The Dizney Building

Mentor: Dr. Gay Sweely, Art & Design

This semester, I have been collecting photos of the construction process that, in the end, brought the EKU campus a beautiful building called the Dizney Building. This project is intended for the UP Showcase that Dr. Gay Sweely presented to the class as an opportunity to participate in an exhibition concerning our research for U.S. Art History, ARH 498, this semester, researching campus building styles at EKU. In researching this building, that is quite young on this campus, I found out that it was named after an Honorary Degree Recipient named Donald R. Dizney. He was noted as greatly contributing to the health care in this region.

The building is primarily used for teaching and providing the means for health students to understand their field of health care better. The departments that are housed in this building are the following: the Department of Clinical Laboratory Science, the Department of Emergency Medical Care, the Department of Environmental Health, the Department of Health Information, the Department of Medical Assisting Technology, and the Department of Occupational Therapy. As I listed the departments in this abstract, one can see how important this building adds services necessary to educate the community in this building on the EKU campus.

In researching the Dizney Building I found out that there are numerous departments that are highly important for the community to learn vital information. I intend to photograph the building artistically to show the evolution of how this building has impacted the land and the surrounding campus landscape, highlighting its beautiful architecture.
