Eastern.

Three Richmond residents who visited Poland in the summer of 1983 participated in the program also. Rev. Charles Steele, minister of Westside Christian Church, his wife Dolly, and Jeff Masters, a freshman at Eastern, shared their experiences in a slide presentation and displayed a variety of articles from their Polish friends.

The art department arranged with the Jacques Baruch Gallery in Chicago to present a show at the Giles Gallery featuring original photographs by Jan Sandek of Yugoslavia and prints by five East European artists. The Baruchs have acquired the most comprehensive collection of Czechoslovakian prints in the United States.

Thursday was a fun day for some 300 participants who were either czardasing, Za poyasing, and lesnoting (dancing) or sampling vinegret, pashka, kielbasa and apple strudel.

A folk dance workshop for interested (and spirited) persons was held in the Weaver dance studio in the morning and outside in the ravine in the afternoon. The sessions were sprinkled with anecdotes and stories by Larry Weiner, co-director of the Buffalo Gap Folk Dance Camp in Washington, D.C. Weiner toured Eastern Europe to study dances and cultural rites in traditional ceremonies in the villages and towns.

Thursday evening brought a 17-item food sampling feast to 200 guests in Walnut Hall. Members of the food committee spent months selecting authentic recipes representing all the East European countries and preparing the food for the event. Attendance was by necessity limited to 200. It was so popular that tickets were sold out in a matter of days.

In addition, luncheon lectures, panel discussions, dramatic presentations, exhibits, and craft demonstrations filled the week with Eastern European culture with special guests from East Tennessee State University, Indiana University, Washington University, Centre College, University of Kentucky, Eastern, and the Richmond community.

While the future of Eastern European culture may be clouded with politics, the future of Eastern's Culture Festival is bright with hope. A few days after the Fourth Annual Culture Festival closed, Flory carefully prepared a series of empty folders. "Latin America," he beamed, showing the labels. □

KIDD'S KIDS SEE DYNASTY DROWN, BUT YOU CAN BET THEY'LL BE BACK.

Despite

a disappointing playoff loss in the mud, 1983 proved to be a pleasant surprise as the rebuilding Colonels finished 7-3-1 and captured a ninth OVC title.

"WE JUST DIDN'T HAVE THE EXPERIENCE..."

Opposite page: How wet was it? There were times the players and refs would have given almost anything for an umbrella.

Below: A saturated Keith Bosley drips dry.

The dreams of a third national football championship for Coach Rod Kidd and his proud troop of Colonels were drowned on a cold, rainy November night as the magic of Hanger Field vanished in the soggy Bermuda turf.

On a night when a torrential downpour made running an adventure and catching the football more difficult than corralling a greased pig, Eastern gave it a shot, but for only the second time in the last 37 home games there was no singing of "Cabin On The Hill," the Colonels' victory song. On that night, before a national television audience and 4,800 soaked fans in the stands, an opportunistic Boston University team prevailed 24-20 in the first round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

The dynasty that has seen Eastern advance to the national finals the last four years and capture championships in 1979 and 1982 will simply require a minor tune-up with a few new parts.

In a season that was supposed to be somewhat of a rebuilding year for Coach Kidd and his staff, the 1983 Colonels proved a pleasant surprise as they finished with a 7-3-1 record and captured a ninth Ohio Valley Conference title. With two freshmen quarterbacks and a defensive unit that included nine new starters, Kidd entered the season with slim expectations that this team would qualify for a fifth consecutive playoff spot. But, as the season wore on and Eastern was sitting with a 5-0 record, the players were making a believer of their coach.

However, in the aftermath of the mud bath with Boston U., Kidd revealed his inner thoughts. "I kinda knew this team wasn't as good as the teams we had the past four years. We just didn't have the experience to do well in the playoffs. I knew that. I had that feeling. But I think the past four years have spoiled everybody around here a little. I know I have been.

"This dynasty isn't over," said Kidd, who completed his 20th year as the Colonel helm with an overall record of 153-58-7 and was selected OVC Coach of the Year for the second consecutive year. "We'll be back. We've got too many good young players. I'm excited about our future."

Names such as Pat Smith and Greg Parker, the two young quarterbacks who gained valuable experience this past season, tailbacks Barry Cox and David Hensley, fullbacks Victor Mims and Vic Parks, mammoth offensive tackle Keith Bosley, and defensive stalwarts Fred Harvey, Anthony Jones, Jeff Walker, Robert Williams, Rick Campbell, and Robert Palmer will help form the nucleus of next year's squad.

But for the seniors on this team, who finished their playing careers with a 41-8-1 record, the loss to the BU Terriers left somewhat of an empty feeling. For the only time in their careers, they fell short of reaching the national finals, but that is certainly nothing to be ashamed about.

Tron Armstrong, a senior who may get an opportunity in professional football, perhaps said it best. "We've been in the playoffs in all five years I've been at Eastern, and we went to the championship game in four out of the five. How many other teams in the nation can say that? None. We gave it one heck of a shot for No. 5. One heck of a shot."

One heck of a shot, indeed. Despite digging a hole for themselves in the first half with fumbles and other mistakes, the Colonels came fighting back from a 21-10 halftime deficit. The "Matter of Pride" theme that has become synonymous with EKV football seemed to come alive.

As the precious minutes ticked away, the EKV faithful kept their hopes high, recalling some of the miraculous last-second victories the Colonels pulled off. Just as WTBS play-by-play announcer Bob Neal told the television audience to get ready for a wild and woolly finish, the Colonels began one last desperation drive.

With no time-outs remaining and the clock winding down to zero, Smith unleashed a 45-yard pass that seemed to hang forever in the driving rain above Hanger Field. Both Armstrong and sophomore split end Isaiah Hill were at the goal line surrounded by BU defenders. The ball was tipped, the crowd gasped, Hill made a valiant dive, the ball bounded away, and suddenly it was over.

But as the drenched and disappointed crowd slowly filed from the stadium, one EKV fan was overheard to say, "Wait Til Next Year!" □

Aviation Program Off and Flying

Eastern has long exhorted prospective students to come live and learn on the Richmond campus. That invitation can now be expanded to "live, learn, and fly" as the University's aviation program is off the ground with the completion of the first courses in private pilot ground school and flight training.

The development of the program has flown along at rapid speed since the ECU Board of Regents authorized the award of academic credit and negotiations for a contract with an airport fixed base operator to provide the Federal Aviation Administration-approved flight training.

Eight students were recognized in August as the first to complete the private pilot ground course (AVN 191) which carries four hours of academic credit. In addition, three of those students completed the integrated flight course, private pilot flight (AVN 191) and flew their first solo flight in July. They are now eligible to take the FAA private pilot license examination.

The three students completing both the ground and flight courses are Keith Gunter, Louisville; Larry E. Pugh, Lexington; and Thomas G. Clark, Monticello. The five completing only the ground school thus far are James H. Hughes, Irvine; John M. Justice and Keith B. Sears, both of Richmond; Mike Lamb, Paint Lick; and Anthony McDaniel, London.

Dr. Wilma J. Walker, coordinator of ECU's aviation program, says she is well satisfied with the program's progress thus far. She said the enrollment for the summer course offerings was limited to a small number of students, but class enrollment for the fall term neared capacity with 23 students in the ground course and 17 signed up for the flight.

The program, which is administered through the College of Applied Arts and Technology, has been developed with the goal of someday offering associate and baccalaureate degrees.

Dr. Kenneth Hansson, dean of the College of Applied Arts and Technology, says Eastern officials are convinced the future holds numerous opportunities for the continued development of the aviation program, whether it is private or commercial flight, or in the critical areas defined by the FAA such as airway science management, airway computer systems, aircraft systems management, airway electronics systems, or aircraft maintenance management.

"Eastern has often dared to step out to do what was needed to meet higher education needs," said Hansson. "I hope we will continue that tradition, a tradition that has led us to this point in time when we cannot only extend an invitation to live and learn at Eastern, but 'come and fly at Eastern.'"

Placement Division Honored by KCPA

Eastern reaped kudos when the University's Division of Career Development and Placement was recognized during the 20th annual conference of the Kentucky College Placement Association held in Berea.

Art Harvey, assistant director of the CD&P division, won the first KCPA Innovative Program Award and a grant of $150 for the development of the Student's Ambassadors Program. The award will be used to prepare a manual on the program for use by other placement officers.

The division also won the association's membership award for most new members during 1983.

The new president-elect of KCPA is Kurt Zimmerman, director of Eastern's Division of Career Development and Placement. Mr. Zimmerman's responsibilities as president-elect include program chairman for the 1984 conference in Louisville, and president of the Association for 1984-85.

Papers of Prominent Central Kentuckians Donated to ECU Archives

The personal papers and mementos of a prominent central Kentucky family at the beginning of the twentieth century have been donated to the Eastern Archives for preservation.

EKU Archivist Charles Hay said a guide to the papers of Grant and Anna Lilly has been recently published and the materials are open for public inspection.

The Lillys, originally from Irvine, settled in Richmond around 1900. Lilly

Kurt K. Zimmerman, left, director of the Division of Career Development and Placement at Eastern, and William Scott Whitson, '73, sales coordinator with ARCO Coal Sales Co. in Kenova, WV, examine documents awarding $500 to the ECU office. The grant was made to ECU by ARCO in recognition of Whitson's participation in the University's Alumni Career Network, an organization designed to help Eastern graduates in employment and relocation.

n attorney, was owner and editor of three newspapers, The Madisonian, The Richmond Climax, and The Kentucky Register, which were merged in 1917 to form the present day Richmond Register. After moving to Lexington in the 1920's, Lilly ran unsuccessfully for mayor in 1927.

Mrs. Lilly, a leader in Kentucky women's issues and civic activities, spearheaded a drive in 1928 to have "My Old Kentucky Home" designated as the official state song.

The Lilly Family Collection was given to EKU by the Lillys' daughter, Miss Austin Page Lilly of Lexington.

Library Receives $30,000 State Grant

Ernest E. Weyhrauch, dean of libraries at Eastern, has announced that EKU's John Grant Crabbe Library has been awarded a $30,000 grant by the Kentucky Department of Libraries and Archives to be used in the area of data conversion.

State Librarian and Commissioner James Nelson said EKU received one of KDLA's two 1983 Data Conversion Grants. A similar award was made to the Kenton County Public Library. According to Weyhrauch, Eastern competed for the award in the academic category against six other benchmark institutions.

"The purpose of the grant is to fund 60 percent of the cost of converting a portion of the Crabbe Library's catalog of materials to computer-readable form," said Nelson.

According to Ling-yuh (Miko) Pattie, catalog section chief at Eastern's library and the person who drafted the grant proposal, the $30,000 and additional matching funds from the University will be used to reclassify and convert 42,000 records during the upcoming year.

When the project is completed the library collection may be accessed from department chairs' offices, and other campus locations.

Innovative Job Placement Program Recruits Aid From Students

As the job search of college graduates becomes more demanding, Eastern's Division of Career Development and Placement has come up with a pilot project known as the Student Ambassador Program that utilizes the help of student volunteers in developing employer contacts. The program's theme could appropriately read "Students Helping Students."

Art Harvey, assistant director of CD&P at Eastern, who conceived the project, said a group of 20 trained student volunteers contacted approximately 100 employers last spring. "We feel the program has gotten off to a tremendous start and will be a great boost to our employer contact campaign," said Harvey.

The program has caught the attention of others in the placement field. The ambassador program received the 1983 Kentucky College Placement Associations Award for Innovation.

"We designed this program to provide a face-to-face forum for the exchange of information between placement offices and employers. The development of an effective employer contact campaign is a difficult task for college placement offices due to constraints on funding and time," he said, "but with this ambassador program, we can physically call on many more employers than would be possible for the placement staff."

Harvey explained that upperclass student volunteers, who have been selected through faculty nomination and who have completed a training program, schedule an appointment with employers in their home areas. The ambassadors contact at least five organizations during a visit to their home. He said the students provide the information about University services and programs that complement the needs of a particular organization.

Forty students are serving as ambassadors during the 1983 fall and 1984 spring terms.

"We hope the development of this pilot project will serve as a model to increase the effectiveness of employer outreach activities in Kentucky and hence serve both placement offices and recruiters alike," said Harvey. □

Survey Examines Reasons Students Attend Eastern

by Jack D. Frost

Why Do Students Attend Eastern?

The answers to this question are numerous, according to a survey administered last summer by the Division of Admissions and School Relations to a sample of new freshmen and transfer students.

James L. Grigsby, director of admissions and school relations, said about 25 percent of the 1,905 students surveyed during Summer Orientation indicated they selected Eastern because of the course offerings and academic reputation of the University.

The survey program, known as the Student Outcomes Information Service, is a jointly-sponsored project of the National Center for Higher Education Management Systems and the College Board. Grigsby said the project has assisted the University in collecting student outcome information that will be used for student recruiting/marketing strategies, and to help identify services that need improving.

He says the survey results prove very supportive of the efforts being made at Eastern. "Throughout, our report suggests that the strategies employed by the University in recruiting new students and marketing Eastern to prospective students are effective, and the image of the University is very sound."

In addition to the key role Eastern's academic reputation and wide selection of degree programs play in attracting students, the survey also revealed that advice from a teacher/alumnus/friend accounted for another 10 percent; a commendation from a former student, 2; and being located close to home, 0.5.

"It would also appear that information high school students receive from us is a contributor to the students' knowledge of Eastern and their subsequent decision to attend the University," added Grigsby.

"A concerted effort has been made in the past several years to provide the prospective student with as much information as possible," he said. The survey indicated that 17.7 percent of the students learned about Eastern through publications and other literature mailed to them, while another 11.4 percent heard about the University from visiting ECU representatives in the high schools. The leading information source about Eastern came from relatives and/or friends, 29.5 percent, while high school teachers/counselors/administrators were listed by 24.4 percent.

The development of an active student recruitment program began at Eastern in 1960 when Dr. Robert R. Martin began his 16 $\frac{1}{4}$ -year tenure as president, and has been expanded under the presidency of Dr. J.C. Powell. The 60's was an era of unequaled growth at Eastern and the Commonwealth's entire system of public higher education. As history will show, Eastern was one of the leaders in academic program development and physical expansion to accommodate the population explosion of college-age students from the post-war "Baby Boom."

Today, the need for a vibrant student recruitment program is perhaps more important than ever as the numbers of college age youth are decreasing. Simply maintaining the status quo has proven a challenge, but Grigsby feels Eastern has been up to the task.

While the University's total enrollment dropped slightly last fall to 12,866, the full-time enrollment figures actually showed about a five percent increase and the number of total full-time freshmen increased more than 14 percent.

"We are continually striving to find methods to better market the University and recruit students," said Grigsby. "It's good to know, as a result of this survey, that we are doing our job."

Eastern's success in attracting new students cannot be disputed. The University ranks as the largest of Kentucky's regional institutions in terms of enrollment.

Dana Swinford in "The Stephen Foster Story"

by Dr. James Libbey

Louisville native Dana Swinford did not undergo the normal interview process for her summer's co-op position. She sang and danced her way into the chorus of "The Stephen Foster Story" at Bardstown.

A senior BFA (Performing Arts) major, Swinford possessed strong credentials when she auditioned for a place in the cast of the outdoor musical. She had already completed many music and theatre courses and had previously appeared in numerous plays and musicals (the latter in conjunction with the Department of Music) produced by the Department of Speech and Theatre Arts.

"When she auditioned, Dana secured a place in the chorus and came within an inch of getting a major role," stated the director, Scott Ray. "She's in very good company," he continued, "since this year's cast is the most experienced in the long history of 'The Stephen Foster Story.'"

Ray disclosed that the company is primarily composed of veteran actors. In fact, 38 of 50 cast members had played in last year's production. Each part in the show attracted keen competition for seasoned performers. "I was disappointed when I did not earn a leading role," Swinford bluntly admitted, "but I am the understudy for the part and I do a minor character during matinees. I keep busy."

Busy is not a strong enough word for the grueling schedule endured by Swinford. For example, the chorus appears in most scenes of the 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ hour musical. There are six evening shows and a Saturday matinee each week during a season lasting from June 11 to Labor Day.

In addition, the director has held spot rehearsals. Finally, Swinford and the other chorus members are often whisked away on promotional tours before returning to Bardstown in time for the evening performance.

Eastern helped prepare Swinford for the hard work. "The plays or musicals at Eastern take two months of daily rehearsals—and that's on top of classes. In fact," Swinford suggested, "this is the big difference between school and the 'real' world."

She explained that the high caliber of the actors enabled this year's company to begin the summer season with less than two weeks of rehearsals. "Professionals have to master their parts in a hurry," she stated.

Swinford's association with the veteran cast is one of the major benefits of her co-op program. "You learn how to get along with others in this business," she commented, "and pick up a lot of good ideas. I'll be able to share these with other (theatre) students when I return to Eastern."

Swinford also mentioned that her co-op work would assist her in her classes during the Fall Semester. "My voice is really strong from all the singing I've done this summer. Dr. (Donald) Henrickson (Professor of Voice) will notice the improvement," she said. Moreover, she felt that her role in the chorus has improved her ability to "blend" her voice with a group of singers and should make her a better member of choral ensembles at Eastern.

Indeed, the word "blend" aptly describes Swinford's co-op position. She has been able to apply her academic training to the profession she plans to enter and, at the same time, acquire experience which will allow her to be a more productive student in the remaining courses she must take before graduation.

Bracken County Student Receives Pope Memorial Scholarship

Campbell Wins $200 Journalism Scholarship

Mark Campbell, a Campbellsburg senior, received the Kentucky Weekly Newspaper Editor's Annual Scholarship. Nominated by faculty members from ECU's Department of Mass Communications, the 21-year-old journalism major/political science minor has a 3.73 grade point average in his major. He is the son of Rosemary Miskell Campbell and the late Robert Ellis Campbell. He is a 1978 graduate of Henry County High School in New Castle, and has worked in a variety of capacities for ECU's student newspaper, The Eastern Progress.

Campbell served as a legislative reporter covering the 1982 Kentucky General Assembly for The Progress. He was appointed features editor in the spring of 1983 and he is currently the paper's managing editor.

Campbell, who is due to graduate in May, is a charter member of the University's Society of Professional Journalists Sigma Delta Chi chapter.

During the KWNE's opening session on Oct. 13, Campbell served as a panel member along with Dr. Glen Klein, chairman of the ECU Department of Mass Communications; Jim Allen, editor of the Grayson County News Gazette; Larry Craig, editor of the Green River Republican; and Evelyn Boone, editor of the Todd County Standard, in a discussion of "Opportunities and Challenges in Community Newspapering." □

Conference of Presidents Elects Powell Chairman

C. Powell, president of ECU, has been elected chairman of the Kentucky Advisory Conference of Presidents.

The Conference of Presidents is composed of the presidents of the eight public universities in Kentucky. It was established by the 1982 General Assembly to advise the Council on Higher Education on matters of concern to the universities. Conference members prepare the agenda for each statutory meeting of the Council, and may elect a spokesperson to present the position of the institutions to the Council. The Conference of Presidents also has at least one meeting annually with the Council.

Powell is ECU's seventh president, having held that position since 1976. Before that, he served as dean of Business Affairs, executive dean, and vice president for Administration at ECU. Powell serves as the Kentucky representative to the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, is a member of the American Council on Education's subcommittee on NCAA Division I Intercollegiate Athletics, and is chairman of the Jesse Stuart Foundation.

Wolford Appointed Advisor to Victim Assistance Network

Dr. Bruce Wolford, associate professor of correctional services, has been appointed to the advisory board of the Victim Assistance Network (VAN), a statewide organization that promotes assistance to crime victims and witnesses.

VAN Chairman Dave Armstrong, Commonwealth Attorney from the 30th Judicial District, said Wolford brings a wealth of experience and concern for Kentucky's crime victims to this new post. The VAN advisory board, composed of leaders in law enforcement and other victim-related fields from across the state, meets quarterly to formulate policy and present recommendations to Kentucky's criminal justice agencies.

Barton Nominated for President of NATA

The National Athletic Trainers Association Board of Directors has nominated Bobby Barton, athletic trainer at Eastern since 1976, and Gary Craner, trainer at Boise State University, as the two candidates for the office of president of the 8,000-member National Athletic Trainers' Association, Inc.

Barton is currently serving a term as president of NATA.

Barton has been a member of the NATA since 1970, and served on the board of directors from 1977 to 1982. He served as the NATA representative to the American Council on Education's Commission on Collegiate Athletics and on the NATA-APTA Task Force on Licensure. He has also served on the NATA Placement Committee, the District 9 Executive Committee, and the NATA Licensure Committee.

In 1979, Barton served as convention chairman for the 30th Annual Meeting and Clinical Symposium and co-authored Kentucky House Bill 86, which provided the procedure used by the Kentucky Board of Medical Licensure to certify athletic trainers in the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

Barton served as vice-president of the NATA in 1980 and 1981 and has served as president since June of 1982. He has served as a member of several NATA committees, and assisted in securing Regular Category A Membership for the NATA from the National Commission for Health Certifying Agencies.

Denny

Administrator Chosen Kentucky "Nurse of the Year"

Charlotte Denny, director of Eastern's Division of Student Special Services, has been honored by the Kentucky Nurses' Association as the 1983 "Nurse of the Year".

Denny, a registered nurse and former associate dean of the College of Allied Health and Nursing, has been a member of the Kentucky Nurses' Association for 20 years and is a past president and board member of the 1,800-member organization. A native of Brookline, Mass., she has been at Eastern since 1967. Denny earned the Bachelor of Science Nursing degree from New York University and the Masters of Administration from the University of Kentucky.

She attributes her selection as "Nurse of the Year" to the community service work she performs in Lexington of administering allergy injections, and the volunteer time she gives to the KNA. In addition, she serves as a staff nurse consultant for eight hospitals in Louisville, Lexington, Hazard, Middlesboro, Whitesburg, South Williamson, Beckley, W.V., and Mann, W.V. Denny is also instrumental in the drafting and review of nursing legislation at both the state and national levels, and is a member of the state review panel on nursing continuing education programs.

Professors Elected as Officers to International Organization

Two faculty members were recently elected to offices with the state affiliate of the international organization Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages. Dr. Martha S. Conaway, assistant professor and teacher in the Department of Learning Skills since 1976, will serve as president of KyTESOL, and Joy Allameh, assistant professor and English teacher, was elected first vice president. Conaway received her bachelor's degree from the University of Kentucky, her master's from ECU, and her doctorate from Southern Illinois University. Allameh earned the bachelor's degree from Middle Tennessee and his master's from the University of Arkansas.

ECU and UK Cosponsor Annual Educators Conference

Eastern Kentucky University and the University of Kentucky cosponsored the national conference of the Association for General and Liberal Studies Nov. 10-12, at the Hyatt Regency in Lexington.

AGLS represents a wide variety of private and public institutions of higher education and is the only national group devoted to undergraduate general education.

Dr. Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, addressed the conference on Thursday, Nov. 10. Dr. Boyer, former U.S. Commissioner of Education, was named by U.S. News and World Report as one of America's outstanding leaders in education.

Sixteen faculty members from ECU and 13 from UK were among the distinguished educators conducting sessions around the conference theme, "A Quest for Common Learning." □

Lane Completes Successful Freshman Cross Country Season

When Barb Lane, a freshman from Allentown, Pa., came to practice for the Eastern cross country team, no one anticipated her winning the Ohio Valley Conference individual title and help EKU defend its OVC crown.

"It was a big accomplishment," said EKU assistant coach, Brian Andrews. "We never thought she'd be as good as she is."

In her first collegiate competition at the Western Kentucky University Invitational, Lane ran her best time for the season at 17:44 and placed second. She kept up the pace and continued to place first or second for the remainder of the season.

Her latest accomplishment occurred at the NCAA regionals in South Carolina. Lane finished 27th in a region that teammate Maria Pazarentzos describes as "the toughest region in the NCAA."

"Barb's a great runner," said Pazarentzos. "She's got confidence and she's not intimidated by anyone."

Lane graduated from Dieruff High School in Allentown where she ran track for three years and cross country for two years. In her senior year, she was runner-up in the Pennsylvania 2-mile run.

"I always like running," said Lane. "I wasn't planning on going to college, but after state, I was aware that schools were interested in me."

Lane comes from a close family with four sisters and five brothers. Her sisters ran some in school, but she was the only one to pursue running. "My family has been very supportive of whatever I do," said Lane.

Andrews describes Lane as "a shy and quiet person with high morals and standards. "That," he added, "is a tribute to her parents."

According to Andrews, "Barb works as hard academically as she does physically. Her GPA is 3.0 or better." Lane plans on majoring in special education.

Swimmers' Hopes High As Strong Nucleus Returns

This year's edition of Eastern's Electrifying Eels is expected to be one of Coach Dan Lichty's best teams in years. Although relatively small in numbers (17 swimmers and four divers), the Eels hope to combine separate strong groups of returnees and freshmen into one versatile group.

Four school record-holders return to this year's squad. Co-captain Brian Conroy, the only senior on the team, currently holds records in the 100 and 200-yard freestyles, and 100 and 200 yard backstrokes.

Conroy

Vennefron

Junior Don Combs holds both the 100 and 200-yard breaststroke marks but will also be counted on in the individual medley events. Junior co-captain Scott Vennefron owns the 200-yard butterfly record but will also see action in distance freestyle events. And sophomore Mark Maher, the 50 yard-freestyle record holder, will also swim other sprint and middle distance events.

"In addition to giving us a great deal of versatility, these four individuals form the inspirational nucleus of our team," said Lichty. "We will count heavily on them this year."

Other returning lettermen who will be expected to make major contributions include junior Ben Meisenheimer, a middle distance freestyler, and sophomore Mike Strange, a sprint and middle distance freestyler who may also be used as a backstroker.

Expected to add depth to the Eastern line-up this year will be juniors Ted Avbeck, Guy Frable, and Eric Smith and sophomores Steve Amundson, Scott Ward, and Will Weisman.

Lichty and assistant Tim Cahill have also rounded up an impressive group of freshmen who will be counted on to add to the versatility and overall strength of the team.

Steve Dial, a middle distance freestyler and Jim Rainey, who swims the distance events, are both from Akron, Ohio. Breaststroker Mike Kirsch and sprinter Dave Mercer both hail from Sarasota, Fla. and Brey Reddick, a butterfly and distance freestyler, is from Knoxville, Tenn.

"Our freshmen will definitely make a positive contribution to our team," said Lichty. "They are capable of swimming team-record times this year."

A group of four divers rounds out the squad. Sophomore Mark Eschlimier, who has been injured during much of the preseason, will nonetheless be expected to be a big point producer this year, as will junior Karen Hofmann, sophomore Melanie McIntosh, and freshman Amy Henderson.

Golfers Close Fall Season: Eye Third OVC Crown

Eastern's golf team closed its fall campaign with an impressive seventh place finish out of 23 schools in the Duke University Invitational.

"We beat some top-notch programs in North Carolina State, William and Mary, Georgia Tech and Maryland," said Dr. Paul Motley, coach of the Colonels.

Eastern, with a 42-21 overall record against opponents this fall, is now looking forward to defending its OVC championship this spring.

"I'm satisfied with our performance this fall," said Motley. "Our fall schedule allowed our players to gain experience on other golf courses. We're working our way to winning the OVC and you do that with experience."

The bright spots for the Colonels were the four mainstays in their starting five: Kelly Finney, Barry Wehrman, Russ Barger and Tim Duignan.

Motley's main concern in the coming season is filling the crucial fifth position in the Colonel line-up.

"We couldn't seem to get our fifth

...a matter

offer in fall tournament play to carry his share of the load," said Motley. "We're looking for at least one of our other golfers to come forth and solidify our team."

Motley plans to bolster his team's performance with off-season strength and conditioning programs. Considered unorthodox by some coaches, the workouts will continue throughout the bad-weather months.

"Golf is an athletic event and you have to be an athlete to compete. I noticed our swings worsening in the later rounds. We will be physically ready by February," said Motley.

Four Sign Early Letters With Basketball Teams

Head basketball coaches Max Good and Mr. Dianne Murphy took advantage of the early signing period in November to ink their new players.

Joining the men's program is 6-6, 195-pound forward Shawnie Anderson from Detroit, Mich., while the Eastern women's team added Angela Fletcher, a 5-9 guard from Roane State Community College in Harriman, Tenn.; Julie Levis, a 5-8 guard from Oldham County High School; and Heidi Gast, a 5-6 guard from Marble Head, Ohio.

Anderson, who averaged 18 points per game for coach Winfield Henry at Central High School in Detroit last year as a junior, was an All-City choice last season despite breaking his wrist midway through the '82-'83 season.

"We are very pleased to have Shawnie join our program after his senior year completed," said Good. "He is an excellent run-and-jump athlete who should help us."

Anderson was picked as one of the top 60 forwards in the nation by one preseason publication and as one of the top 10 players in Michigan by another, basketball talent scout Bill Cronauer. He has a big reason Central High advanced to the regionals in Michigan's high school post-season play last year.

"They are really fine players," said Murphy. "We're extremely pleased to have signed them and look for them to make definite contributions next season."

Murphy noted that personnel at the point guard position was her top priority since Eastern has three seniors at that position, including All-OVC Lisa Gooden, on this year's team.

Footballers Finish '83 Year With 3-1 Record

Coach Roy Kidd and his Colonels completed a successful football season recently, accomplishing several goals the team had set prior to the opening of the '83 season.

"We wanted to win the OVC and go to the playoffs again," said Kidd. "And, when you look at how young we really are, we're thankful we were able to do that. We would, of course, liked to have advanced further but turnovers killed us against Boston University."

EKU won the OVC title outright for the third consecutive year, the first time that's been accomplished by any OVC team since the league's inception.

The Colonels' dreams of advancing to a fifth consecutive NCAA Division I-AA national championship game, however, ended quickly with the 24-20 loss to BU.

"You can't have that many turnovers (three fumbles lost and a fumble by EKU punter Steve Rowe) against a playoff team and expect to win," Kidd said.

Eastern, during the course of the '83 season, set many school and conference records, including five by senior place-kicker Jamie Lovett.

Lovett's records included: most field goals - 5 vs. Youngstown State; most points scored by kicking - 16 vs. YSU; longest field goal - 50 vs. YSU; most field goals kicked in a career - 41; and most field goals attempted - 69.

Other Eastern team records were: most consecutive games without a loss - 18; most consecutive games won - 18; and most consecutive conference wins - 22 (also a new OVC record).

The 1983 season also saw senior tailback Terence Thompson of Owensboro become only the third runner in Eastern history to eclipse 3,000-yards rushing in his career. He finished the season with 836 yards rushing and eight TD's for the '83 year, giving him 3,015 yards and 29 TD's for his four-year stint at Eastern.

Six Eastern Colonels also made the All-OVC team. These include Tron Armstrong, senior flanker, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Chris Sullivan, senior center, New Port Richey, Fla.; Mike Bobek, senior offensive tackle, Port Richey, Fla.; Mike McShane senior noseguard, St. Petersburg, Fla.; David Hill, senior linebacker, Miami, Fla.; and Anthony Jones, junior roverback, Ocala, Fla. Kidd and Middle Tennessee's Boots Donnelly were chosen co-OVC Coach of the Year.

Myers Is Assistant Women's Basketball Coach

Linda Myers has been appointed as an assistant coach for women's basketball.

Myers joins the Colonels after serving as an assistant coach at Florida International University in Miami. She was also a graduate assistant coach at Slippery Rock University where she graduated with honors with a B.S. degree in health and physical education.

Myers played intercollegiate basketball at Slippery Rock, where she holds several playing records. She was also nominated as CoSIDA Academic All-American in 1981.

Her duties include scouting, on the floor coaching, and the coordination of the student athlete's academic progress for women's basketball.

Women's Cross Country Team Defends Title

For the second straight year, the women's cross country team captured the Ohio Valley Conference title.

Alexa Cornett, MA '76, chats with Angie Young, a freshman from Harrodsburg prior to the fall meeting of the Perry County Alumni Chapter. Alexa, the president of the chapter, made the arrangements, while Angie provided the musical entertainment for the evening.

Eastern finished with 30 points, followed by Murray State with 52 points and Austin Peay with 76 points.

Barb Lane, Eastern's outstanding freshman, won first place with a time of 17:57. "That was a real achievement for Barb," said Erdmann. Finishing fourth and sixth were Maria Pazarentzos and Pam Raglin with times of 18:47 and 19:05, respectively.

Linda Davis and Barb Fennell finished ninth and 10th in clockings of 19:35 and 19:36. Finishing 11th and 12th were Fudgie Cuthbert and Paulie Garrett with times of 19:40 and 19:45, respectively.

"The obvious reason for our success is that we had seven girls in the top 12," said Erdmann. "All our runners have improved this season. It was a little disappointing that some runners didn't have their best race, though."

Eastern Alumni Secure Training Positions

Four graduates of Eastern have taken positions as athletic trainers at various educational institutions.

Anita Brown of Tinton Falls, New Jersey, has taken a position as athletic trainer and biology teacher at Robert E. Lee High School in Fairfax, Va. Ms. Brown received her M.S. degree in health education in 1983 from EKV.

Rick Zacholski of North Tonawanda, N.Y., has taken a position as athletic trainer at Sunset High School in Miami, Fla. He received his bachelor's degree in physical education in 1983.

Rochel Rittgers, a native of Des Moines, Iowa, has been named assistant athletic trainer at East Carolina University in Greenville, N.C. Ms. Rittgers received her master's degree in physical education in 1983.

Also, 1982 EKV graduate Kevin Kocks has been named head athletic trainer at Bellarmine College in Louisville. Kocks, from Traverse City, Mich., spent the 1982-83 academic year as a graduate assistant at Austin Peay State University.

Eastern Volleyball Team Wins Third OVC Title in a Row

It was a bittersweet victory for the Eastern Kentucky University women's volleyball team as it captured its third consecutive Ohio Valley Conference championship, but failed in its attempt to receive an NCAA tournament bid.

"The conference championship was the highlight of the season," said senior Patsy Schachnuk. "We were a completely different team than in the mid-season tournament."

"This was our last chance to show how good of a team we are," said senior Lori Duncan, who had to sit out the last half of the season with a leg injury.

Duncan probably described Eastern's season perfectly when she called it a "roller coaster" year.

The Colonels came into the season with guarded optimism as they lost their starting setter, a top reserve, and their star player, U.S. Olympic team member Deanne Madden.

The team faced a schedule that was laden with nationally-ranked teams including the No. 2 team in the country, the University of Pacific.

Eastern rolled through the early part of the season finishing first in the consolation bracket of the UK Invitational, and it also became the first team in the nation to beat Pacific by a score of 15-5.

The Colonels were able to regroup as they finished second in the OVC mid-season tourney and went undefeated through their own Colonel Classic.

Men's Cross Country Team Captures OVC Crown

Coming off a year's absence of competition, the men's cross country team claimed the Ohio Valley Conference title.

Eastern collected 46 points for first place, followed by Middle Tennessee with 49. Murray State came in third with 52 points, followed by the defending champion, Akron, with 90 points.

According to Rick Erdmann, Eastern's coach, the 10,000-meter course was a tough one. "It was the most challenging I've ever seen. It included a 3/4-mile hill," he noted.

Ron King, a senior, led Eastern's team placing fifth with a time of 33:25, his best race ever. Placing sixth for Eastern was Jay Hodges with a time of 33:26.

"Jay could have been the top contender," said Erdmann. "He hadn't run in two weeks due to an injury."

Placing seventh and eighth for Eastern were Andy Mueller and Stephen Duffy with the times of 33:29 and 33:30.

"Mueller and Duffy ran well," said Erdmann. "They beat guys from Murray that had beaten them earlier this season."

According to Erdmann, the lead changed hands throughout the race. "The key to our success was that we had four guys in the top 10 only five seconds apart," Erdmann concluded.

Rob Long Appointed Men's Basketball Assistant

Eastern has announced the appointment of Rob Long as assistant men's basketball coach.

Long, 28, comes to Eastern from Cumberland College where he has been a full-time assistant coach.

"Rob brings five years of experience with him, which should make the adjustment period very rapid and very minimal," said head coach Max Good. "I know Rob will be a big asset to our program."

Long, a native of Middlesboro, is a 1977 graduate of Findlay College where he played four years of basketball and four years of baseball. He was an All-Hoosier-Buckeye Conference pick in both sports at Findlay.

In 1977-78, he attended Indiana University where he served as a graduate assistant in physical education and received his master's degree. He was an assistant coach at Findlay in 1978-79 when that team went 18-8 and participated in the regional playoffs.

"I wanted to advance to the Division I level, and I feel that Eastern is a good program on the move," said Long. "EKU and Richmond have a lot to offer the student athlete. There is a lot of potential here. I think a lot of coach Good and his philosophy and am anxious to start working with him and coach (John) Ferguson."

While at Cumberland, those teams went to the national tourney three of the four seasons Long was an assistant, including last season's 32-2 record and sixth place national ranking.

Eastern Takes on International Flavor - Volleyball Style

While Los Angeles gears up for the 1992 Olympics, Eastern took on an international flavor as 50 coaches from nine foreign countries and the United States participated in the sixth International Volleyball Federation (IVBF) sponsored coaches course in this country.

Val Keller, of Huntington Beach, Cal., director of the IVBF Coaches Course, described the two-week courses offering an extraordinary experience for a volleyball coach as the latest techniques, tactics, and strategies of the world's best teams were emphasized.

This is the second time the course was held on the EKU campus. Instructors included three of the world's leading volleyball authorities who have been involved in Olympic coaching. They included Miloslav Ejem, past director of the Czechoslovakia Olympic athlete development program and current club team coach in Finland and a member of the International Coaches Commission; Gabriel Cherebetiu, of Romania, president of the IVBF Medical Commission and director of sports medicine research for Mexico; and Tien Hsien, Venezuelan former Venezuelan national coach and member of the IVBF Coaches Commission. □

Members of the Executive Council of the Alumni Association and their spouses served as judges for the various Homecoming competitions. Here, Jim Lockwood, Marilyn P. Lockwood, '68 MA '69, and Jamie Goodlett compare notes after observing the dormitory decorations.
