

ninepatch: A Creative Journal for Women and Gender Studies

---

Volume 1
Issue 1 Awakening

Article 13

---

2012

Helen Keller

Donelle R. Ruwe
Northern Arizona University, donelle.ruwe@nau.edu

Follow this and additional works at: <https://encompass.eku.edu/ninepatch>

 Part of the Poetry Commons, and the Women's Studies Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Ruwe, Donelle R. (2012) "Helen Keller," ninepatch: A Creative Journal for Women and Gender Studies: Vol. 1 : Iss. 1 , Article 13.
Available at: <https://encompass.eku.edu/ninepatch/vol1/iss1/13>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by Encompass. It has been accepted for inclusion in ninepatch: A Creative Journal for Women and Gender Studies by an authorized editor of Encompass. For more information, please contact Linda.Sizemore@eku.edu.

Helen Keller

Some things Teacher wouldn't say, but Helen Keller wondered, between bursts of finger and hand and grimace, about things she couldn't ask, for she recalled the white days of romps with the kitchen boy and knew that something dangled there. All her books, chaste classics carefully edited into Braille, had nothing explicit spelled out, and so now, as she waited in the cold foyer of some Great House, the temptation to touch hovered like a hummingbird in the room.
No one was there but the statue, man-sized, in a niche, a Greek athlete with ivy in his hair.
Her hands reached down, found the pedestal, the sandaled feet. She touched the ankles and the bunched calves. She cupped his knee, clasped the tension between heave and balance.
She leaned forward, held her forearms flush against each thigh, fingertips poised at the groin. Softly then, not to intrude, as if invited to touch a dear acquaintance's face, she set the heel of her hand against the stone curls,
and inch by incremental inch, caressed its shape.
Still unsatisfied, she bowed forward and, with her unimpaired tongue, touched the salty stone until the girl who spoke only water knew this element as well.

Donelle Ruwe is an Associate Professor of English at Northern Arizona University. She is Co-President of the 18th- and 19th-Century British Women Writer's Association and a member of the Annual Lion and the Unicorn Award for Excellence in North American Poetry committee. Her chapbook Another Message You Wish the Point of received the 2006 Camber Press Poetry Chapbook Prize.