

ninepatch: A Creative Journal for Women and Gender Studies

Volume 1
Issue 1 Awakening

Article 27

2012

Owning the Places

Marissa S. McNamara
None, mmcnamara646@yahoo.com

Follow this and additional works at: <https://encompass.eku.edu/ninepatch>

 Part of the Poetry Commons, and the Women's Studies Commons

Recommended Citation

McNamara, Marissa S. (2012) "Owning the Places," ninepatch: A Creative Journal for Women and Gender Studies: Vol. 1 : Iss. 1 , Article 27.

Available at: <https://encompass.eku.edu/ninepatch/vol1/iss1/27>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by Encompass. It has been accepted for inclusion in ninepatch: A Creative Journal for Women and Gender Studies by an authorized editor of Encompass. For more information, please contact Linda.Sizemore@eku.edu.

Owning the Places

Tonight, as I climb into bed, I see my legs, winter white, but okay for 40 year old legs.
They're holding up.

My arms can take plates from the shelf, and my hands, well, they still do the job painlessly.
I think of Charlene at work, 33,

who died of a blood clot--complication from gastric bypass, the sadness with her own body that drove her to lie down on that table and be opened. And I think of my poet friend, the one who is skin and bone on purpose only fighting it and of the time she said I wish women could write poetry that celebrates their bodies. I think, now that my husbands are gone, now that there is no one to look but me, now that I take myself to bed every night, lie down with myself and greet myself every morning, I can look and say--

men have loved these breasts, these lips, the soft skin of my wrist, and more men will come,
but right now, I'm happy to take this body out on the town,

buy it dinner, maybe dance with it a bit, and I'm just as happy to slip these two white legs into bed alone and touch them where they meet.

Marissa McNamara is an English teacher at a two-year college in Atlanta, Georgia. She has been writing for 13 years. She credits her development of voice to Women Writing for a Change, a writing center in Cincinnati, Ohio, that focuses on the conscious feminine. Marissa work appears in publications such as RATTLE, StorySouth, and Future Cycle.