Coach Kidd Announces Retirement After 39 Years

Legendary EKU head football coach Roy Kidd has announced his retirement, effective at the end of the 2002 season.

Kidd, who is serving his 39th year as the Colonels' head coach, steps down after establishing one of the most successful college football programs in America.

"This is a bittersweet day for Eastern Kentucky University's intercollegiate athletics program, and the entire EKU Family," said President Glasser. "For 39 seasons, Coach Roy Kidd has set a high standard of excellence and reminded us what is best about college sports.

"All his victories, championships and honors only begin to reflect the impact he has had on our University, the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and beyond," she continued. "It is his players, and their successes, who offer the best testament to Coach Kidd's unique ability to help young men make the most of their time here, and in their lives beyond this campus."

Kidd has put together a I-AA football program acknowledged throughout the country, year in and year out, as one of the nation's elite. He has produced 24 straight EKU teams with winning seasons and 29 consecutive Eastern teams with non-losing seasons. There have been only two losing seasons at EKU in his 39-year tenure.

"Roy Kidd is truly one of the legendary football coaches in America and, certainly, in the history of college football," said EKU Interim Athletics Director Jack Lengyel. "His record speaks for itself.

"His 39 years of coaching football at his alma mater, Eastern Kentucky, stands as a monument to his loyalty and dedication to the University, the game of football and to his student-athlete players.

"While we will miss his presence on the football field, he will always be a part of Eastern Kentucky University, as will his wife Sue, who has been his 'assistant head coach' throughout his career."

After Saturday's win over Glenville State, Kidd stands in seventh place on the NCAA's all-time Division I-A and I-AA coaching list for most victories. His record now stands at 310-121-8.

Ranking ahead of him on this Most Victories list are a Who's Who of collegiate coaches, including, in order: Eddie Robinson, Joe Paterno, Bobby Bowden, Bear Bryant, Pop Warner and Amos Alonzo Stagg.

After Saturday's 55-0 defeat of Glenville State College, Kidd stands just four victories behind Stagg, who accumulated 314 wins as head coach at the University of Pacific.

Along the way, his 38 Eastern Kentucky teams have won two NCAA I-AA national championships, two national runnersup titles and 16 Ohio Valley Conference championships. He has also directed Eastern Kentucky to 17 I-AA playoff appearances, the most by any school in the nation.

A native of Corbin, where he starred in football, basketball and baseball, Kidd chose COLONEL COACH RETIRING – Head football Coach Roy Kidd was joined by President Glasser and his wife, Sue, after a news conference Monday, Sept. 30, at which he announced his retirement after 39 years as Colonel coach.

Eastern Kentucky over the University of Kentucky under Bear Bryant's tutelage because EKU would let him play both baseball and football.

That decision set forth a legacy that is unmatched at all but one I-AA school (Robinson's Grambling) and just five other programs in the history of college football.

After a four-year career at Eastern Kentucky that produced Little All-America notice for him in 1953 in football, Kidd stayed as a graduate assistant coach at Eastern for the next season.

He then was named head coach of tiny Richmond Madison High School (1956-61) where his teams, in six seasons, won 54 and lost just 10. During that period, his Royal Purples had a 27-game winning streak and, in one 21-game stretch, Kidd's Madison teams gave up just 15 points.

He spent the 1962 season as an assistant coach at Morehead State University before returning in 1963 to his alma mater to serve as an assistant coach for Eastern head Coach Glenn Presnell.

One year later, Kidd received the call from Eastern President Dr. Robert R. Martin offering him the position as EKU's head coach. Kidd's first season at the helm of the Eastern Kentucky football program (1964) produced just one of two losing seasons in the 38 years to follow as the Colonels went 3-5-1.

It only took Kidd and his staff four seasons to turn that around and produce an Ohio Valley Conference championship in 1967 that culminated with a 27-13 Grantland Rice Bowl victory over Ball State which gave the Colonels the NCAA Midwest Regional Championship. He followed that up the next season with a second OVC title as the Colonels went 8-2 behind quarterback Jim Guice and future American Football League Rookie of the Year, wide receiver Aaron Marsh.

Between 1968 and the formation of Division I-AA by the NCAA in 1978, Eastern's teams produced winning seasons, collected two more conference crowns (1974 and 1976) and competed in the NCAA Division II playoffs in 1976.

EKU football's decade of the '80s, arguably the most prestigious by any I-AA football program ever, produced seven conference championships, three trips to the NCAA title game and one remarkable 13-0 season that ended with the Colonels' second national title. Two other Colonel teams were eliminated in the national semifinals and a third Colonel squad made it to the quarterfinal round of the I-AA playoffs before losing.

Kidd-coached Eastern teams made seven more trips to the I-AA playoffs in the '90s with EKU securing five additional OVC crowns during this 10-year span.

During the past 38½ football seasons at Eastern, there have been two National I-AA Coach of the Year awards, 10 OVC Coach of the Year honors, 55 EKU All-Americans, 197 first team All-OVC players, a term as president of the American Football Coaches Association ... all with Roy Kidd's named stamped beside them.

New Memorial Honors Former Students, Firefighters

A memorial will be dedicated Friday, Oct. 18 to the memory of students in EKU's Fire and Safety Engineering Technology Program and to all firefighters.

A public ceremony has been scheduled at 9 a.m. at the site of the memorial on the front lawn of the Ashland Building.

The 13-by-6-foot granite monument, adorned with a bronze plaque, will be surrounded by four newly planted trees, three that honor former students of the program who have died in recent years – Aaron Robichaux, Richard Washburn and Christopher Young – and one to recognize the sacrifices of firefighters on Sept. 11, 2001. An antique turn-of-the-century chemical fire extinguisher also will be stationed on the site of the memorial.

The idea for the memorial took shape with students in the Association of Fire Science Technicians.

"The students thought it would be appropriate to honor the memory of students who gave so much to the program here," said Shane LaCount, visiting professor and co-adviser to the group. "We wanted something meaningful for the families and alumni."

The 80-member association helped to raise about $11,000 in cash and in-kind donations from members of the campus community and public.

The ceremony is scheduled for Homecoming Weekend to maximize alumni attendance and participation. A College of Justice & Safety golf tournament is scheduled that afternoon and the College's Alumni Society Awards Brunch will be held the following morning.

Robichaux, from Opelousas, La., was a senior nearing completion of a bachelor's degree in fire and safety engineering technology when he died in 1989.

Washburn earned a bachelor's degree in the program in May 1995, graduating with a perfect 4.0 GPA. Until his death in September of that year, the Connecticut native had served for four years as an instructor on the Kentucky Tech Fire/Rescue Training Staff and was the acting/interim fire training coordinator for a 17-county region of central Kentucky. He also was an active member of the White Hall Volunteer Fire Department in northern Madison County.

Young, from Finleyville, Pa., was majoring in fire and safety engineering technology when he died in 1997. He also had been a member of the Valley Inn Fire Department in his hometown.

Air Force Band Presents Free Concert

The United States Air Force Band of Flight will present a free concert at EKU on Monday, Oct. 21.

The event will begin at 8 p.m. in Brock Auditorium. The public is welcome.

The band, based at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio, and under the command of Lt. Col. Alan Sierichs, annually travels over 100,000 miles to present more than 450 performances.

The band's 60 full-time musicians make up a number of smaller groups. The Concert Band performs a wide spectrum of music, from the standard repertoire and commissioned works to original arrangements of popular songs and Broadway show tunes. The jazz ensemble, Night Flight, plays contemporary jazz from today's great bands and keeps the Air Force heritage alive through the music of Major Glenn Miller. The Huffman Prairie Winds woodwind quintet performs standard quintet literature, commissioned works and special arrangements in a variety of chamber music settings. The Wright Brass quintet applies its talents to styles ranging from Bach to the Beatles. Systems Go, a popular music combo, plays everything from rock to rhythm and blues, and from country to jazz. The Contemporary Clarinet Quartet is one of the newest ensembles.

The Air Force band will be joined on one selection by a group of EKU student musicians.

Robertson Named Fulbright Senior Specialist

The director of EKU's Teaching and Learning Center will soon be lending his expertise to educational institutions worldwide.

Dr. Douglas Robertson, who has served as the Center's first full-time director since last year, has been named to the Fulbright Senior Specialists Program.

Robertson joins a roster of more than 700 senior specialists who may be asked to collaborate with professional counterparts internationally on curriculum and faculty development, present lectures, participate in or lead seminars, and participate in specialized academic programs and conferences, among other activities.

"I feel privileged and honored to receive this appointment," said Robertson, who will serve for five years. "It creates significant opportunities for me to provide service that combines my consulting with my interest in international higher education. Also, it gives me the chance to tell EKU's special story in other parts of the world."

Senior specialists are selected on the basis of recognized professional standing and achievements. Grants, which typically cover a 2- to 6-week period, include travel and per diem, plus a $200 a day honorarium.

Robertson came to EKU in 2001 from the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, where he was a professor of educational leadership and director of the University Teaching and Learning Center. He also has taught at Syracuse University and Marylhurst College and Portland State University in Oregon.

OkSOBERfest Raises Awareness Of Alcohol-Related Issues

The number of EKU students who typically abstain from alcohol is up to 43 percent.

Ever-dangerous binge drinking has decreased significantly.

On-campus alcohol-related violations have been cut in almost half.

Despite the progress, however, the work to educate students about the dangers of alcohol abuse is never ending.

That's the reason for OkSOBERfest, a month-long observance at EKU designed to raise awareness about healthy lifestyle choices. Activities will include public forums, demonstrations, displays, an interactive awareness program and a concert/dance.

"We look at alcohol use on a continuum," said Sandra Medley, staff psychologist with the Counseling Center and chair of the University's 14-member Substance Abuse Committee. "The safest choice is to abstain, but if students are going to drink we want them to make informed, lower-risk choices.

"We're excited about the continual decrease we're seeing," she added. "The vast majority of EKU students don't drink in a high-risk way."

In fact, recent survey results indicate that 74 percent of EKU students drink five or fewer drinks a week. Compared to drinking patterns at other colleges and universities, Eastern ranks about average.

The schedule of OkSOBERfest events follows:

Monday, Oct. 7 – Community Forum on Alcohol Issues, 6 p.m., Perkins Building, sponsored by Madison County Community Partnership. Discussion topics include underage drinking, alcohol sales to minors, perceptions of law enforcement and research results. Candidates in local elections will be present.

Friday, Oct. 18 – Drunk Driving Simulator, 11 a.m.-4 p.m., outside Powell Building. Participants can set a blood-alcohol content level and see what it would be like behind the wheel.

Tuesday, Oct. 22 – Natural High Day, 11 a.m.-2 p.m., outside Powell Building, information, giveaways, demonstrations, interactive awareness program with Men in Black and a "drinking wall," where members of the campus community can write how alcohol has affected their lives.

Thursday, Oct. 24 – "RockSOBER," giveaways, concert/dance. Details TBA.

In addition to the special events, residence halls will host alcohol-related displays.

Student Team Places Third in National Marketing Contest

A team composed of graduate and undergraduate students at EKU has finished third in the General Motors Marketing Internship national competition.

The team, which dubbed itself the EKU Pride Advertising Agency, developed and presented "Summer Vacation – The Ultimate Pontiac Road Trip," a promotion designed to increase awareness among Eastern students of the Pontiac Vibe product line and the Sid Adams Pontiac-Buick-GMC dealership in Richmond.

"Considering this was the first time Eastern had ever participated in this contest, winning third place was absolutely phenomenal," said Dr. S.J. Garner, professor in the Department of Management, Marketing and Administrative Communication, who taught the two classes that joined efforts for the project. "It says our students are extremely hard-working and creative, and that our marketing classes are successful."

The highlight of the spring semester-long effort was a 4½-hour on-campus event where the Pontiac Vibe, Grand Am and Aztek were displayed in creative situational themes so students could enjoy an afternoon of fun and learn more about the products. Games, contests and special music added to the festive atmosphere.

If the judges were impressed with the effort, the dealership's owner, Sid Adams, was ecstatic about the results.

Bottom line: thanks to an event attendance of almost 1,100 prospective customers, student awareness of the local dealership jumped from 41 to 74 percent.

After establishing a theme, the students – 19 undergraduates in an Advertising Campaigns class supervised by seven MBA students in a Promotional Seminar course – were split into teams and spent a considerable portion of the semester conducting research and creating an advertising strategy not to exceed a fixed budget of $2,500.

EKU Conducting Stream Restoration/Reforestation Project

EKU has received $7,000 to help conduct a stream restoration and reforestation project along a section of Muddy Creek that runs through the University's Meadowbrook Farm.

The Bluegrass PRIDE Community Grant will be used to purchase native trees that will be planted in a mile-long "riparian corridor" along the stream to prevent erosion and reduce sediment pollution. Members of the campus community and public will be invited to participate in a daylong gala at the farm next spring to plant the tree seedlings.

EKU's Center for Appalachian Studies is collaborating with the University's Division of Farms and the Division of Facilities Services to oversee the project, and is seeking additional funds to install fencing along the creek corridor to reduce cattle access to the creek, which will further reduce erosion and fecal coliform contamination.

Dr. Alan Banks, director of the Center, termed the site "ideal for a demonstration project of best management practices" for several reasons:

- The location on a university farm will allow for "innumerable" educational opportunities, for EKU and local K-12 students.
- The Muddy Creek Watershed is one of five "megasites" identified by the Kentucky Chapter of the Nature Conservancy for landscape-scale conservation efforts, and one of only two sites where the Conservancy has partnered with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife to hire a basin-wide conservation manager.
- The site is in the middle of a series of stream meanders, which produce highly diverse ecosystems. "Therefore, restoration efforts should have a high payoff in terms of preservation and conservation of aquatic species."

- Because the site is located downstream from the Blue Grass Army Depot and a Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Management Area, the collaborative partnerships permit a "unique opportunity to produce dramatic improvements in water quality in a relatively short time frame," possibly as soon as 2-3 years, Banks said.

"We're all coming to realize the importance of water," Banks said, "and that water is the litmus test for everything that goes on all around it."

Farmers are "the original environmentalists," said Michael Judge, EKU director of farms. "We base our livelihoods on renewable resources. Even so, we still need to take the lead on using environmentally sound practices. Being affiliated with the University, it is our responsibility to take a leadership role in new and sometimes controversial projects. By doing this project, we will not only help protect the Muddy Creek watershed, but we will be setting an example for others to follow."

Previously, the University received a $17,000 grant from the Kentucky Water Resources Research Institute to launch a project, "Linking Land Use to Water Quality in the Muddy Creek Subbasin of the Kentucky River." The grant enabled a partnership between several EKU faculty members and Tom Edwards of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife/Nature Conservancy.

Five students from four different academic disciplines are working as research assistants on the Muddy Creek project: a geography major is developing a series of Geographic Information Systems (GIS) maps; two earth science students are collecting water samples; a chemistry major is helping to analyze the water samples; and a wildlife management major will join the team soon to help identify and map locations of remnant patches of native prairie grass in the county.

In addition, 16 students in Dr. Alice Jones' spring semester class on Land Use and Environmental Planning examined the Watershed locations where growth and development threatened to destroy native prairie grasses.

Such projects "make textbook learning more relevant," Jones said, "and help students integrate knowledge rather than memorize it and spit it back."

More details about the community workday will be announced next spring. Individuals and groups interested in helping may contact Banks at 622-1622 or Judge at 622-1310.

Kits Offered to Help Test Local Water

Three EKU departments are joining with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife to encourage students, staff, faculty, alumni and community members to take part in National Water Monitoring Day on Oct. 18, sponsored by the American Clean Water Foundation, by helping perform simple tests in safe, accessible water streams in Madison County.

The departments of Geography, Earth Science, and Chemistry will provide water test kits and training for interested groups and individuals who are willing to gather and submit data between Oct. 12-27 from four key tests: dissolved oxygen, pH, turbidity/clarity and temperature.

"The samplings require no special skills and can be performed by youth ages 8 and up," said Dr. Alice Jones, associate professor of geography and coordinator of the project. "It takes only a few minutes per site, and interested groups and individuals are encouraged to choose their own testing sites.

"Community members with access to creeks or streams on farms or other private property are particularly encouraged to participate," she said.

Tests involve pretreated strips and dissolving tablets similar to those used in spas and pools; dissolved oxygen and pH tests use a premeasured tablet that is dissolved in the water. More experienced volunteers may also complete more technical analyses such as macroinvertebrate counts (bugs) at their testing sites.

National Water Monitoring Day is part of "2002: The Year of Clean Water," proclaimed by Congress in commemoration of the 30th anniversary of the Clean Water Act. The event is planned to increase the citizens' awareness of their role in protecting and preserving the quality of the nation's waters by assisting in this national test.

To participate, contact Jones at 622-1424 or alice.jones@eku.edu before Oct. 10.

Peterman Highlights Libraries' Autumn Voices Lecture Series

A talk by Lexington-based businessman John Peterman highlights the annual Autumn Voices Lecture Series sponsored by EKU Libraries.

Peterman, who achieved national prominence with his quirky J Peterman catalogs, will speak Tuesday, Oct. 15, at 7 p.m. in the Grand Reading Room of Crabbe Library. His appearance is sponsored by EKU's College of Business & Technology.

The J Peterman Co. folded in 1999, but resurfaced two years later. In his book "Peterman Rides Again," Peterman explains how to turn dreams into action and how true passion and drive are not defeated by failure, but applied instead to a new venture.

Other lectures in the month-long series, all at 7 p.m. in the Grand Reading Room, are:

- Tuesday, Oct. 8, Crystal Wilkinson, poet, writer, EKU graduate, member of the Affrilachian Poets and currently the Visiting Writer in Residence at EKU. Her poetry and short fiction has appeared in Obsidian II: Black Literature in Review, Calyx, The Briar Cliff Review, African Voices and Eclipsing a Nappy New Millennium. Her first collection of short stories, "Blackberries, Blackberries," was published in 2000, and her second release, "Water Street 1979," appeared on bookstore shelves this month. Sponsored by the EKU College of Arts & Sciences.

- Tuesday, Oct. 22, Tom Thurman, a filmmaker from Shelby County. After receiving degrees from Centre College and the University of Kentucky, Thurman taught literature and film studies courses at Tulane University and Berea College. He has produced and directed seven independent documentaries for public and commercial television stations, including "A History of Basketball in Kentucky: Great Balls of Fire," a four-hour, $800,000 documentary, narrated by National Public Radio host Bob Edwards. Sponsored by the EKU College of Health Sciences.
- Tuesday, Oct. 29, Janie Webster Leech, author of "Fingernail Moon," recipient of the Gold Medallion Book Award and a visiting professor in EKU's Department of Geography. The book tells the story of how, to protect her young daughter from being sexually abused, Leech and her daughter embarked on a five-year journey around the world, establishing new lives in the countries where they stayed. Sponsored by the EKU College of Justice & Safety. For more information, call 622-3052.

Employee Assistance Program Available

An Employee Assistance Program is now available to all benefit-eligible employees.

This new benefit is an enhancement to the University's group Life and Long Term Disability through UnumProvident and is provided at no cost to the employee. The Program, titled LifePhases, is designed to help employees balance work and personal life. Eligible employees will be receiving detailed information and a Universal Access Card through campus mail within the next couple of weeks. The Universal Access Card is the ticket to access the provided services that are designed to address a range of employee benefit needs, providing easy access to information through toll free numbers. Program offerings include:

- LifeBalance® Program. Available to the employee and family, the program is designed to help address life's daily challenges, from workplace stress to family issues like parenting, education, aging, financial and legal questions. It provides 24-hour access to professional advice, including face-to-face visits when needed.
- Transition Insurance Options. Quality coverages are offered based on your needs when you change employers or retire. An easy way to access an array of individual insurance products at preferred costs.
- assist america®. This 24-hour network of emergency medical and legal resources officer valuable protections when the employee travels more than 100 miles from home. With just one call, covered employees and their families have access to qualified professionals trained to manage any travel emergency.

Non-benefit-eligible employees experiencing workplace or family issues may contact Human Resources for assistance and referrals.

WOW Wagon to Visit Campus

The Human Resources Benefit section has made arrangements to have the Madison County's Health Department WOW Wagon visit campus on Oct. 16 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The WOW Wagon, which was started in 1998, is a mobile source of positive health information. The WOW Wagon serves schools and businesses in Central Kentucky by providing brochures, interactive displays and presentations on a variety of issues. Information regarding the Kentucky Children's Insurance Program will also be available on the Wagon. On this visit the staff of the WOW wagon will be prepared to conduct blood pressure checks and other simple health screenings.

The services of the WOW Wagon are absolutely free and the health messages presented are appropriate for people of any age or background.

The WOW wagon will be set up at the Keen Johnson Building from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and will then move to the vicinity of Facilities Services from 1 to 3 p.m.

If response is positive we will plan on future visits. For more information, contact Human Resources.
