December -- 1944 Model

H. V. Porter

THE LAST grains in the year's sandglass sift down. Another December revives a mellowed attitude in the relationship of man to man and in man's tolerance of the other fellow's hopes and hobbies.

For a little while, the worthwhile important factors of living assume proper rank. Trivialities which have been inflated to cause misunderstandings, jealousies and intolerances are purged by a wave of belief in the code of conduct evolved through 20 centuries of effort by the leaders of men—striving to lift humanity to a level where altruism, good will and friendly regard are the guide for action.

TIME and this miracle that floods the mind at Christmas season, cover the scars of world strife and heal the hurts inflicted by the clash of ideas and ideals in the activity of every-day living. The individual is humble in his realization that his small worries and tantrums, and prejudices which seemed so important yesterday, are only purposeless fragments in a universe of order.

SCHOOL athletic groups are only individuals enmasse. The small rifts between those who coach or teach, or between those who are coached or taught, are only delaying flurries in the great purposeful movement toward a happy nation whose people are physically and mentally fit. Tranquility and altruism are attributes of such fitness and they flourish in the Christmas season. Yesterday's grudges and antipathies melt in a mellow glow of good-fellowship and neighborly exchange of greetings and gifts.

Happiness still abides in the minds of men.

December school athletic contests have their role in the holiday drama. The best code of sportsmanship is in those principles of unselfishness and fairness which are the permanent guide for human conduct and which are reaffirmed each Christmas season in song and ceremony.

THE BEST wish that can be made for you and yours is that this holiday season's spirit of good will and altruism may exist long before the candles are lit and that it will linger long after they have finished burning.

THAT WISH HAS BEEN MADE—
WITH THE MOON OVER THE LEFT SHOULDER,
AND WITH THE SMALL PRONG OF THE WISHBONE
PROPERLY HIDDEN UNDER A STONE.

Referees' Corner

By Charles J. Vettiner

Here's your old reporter again saying, "Hats Off" to that select group of Kentucky gentlemen, the referees of the state, who every week sacrifice sleep, A gasoline coupons, and a life of tranquility to lend their wind and whistles to the noble sport of basket ball.

Two new officials have made their appearances in the Salt River Valley Conference this year. Astor Akers of Bloomfield and Lee Grigsby of Bardstown are roaming the hardwoods of that league and doing a good job.

The veteran, Harry Cover, of Cincinnati, a little heavier but still the same old efficient Harry is puffing up and down the courts of Northern Kentucky doing double duty holding the fort until our fighting officials call five personals on the German Reich.

Officials from many sections of Kentucky are all agreed that full houses are the "Order of the Day" at basket ball games this season. Early games have found lots of fans attending and sportsmanlike conduct abounding. The excellent jobs our principals and coaches have been doing the past years teaching the boys and spectators sportsmanship is beginning to tell.

This Corner salutes Lyman Ginger, John Showalter, S. B. Tracy and E. C. Cooke who generously gave their officiating services to a grand cause on Thanksgiving Day. These men handled the Oleika Temple's annual charity football game at Lexington, the proceeds going to the brace fund for crippled children. Let's all remember that you don't get paid for working that game or those charity Polio games, which come later, but you're lots richer for having done so.

John Heldman, University of Louisville, seems to have led all other referees to the starting post by signing up in early November to call a district tournament which, by the way, does not take place until March.

The "Corner" would like to toss a bouquet in the direction of Don Hill, sports' announcer for Radio Station WAVE. This likeable chap is the kind of reporter who gives an official the benefit of a doubt. Always slow to censure any referee Don is doing much to improve relationship between officials and spectators. No good official minds a healthy "boo" occasionally but what most of the boys object to is the reporter who uses up space telling the mistakes of the official and fails to give an account of the game.

Are you getting gasoline for officiating? Last season it seems that some boards allotted extra gasoline while others did not. A letter from Paul Dexheimer, O. P. A. Office in Louisville, says that occupational gasoline is all that is provided for coaches and officials. That's all we ever wanted.

Plan now to take the examination which will be given to allow basket ball officials an opportunity to increase their ratings. To be certified means to be placed on the list of officials eligible to work the State Tournament. Analyze those rules and score that necessary 90%.

Remember Willard Day, the old Western flash! The coaches dream of a half-back. That's what we used to call him. He's officiating regularly around Fort Knox. I saw Willard in Hodgenville the other night trying to buy a new referee's shirt. If he finds one anywhere he'll be lucky.

Buffalo has added a contribution to the ranks of the Kentucky officials in the person of Jimmie McLain. Seeing him handle the Hodgenville-Memorial game stamps him as a coming official if Uncle Sammie lets him alone for awhile.

The article by W. A. Rex, Mayfield, in last month's Athlete was certainly timely and "on the ball." When Mr. Rex pointed out that few fans knew the rules he had something. It's a cinch that the fans, who do the most booing at games, nine times out of ten know only one rule of basketball, that one being that a score has been made when the ball goes in the basket.

When an official goes to Carrollton to work a ball game he gets service that was hard to get in the Waldorf-Astoria before the war. As he walks into the gym he is met by a manager who escorts him to a private dressing room, equipped with a private shower and a full length locker. Lying on a bench waiting for him to use are two towels. Best of all, waiting for him after the game is Talton Stone with a fist full of American money.

The former Burgin coach and ex-Centre College star, J. W. Cooper, cut some fancy officiating capers last season and is around again this year with his whistle. John hung a lot of well-called ball games on his belt last year and is roaming the neighborhood courts about Danville regularly.

Let's close this December session by looking at a situation which might happen at any time. The new rule says that it is a technical foul if a coach fails to submit a list of his subs as well as his starting line-up to the scorer before the game. What would you do in this case?

The game starts and the scorers notice that Coach Dy Hard has not listed anyone except his starting five. Referee O. Howe Dumm, who knows the rules since he attended a clinic at Sleepy Hollow, starts to award the opposing team a technical foul but Coach Hard says, "Whoa there, Bud, I am not using any substitutes." Referee Dumm sees logic in the coach's remark and does not award a technical. Was he correct?

Oswald Tower, the highest authority on rules since he edits them, says that obviously no foul can be awarded if Coach Dy Hard does not intend to use any substitutes. However, if later in the game he sends in a substitute, it is not only a technical foul for not listing his subs but also is a technical foul on the coach for trying to get around the rule. Call it unsportsmanlike conduct if you like.

Your old whistler is signing off now advising all of his officiating friends that it is up to them to make this "Corner" sizzle. What do you know that the rest of us should know?

In the November issue of the magazine, the names of C. T. McKown, M. P. Laster, and W. A. Rex appeared in the list of "Certified" officials. The correct rating of these gentlemen is "Approved".

The correct address of basketball official Elmer D. Fulton is Maysville, not Marysville.

The names of Lawrence Carter, J. S. Richardson, and John Showalter appeared in the list of basketball officials. These names should have appeared in the supplementary list of football officials. Mr. Showalter is registered in both sports.

Go With The Lease

MILWAUKEE.—Bill Chandler is glad that his son, Bill, Jr., is back for another season as a Marquette guard, his fifth on the Hilltop. Young Chandler, all-western backcourt man last winter, is a Navy V-12 trainee, and therefore still eligible under relaxed wartime rules.

William S. Chandler, Sr., is in his 15th campaign as the Marquette coach. An all-western center at Wisconsin and a star at Great Lakes during World War I, he coached at River Falls Wis., Teachers and at Iowa State before moving to Milwaukee.

Marquette faces a tough schedule that includes home-and-home games with Wisconsin, Great Lakes, Notre Dame, Western Michigan, Truax Field and Lawrence and single engagements with Northwestern, DePaul of Chicago, Minnesota and Detroit. The Hilltoppers opened the grind with an 83-18 walkover against Milwaukee State Teachers.

Young Bill Chandler will help.

He's Had Enough

AUBURN, Ala.—After 12 seasons of football, Caleb Van (Tex) Warrington, Auburn's 1944 All-America center, is "not so sure" he wants any more.

He has preference for professional baseball over pro football, but the immediate objective of the 205-pound, six foot two inch ex-Marine is to finish college. It will take Warrington, now 23, another year to obtain a degree in business administration.

Married and the father of a month-old baby boy, named Caleb Van Warrington, III, the big center says of the future: "Eventually, I want to coach, but I'd like a fling at professional baseball."

Male 7-Manual 7

The ancient feud between the Brook Street schools of Louisville resulted in a 7-7 tie after reversing the opinions of experts, all of whom predicted a passing attack by Manual and an impregnable defense on the part of the Male line. To confound the dopesters Manual whisked through the Purple line and Male gained 69 yards to 5 for the Reds in the air. An effort to rematch the teams in the interest of the War Fund Drive or for charity was nullified by officials of the two schools.

Lexington 7—Harlan 0

Coach John G. Heber's Blue Devils carried too much power for the Coach Joe Gilly's Green Devils of Harlan in the Shrine game Thanksgiving Day. Lexington emerged the winner 7-0, and the crippled children were assured of "several thousand dollars" to be used for their recovery and rehabilitation.

Owensboro 39-Henderson 0

Owensboro buried Henderson 39-0 in the 46th renewal of their annual grid classic. Lee Truman and Raymond Flenor were the big guns of the Owensboro attack, the former reeling off runs of 45 and 41 yards for touchdowns while Flenor went through the line for 38 yards to score.

Princeton and Marion play scoreless tie. Sturgis 13-Morganfield 12. Bowling Green 41-Russellville 6. Oh, well! There's always next year!

Middlesboro Places 4, Harlan 3, On All-C.V.C.

By Clarence Greene,

Courier-Journal Correspondent

The Harlan Green Dragons, unofficial champions of the Cumberland Valley Conference, who will play in the Oleika Temple charity game in Lexington Thanksgiving Day, placed three players on the first eleven of The Courier-Journal's 1944 all-Cumberland Valley Conference team.

The Middlesboro Yellow Jackets added four from the squad that was unbeaten, untied and unscored on within the loop. Corbin placed one, Hall High came up with two, and Cumberland one.

The all-C.V.C. team for the past eight years has been chosen by The Courier-Journal's all-C.V.C. board of 19 members. Thirteen coaches and six newspapers—Harlan Daily Enterprise, Middlesboro Daily News, Corbin Times, Three States, Pineville Sun, and the Tri-City News took part in the poll.

Four players—Wallace Jones, right end; Ed Dunn, left tackle; King Rice, right tackle, and Bill Ausmus, center—are repeaters on the eleven. Jones, an all-state end last year, again was picked unanimously.

Jack Carey, Middlesboro fullback, received all 19 ballots. He is the fifth fullback from Middlesboro to make the all-Cumberland Valley Conference team.

The team averages 178 pounds.

Basketball Rule Comments

Early season meetings have brought out interesting discussions of several sections of the rules which are slightly different from those of last year.

Right To Cause Ball To Go To Back Court

This restriction is primarily meant to limit a player of the team which is in control, i.e., one who is holding the ball or is dribbling or one whose team is passing the ball. It is doubtful whether it should apply to a player who merely touches or bats the ball in an attempt to get it away from control of the opponent. The question of control is a vital factor in connection with the 10-second time limit and in connection with the starting of a dribble. As an illustration, a jumper who taps a jump ball is not considered as being in control (otherwise such taps would be the start of a dribble). The same principle applies to any player who taps the ball from a mass of players in an attempt to get it out where control can be secured, and it also applies to a player who bats the ball away from a dribbling opponent. The batted ball is not considered in control of the batting team in any of these cases and consequently is not considered the start of a dribble and if the back court is involved, the 10-second count is not started during such bat.

The same principle should probably apply to a player's right to cause the ball to go from front to back court. If it did, the following would not be violations:

Situation (a): During a jump ball near the division line but in A's front court, several players of A bat the ball in an attempt to get it away from a mass of players so that control may be secured. The ball rolls into the back court.

Situation (b): B1, in his back court (A's front court), is advancing the ball by dribble. A1 approaches from behind and at the side to hook the dribbled ball away from B1 and the batted ball goes into A's back court.

Situation (c): B1 and B2, in their back court (A's front court), are advancing the ball by passes. A1 comes from behind and bats one of these passes in an attempt to get the ball out where control may be secured by A. The batted ball goes into A's back court.

Situation (d): On jump near the division line but in A's front court, jumper A1 taps the ball once or twice and it goes into A's back court.

According to a strict interpretation of the letter of the rule, the only one of these acts which can be performed without committing a violation is the last one. However, many groups choose to assume that the real purpose of the rule is to prevent a player of the team in control from causing the ball to go to the back court and hence authorize officials to be liberal in the listed cases and to be guided by the spirit of the rule in this connection.

Changes In Re-Entry Rule

The new rule which permits a player to re-enter an unlimited number of times may cause more substitutions than in past years. To partially offset these expected delays, this year's rules are very definite in prescribing that the names and numbers of substitutes as well as starting players be given to the scorers two minutes before game time. Also, groups are requested to emphasize that portion of the substitution rule which states that when an official signals for the substitute to enter the court, he shall report immediately to the official. Both of these provisions are designed to prevent unnecessary delays. The supplying of all names and numbers before the game starts, will make it unnecessary for the scorer to interrupt his many duties at a busy time in the game to determine the proper spelling and pronunciation of a name. The emphasizing of the word "immediately" should prevent the practice whereby a substitute runs back to his bench for final instructions after he has reported to the scorer and has been signalled to enter the court.

Rule 9: This rule has received a much needed reorganization so that material which was scattered in thirteen sections last year is now in ten sections and related acts have been properly classified and grouped. The organization is improved and a number of last year's conflicts have been eliminated. Section 1 now lists all free throw violations except those which deal with illegal touching of the basket or the ball in the vicinity of the basket. The reason these particular violations can not be grouped with the remaining violations in Section 1 is that some of them also apply to a field goal and the penalty and dead ball provisions are somewhat different from those in Section 1. An illustration of the analysis and organization which has been needed for some years is in Section 3. In former years, these provisions covering the same type of violation were in scattered sections and some of them were omitted entirely from the list of violations. The whole rule has been greatly improved and further improvements along the same line are possible, if and when they are authorized.

Rule 10: Rule 10 could probably be improved by the same type of analysis and organization as was made this year for Rule 9. These possibilities should be considered during the season with a view to possible recommendations for next year's code improvements.

A Contest Managers Code of Ethics

As a contest manager, it is my duty to:

1. Set up proper ideals of sportsmanship and game conduct from the point of view of coaches, players, officials and spectators.
2. Eliminate all factors which tend to destroy the best values of games, such as delay in starting a game and players haggling with officials.
3. Stress the value derived from playing the game fairly.
4. Insure courteous treatment of visiting teams and officials by the spectators.
5. Promote a happy relationship between the visiting coach and the visiting players and my own group.
6. Cooperate with the Principal in securing competent officials whose integrity is unquestioned.
7. Thoroughly teach my players the rules of the game.
8. Act in the belief that "learning by doing" is good educational procedure and thus attempt to instruct each player to use his own brains and strategy in a crucial moment rather than to depend on someone on the sideline.
9. Constantly realize that athletic contests are to promote the physical, mental, moral, social, and emotional well-being of the individual players.
10. Provide intramural activities for all so that the entire student body is given the privilege of participation.

Merry Christmas

Two such simple words. Yet no other words can say the same thing better! To them we add three more, equally familiar words spoken to convey a meaning no other phrase fulfills. Happy New Year. And in saying that little, we say a lot—for we express every good wish it is possible to have for your immediate enjoyment of the yuletide holiday—and for your future good fortune in the year to follow!
